TWA Jet Crash Claims 92 Lives

UPPERVILLE, Va. (AP) — All 92 persons aboard a Trans-World Airlines 727 were killed Sunday when it crashed into a mountain during a wind-driven rain storm.

The plane, TWA flight 514 bound for Washington from Indianapolis and Columbus, Ohio, sheared off tree tops and slammed into a rocky ledge near a secret U.S. government installation Sunday morning.

The three-jet aircraft disintegrated on impact, strewing bodies and burning wreckage over a wide area on the slope of Mount Weather. The 1,754-foot-high mountain is a foothill of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The plane's tail section later was found 100 yards below the summit.

John Reed, chairman of the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board, said it was impossible to say immediately what caused the crash. Investigators were to continue their search today for the cockpit voice recorder and other monitoring instruments that might provide clues.

TWA officials said relatives of the 85 passengers and seven crew members would be taken by bus today to a temporary morgue near the crash site to identify the remains. When search operations suspended Sunday, the remains of 22 persons had been found, officials said.

The Mount Weather crash was followed Sunday by the crash of a Northwest Orient Airlines 727 charter jet near Stoney Point, N.Y., about 20 miles northwest of New York City The plane carried three crew members and no passengers. It was on its way to Buffalo, N.Y., to pick up the Baltimore-Colts football team. State police said there was no evidence of survivors.

The Mount Weather search was hampered by driving rain, fog and winds gusting up to 40-50 miles an hour, the same weather conditions that prevailed in the area when the jet crashed at 11:18 a.m. EST.

The flight had been scheduled to land at 10:25 a.m. EST at Washington National Airport, directly across the Potomac River from Washington, when air-traffic controllers diverted it to Dulles International, about 45 miles northwest.

The diversion was ordered because Dulles had runways sited in various directions, National only has north-south runways.

The manager of Dulles, Lyster Davis, said weather conditions there were highly unusual.

"In the six years I've been here, a crosswind like this hasn't happened," he said.

The Federal Aviation Administration said there had been no unusual communications between the plane's crew and air-traffic controllers — "just the routine flight conversation."

When the Dulles tower lost radar contact with the plane about 11:10 a.m. EST local authorities were notified to begin a search. Two state troopers found the wreckage almost immediately.

Loudoun County medical examiner George Hocker, describing the difficulty of finding and identifying the victims, said: "For about half of the bodies, you can recognize that it is a human." He said the rest of the bodies were dismembered.

Near the crash site is a closely-guarded 85-acre government installation that houses an underground complex to serve as headquarters for the president and other officials in case of a disaster in Washington.

The crash severed the main underground telephone line into the complex. Government personnel on duty there at the time aided in the initial search efforts.

There were no Canadians on the partial list of victims whose hometowns are known.

Thanks for Waiting

Saturday's Quinte Santa Claus parade was billed as being the largest ever held here, with 129 units taking part. But the star of the show didn't appear until the end. But that didn't mean that the 90 minute or so wait for him was hard to take, as floats, bands and marchers entertained the crowds lining the streets before the jolly man with the beard and red suit passed by.

Sharp Advises Patience

NEW YORK (CP) — House government leader Mitchell Sharp told Jewish community leaders Sunday night that there is no substitute in foreign and domestic affairs for patience and negotiation.

He said the six years he spent as Canada's external affairs minister had led him to the conclusion that "the politics of confrontation threaten disaster to mankind."

At no time in the history of the world "has there been a greater need for political leaders, not of appeasement but of moderation, of conciliation and of peace.

"These are the true heroes, not those who speak stridently, who threaten violence and thereby make the headlines."

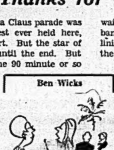
Sharp was the main guest speaker at the annual Stephen Wise awards dinner of the American Jewish Congress (AJC). The $150-a-plate, black-tie affair was attended by 800 Jewish community leaders from around the world.

The AJC Stephen Wise awards—bronze medals—were given to Charles Bronfman of Montreal and his brother Edgar of New York for leadership, in civic and Jewish affairs in Canada and the United States.

Edgar Bronfman is president of Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd. Charles is president of the House of Seagram—Ltd. Their father, The late Samuel Bronfman of Montreal, received the award in 1965, the late Rabbi Stephen Wise was the founder of the AJC.

Sharp, who became president of the privy council and government leader in the Commons in August, said that he had already answers to the Middle East and other international problems.

But he said the time he spent as external affairs minister before he was succeeded by Alan MacEachen "did teach me that international violence did not do much to help towards desirable change."



He also said that never before have the common problems of mankind been so overwhelming in their magnitude. He cited inflation, energy, food and violence.

The international institutions created in the post-war period played a useful role but their present malaise reflects the crisis of our times.

"No one contemplated anything like the present crisis when they were created . . .

Arafat's Men Blamed For Raid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli officials said two of Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah guerrillas made the latest terrorist raid on an Israeli frontier village, in which a Moslem factory worker was killed and his wife wounded.

There is a competition between Arafat and the other organizations over who will kill more Israelis. Defence Minister Shimon Peres said Sunday at the funeral of Sukbi Mansa, slain in the raid at midnight Saturday.

Peres promised the mourners at Ribaniya, a Moslem village near the Lebanese border, the government would do "everything possible" to end such attacks. Peres said Arab guerrillas attempted three raids that failed in the last month, and the Israeli military command said five Arab invaders were killed on the Lebanese border during the weekend.

The two gunmen who raided Ribaniya surrendered to Israeli soldiers an hour and a half later they knocked at the door of Mansa's cottage and riddled him and his wife with automatic rifle bursts when he opened the door. He was 37 and returned two weeks ago from military reserve service.

But the Canadian-born economist warned that "if you distrust enforcement of controls in people who do not believe in them, it is as if you put a hordello madam in charge of the vice squad."

Russian Spaceship Launched

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union today launched a spaceship carrying two cosmonauts, Tass news agency reported.

The spaceship, Soyuz-16, is manned by Anatoly Filipchenkov and Nikolai Rukavishnikov, both of whom have made previous space flights, Tass said.

It said the launch is part of the programme for the joint Soviet-U.S flight of Soyuz and Apollo spaceships in 1975.

The joint mission is designed to test out a system by which Soviet or U.S. spacecraft might be rescued by spacecraft from the other country should they become stranded in space. It also opens up the way to more ambitious joint projects in the future.

Equipment to be used next July, including special docking mechanisms, has been built by Soviet and the Soyuz together in orbit, has already been ground-tested. Teams of astronauts and engineers are exchanging regular visits.

But there have been undercurrents of doubt in the United States in view of past failures in Russia's manned space program.

Today's shot is seen as a proving and testing operation which, if successful, would allay many of these misgivings.

Snowfall Is Predicted On Three Days of Four

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Quinte area forecasters will need snow shovels at the ready this week. Snow will fall on three of the next four days, say weatherman at Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

A weather system currently moving up the Atlantic coast brought freezing rain to Prince Edward County and the western portion of Hastings County this morning. Three inches of snow are forcast for the Belleville area by tonight whipped by 20 to 40 mile-an-hour winds, said a CFB Trenton spokesman.

Temperatures today are expected to range between a high of 34 and a low of 27 degree tonight.

This weather forecast is expected to hold throughout Tuesday — cloudy, cold, a few light flurries with a high of 30 degrees.

The Atlantic weather system is expected to move past the Quinte area Wednesday with variable cloudiness and continuing cold temperature forecast.

Thursday will be marked by more snow and rain, the CFB Trenton forecaster said; "An cold temperature system, the snow will likely stay," he said.

Civil Servants Vote for Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Talks between negotiators for the provincial government and the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) failed to resume today after the group — representing about 20,000 provincial employees—voted Sunday 94.5 per cent in favor of going on strike Dec. 31 if the government refuses to meet its demands.

The vote, 10,220 to 540, also rejected the province's latest contract offer. The association is seeking a 41-per-cent increase in a one-year agreement while the government has offered increases of between 10 and 17 per cent in the first year of a two-year agreement and a flat eight per cent in the second.

Under provincial legislation, the civil servants are not permitted to strike.

Christopher Trower, negotiator for the union, said Sunday the government bargainers will be told their proposal does not meet the union's criteria for a settlement—a one-year term, a cost-of-living clause and the same percentage increase for all groups in the bargaining unit.

Southwest Ontario Has First Big Snow

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Southwestern Ontario was hit by its first major storm of winter Sunday, leaving the Windsor area covered by more than a foot of snow. Snow was expected to continue today as municipal elections are held across the province.

All major roads from Windsor were blocked and hundreds of motorists, many of them Americans returning home from Thanksgiving weekend holidays, were stranded on a 10-mile stretch of Highway 401 west of the city.

About 100 snowmobiles were used by police to rescue stranded motorists along the highway.

Detroit was hit even harder than Windsor by the storm. The National Guard in Michigan was activated to rescue stranded motorists on Interstate 94 near Ann Arbor.

A 300-car Canadian ship was one of the storm's early victims. The Jemaiver went down in gale-force winds on Lake Michigan early Sunday about 70 miles northeast of Milwaukee. The crew of 15 was rescued and there were no injuries.

For the first time since it opened in 1965, the Windsor Raceway cancelled its program Sunday night and a National Hockey League game between Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs had to be called off because of conditions in Detroit.

Michigan State of the World Hockey Association could not get a flight out of Detroit and their game against Cleveland Crusaders in Cleveland was also cancelled.

Windsor was without mobile telephone service and city streets were impassable with snowdrifts and marooned cars.

High winds and heavy, wet snow caused power failures.

Hospital to Expand Parking Facilities

Parking pressures at Belleville General Hospital will be eased by next year.

The hospital board has approved construction of a new 200-car parking lot for the east side of BGH property. Estimated cost is $108,000.

The decision ends more than a year's search for solutions to a long-standing problem that has frustrated both public and BGH administration.

The new parking area will extend onto neighboring Dr. and First St. where the hospital now owns residential property. Three house will be demolished on First St. and be parking space. Another south toward the CPR tracks behind BGH

It will incorporate an area which now parks 30 car and provide room for vehicles which now use leased public school board property at nearby Queen Elizabeth school. Net gain in parking spaces then will be about 110 spaces ultimate hospital officials.

Necessary preliminaries include zoning changes by city council.

But "all things being equal the site — paved and lighted — should be operational by next spring construction start, said Gerry Joyce, board property chairman.

A decision on whether the area will be manned by attendants or metered must also be taken, said Mr. Joyce.

The board's choice followed investigations started in mid-1973 for suitable alternatives to expanding about $250 a car. It also kept property open for any future long-range expansion.

Funds for the project will be provided by income from the Sills Estate bequest — $3 million-plus estimated received by BGH in January 1973.

Industry Needed To Offset Layoffs

A labor-intensive industry is needed in Belleville as a counterbalance to offset the city's labor force dependency of Northern Electric, says Doug Sword, president of the Quinte District Labor Council.

Ms. Sword made the comment Sunday in an answer to the effects of the recent lay-off of 148 Northern Electric employees in the last week.

"We need something to counterbalance this," said Mr. Sword.

He said it is difficult to determine what effect the layoff will have on Belleville labor in general but that on an individual basis "it is a catastrophe."

"I look at it from the employee's point of view," he said. "I think we have to look at it that way."

Mr. Sword said it will be "difficult" for the laid-off workers to find similar work with similar pay and benefits.

Due to a "softening of U.S. markets" the Northern Electric plant here laid off 148 workers for an indefinite period last week. All workers in the plant employed at the plant for less than a year.

Mr. Sword said the outlook for labor in the area "isn't that rosey." He pointed to the recent announcement of the Economic Council of Canada stating the country is experiencing a recession.

The council says Canada has seen a no-growth situation for the last six months and "the effects will be felt here," said Mr. Sword.

Belleville's industrial commission last week announced 42 companies are considering locating a plant in the city's boundaries with four prospects being "exceptionally strong."

In the last year, eight new Industries have set up in Belleville — a community considered by the provincial government as the fastest-growing urban centre between Montreal and Toronto.

"Hopefully we'll get a "labor-intensive industry which uses a lot of basic labor," said Mr. Sword. "... Something along the line of Northern."

He said this would also evolve more labor emphasis into manufacturing and away from the service industry. "Manufacturing jobs are decreasing while service jobs are on the increase," he said.

Couple Honored

A newly-married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Aurel Caisse of Trenton were honored with a presentation at the last meeting of the White Cane Club at the Recreation Centre last week.

Entertainment was provided by Oscar Nespoli's accordion group and children from Mrs. Helen Jones' class from Queen Victoria School. The pupils presented a play, Noah, written by their teacher and Rhonda Fus was announcer. Mrs. June Watson, music teacher at the school, led a chorus of pupils who sang for the club members.

The Gift of Giving

A special Children's Matinee was held at the Quinte Mall Cinemas on Sunday. Price of admission was a new or good used toy. The toys collected go toward the Belleville Professional Firefighters Local 497 campaign to help underprivileged children in the area. About 600 children filled the cinemas contributing so many toys that firefighters had to go out for more empty boxes to park them in.

Biggest Parade Yet Wows Kids

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

Santa Claus came to Belleville Saturday and brought with him such friends as Mother Goose, Snoopy and Peanuts and the gang from Sesame Street.

They were all part of this year's edition Santa Claus parade which, with 129 units was described as the largest ever.

Hundreds of children and adults, as well, lined city streets as over 70 floats, marching antique cars, bands and walkers passed by in the approximately 90-minute parade.

Something new this year was a float entered by the city's post office which was accompanied by letter carriers picking up letters from children along the route addressed to Santa Claus.

The Parade Marshall's Trophy was won by Kente Public School who also won an award for the Best Elementary School Float. Their entry was based on Sesame Street, the popular children's television program.

Winner of the "Warpy" O'Brien Trophy for Most Spectacular Float was St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with an entry marking the 100th anniversary of St. Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Best majorette group was the Picton High Steppers while Moira Secondary School won the award for Best Snow Queen Float (Post Elementary Educational Institutions).

Stephens-Adamson with their entry of Hoot, Toot and Whistle won the Best Industrial Float Award. Camilton Hi C was the Best Float by a young people's group.

In its first time out, 418 Wing Air Force Association won the Best Service Club Award. The Bank of Montreal won the Best Commercial Float award while the Best Out of Town Float was judged to be Sidney Township's entry.

The Belleville Public Library won the Best Public Service Float while the Highlands of Hastings were the Best Equestrian Group. Ray Wilson in a 1915 Ford Model T touring car was the Best Antique or Classic Vehicle Award.

Opening Night

Proof that it's never too late to begin a new career, Gord Davies poses by some of the most recent work he's done since becoming a potter three years ago. His bowls, plates and ten sets are exhibited here with some of his wife Audrey's pottery, grouped beneath a hanging by Diana Francina at the Corby Library Art Gallery's show of eight local artists' work.

New Art Exhibit Collage of Works

"There's never been a show like it in Belleville before!"

"You just don't know what you're going to see next."

"There are such strong pieces here. I don't like them all but I have to admit it's an exciting show."

Comments like these came from the opening night guests Saturday for the eight artists currently exhibiting their work at Corby Library art gallery.

The gala occasion was attended by over 150- friends of Dave Brockerby, Carol and Audrey Davies, Diana Francina, Tony Lasting, Lindsey Hallam, Howard Mandel and Linda Mustard.

Each artist prepared work creating while service jobs are on the increase," he said. technique or medium. Not all works were entered successful by the viewers, but the dominant impression was that the show as a whole is a great triumph.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey officially opened the exhibit by knocking the entry in the name of the people in the Quinte area.

"We have come searching for refreshment, for the beauty that lies within," she said.

"We will leave tonight richer in mind and spirit, happier human beings for having used these artists' eyes and hands to visualize the future ... to understand the wonder of God's gifts and His hopes for man."

Following the Mayor's speech, the gallery lights were turned and the audience saw paintings, weavings, photographs, mobiles, sculpture and pottery displayed in harmonious display around the room.

During the evening, Margaret Anderson's singing and guitar playing created an informal atmosphere for the relaxed conversations that took place over coffee and small cakes. Guests had an opportunity to meet and talk with the artists, who mingled with the crowd until the gallery closed at 10 p.m.

Most work in the show is for sale, and several pieces were sold Saturday. The exhibit will continue until December 21.

Oil at Issue

Where oil companies in Canada are concerned the word is that the profits are big. And yet there is mounting concern in the oil industry itself in the wake of the recent federal budget.

One oil company executive who has given voice to this sense of alarm is Gulf Oil president Jerry McAfee. The budget, says McAfee, will leave the industry at least a billion dollars less per year to spend on exploration and development. He points out that while Finance Minister Turner has said the new budget will release about $100 million to the industry, Ottawa's calculations do not take into account the effects of disallowing — along with royalties — a number of other payments to provinces which would have been deductible from income even under the May budget.

The Gulf president told a Toronto audience that it had not been decided yet which projects would have to be eliminated, or deferred. However, they had been considered necessary and the company was geared to carry them out.

Meanwhile, figures released by Statistics Canada indicate a decline in oil production of late. In September the country's refineries produced 48.4 million barrels of refined petroleum products, a decrease of 6.5 per cent from a year earlier.

The Ottawa report also indicates that in August Canadian oil pipe lines received 2.68 million barrels per day of crude oil, condensate, pentanes plus and refined petroleum products, representing a 10.3 per cent decrease from a year earlier.

What inference may be taken from this is not clear, but as figures relating to a period in the months just prior to the budget, it's not exactly encouraging. With the budget itself placing curbs on further exploration, things are that much worse.

Oil is a vital resource, any curbs placed on necessary exploration for new areas of domestic supply, will hurt Canada as a whole.

Keeping Tabs

MP Jack Ellis says that he and other MPs may be subject to RCMP security surveillance, to the extent that there are dossiers on them.

And this because of RCMP investigation earlier this year of remarks he had made on the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Solicitor-General Allmand now says that although the RCMP investigated Mr. Ellis, with regard to an allegation he had a classified document belonging to the UIC, it was found no offence had been committed and the case was dropped.

All this raises the question of just who is being investigated. It is routine practice of course for the Mounties to keep files on all sorts of people; this way they can detect any political trend in individuals and groups and get a picture of how it might affect the security of the State in any emergency.

This newspaper has had some slight experience along these lines. Some months ago a couple of mailings of literature on Cuba and North Vietnam arrived anonymously at this office. The only identification on them was the name of a North American union. The RCMP were interested.

The point national security is all about — keeping tabs on just about everything and, on a lot of citizens as well.

Chinese Probe

In the context of security a former editor of the Sunday Times, Richard Deacon, says in a book just published that an efficient Chinese espionage system may lurk behind the facade of some Chinese restaurants in Britain.

Deacon is quoted as saying the Chinese "have a quite astonishing detailed dossier on Prime Minister Harold Wilson, and claim to have confidential reports on at least 15 influential members of the Labor Party whom they believe to be secret supporters and informants of the Soviet Union."

Again this sort of thing is not surprising, especially since the Chinese government, according to Deacon, owns and runs at least one chain of restaurants in London.

U.S. View Of Trudeau Visit

Trade Problems Are Beyond The Depth Of Leaders Alone

By PETER RUCKLEY
WASHINGTON—(CP) — When Prime Minister Trudeau comes to Washington on Dec. 4 for talks with President Ford, the question of oil and meat are likely to figure high on the agenda.

But whatever accord the two leaders can reach on these two immediate problems—and they may not—the only thing disagreement both are faced with the conclusion that the issues transcend the ability of Canada and the United States to solve them entirely.

The ill-fortuit quotas on each other's livestock and meat exports come at a time of worldwide surplus in beef, with crucial markets in Japan and the European Common Market firmly closed to imports and cutting into beef traders' normal sales from their under-priced herds.

The oil problem has a similar scope, as Western industrial countries seek through conservation and diplomatic pressures to lessen their dependence on Arab oil at its current stubbornly high price.

Canada's decision last Friday to phase out Canadian oil exports to the United States has served mainly to focus American attention on an insignificant segment of its oil-import problem—in much the way that Foreign Secretary Samuel Johnson believed the prospect of the gallows "concentrates the mind wonderfully."

The White House aide Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford logging shared the view held in other countries that world trade problems have become too complex for patchwork solutions.

Both presidents have urged Congress to approve a bill giving them broad powers to negotiate with other trading countries.

The bill has passed some crucial congressional committees but still must be guided through the House and Senate. Legislation is the month that remains before the current Congress's session ended.

The influential Washington Post, making the connection of trade reform with current problems, suggested that the forthcoming Trudeau-Ford meeting is the "worst possible" forum for settling disputes on such issues as oil and beef.

Such trade "is only part of a world-wide market involving dozens of other countries," the newspaper said Monday in an editorial. In addition, a wider list of commodities would allow more room for manoeuvre.

But The Post said the World wide process of trade negotiations is "badly overdue" and urged Congress to go with the stalled Trade Reform Act.

"In the meantime, governments throughout the world are being drawn into angry, festering grievances over trade—of which the U.S.-Canadian beef and bacon war is the most recent and the most ludicrous."

The reaction in the United States to Canada's moves on both livestock and oil, as reflected in news accounts and editorials, has been generally free from hostile. Most reports have balanced the Canadian moves against the reasons for them.

Whether such a measured response reflects the average American's thinking is doubtful. Afflicted from all sides by bad economic news, from strikes and layoffs to inflation and shortages, the American public is more likely to view the Canadian actions as yet another blow at a time of deepening gloom.

Budgetary Dilemna

Price and Wage Controls Are Still A Possibility

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — Chances are we may see some weird and wonderful attempts at fiscal and economic strategy over the next while as government attempts to keep on top of extraordinary conditions.

Economically on this continent and in a lot of the rest of the world we have the combined threat of recession and inflation.

These situations, of course, are directly contrary to each other.

The classic method of meeting recession is to make money more freely available.

While with inflation the approach is for higher interest rates to cut down demand.

So actually what we are in is a damned if you do damned if you don't position.

Just how we are to manoeuvre out of this, and particularly when, has yet to be said.

In his federal budget, Finance Minister Turner appeared to be reviewing recession as the most immediate problem.

In this he was looking on the spectre of major unemployment.

But in the public mind inflation has been the most important problem to date, with unemployment just beginning to hit and there is a question of just how much more it will be willing to take.

It could help if government spending were cut down. But though there has been some lip service to this there has been little significant that has been done.

And as we have already seen when auto sales the two conditions tend to be inter-locking.

Inflation means high costs and this cuts down the market and unemployment begins to set in.

One probable result is that we will begin to hear some demand again for price and wage controls.

In fact, despite the apparent lack of success elsewhere, the Trudeau government this can already be heard.

Controls may be undesirable and perhaps ineffective.

But at least they do represent the one positive approach presently.

Otherwise it appears to be a question of just letting nature take its course and times of grief.

Russia And China Patrol Lengthy Frontier

By JOHN D. HARBRON

The world's longest defended border has to be the Sino-Soviet frontier through central Asia and Far Eastern Siberia.

On either side of these huge territories, once part of the empire of the Chinese Manchu emperors and stripped from them by the Russian czars, perhaps three million Soviet and Chinese troops face each other in constant readiness.

Through warm summers and bitterly harsh Siberian winters, the ones which sweep Soviet Asia and northern China from November to March, the armed might of the new empires of China and Russia watch each other, while ideological warfare keeps its pace in Moscow and Peking.

One says "new empires" because that's what the Communist Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and People's Republic of China still look like when we analyse their bitter conflict over ownership of much of central Asia and in the case of Manchuria, Chinese opinion that the rest of that part of the Soviet Pacific should be annexed to Manchuria.

The struggle is imperial not only because two empires are at stake, but because it was Russian czar and Chinese Manchu who began it, with the Russians spreading across Asia and Siberia as early as the late 19th century to lay claim to the kingdoms of indigenous Asian peoples and then to far Eastern Chinese territory.

The imperial Russian trade and military push to the Pacific coast was concluded at the end of the 19th century.

The czars took much advantage of a weakened imperial China as the Western powers were doing far to the south in seeking control of the major Chinese port cities and maritime provinces.

The Russian push into Asia was not unlike that of the United States across the west after the Civil War with major trading and transport interests in aggressive pioneering roles as the spearheads for settlement, and in both cases at the expense of local native societies.

What makes the present huge military build-up essential, is that Communist-China, now after her initial organizational phase, has made clear she still considers such Soviet territories as the maritime provinces next to Manchuria in which sits the major Soviet naval port of Vladivostok, and Ulan Bator in Outer Asia as historic Chinese regions.

The Chinese are very unlikely to trigger an Asian war to retrieve them, since China herself is very vulnerable. Her big and important province of Manchuria; seat of about 70 per cent of China's heavy industry, lies like an offending land grant deep into Soviet Siberia.

The Chinese may have more manpower and be closer to potential Asian battlefields than the Russians, but have neither the armor nor the means to take the initiative in any pre-emptive strike.

Both the Russians and Chinese have nuclear capability which has existed for decades. The very thin Soviet lines of communication across the immense vastness of Asia are still a vexing factor as it was in czarist times on the narrow thread of the Trans-Siberian Railway.

And China's internal transport system is still a scattering of inadequate roads, ill equipped to move heavy armor around and the back-up of supplies and parts which go with such major moves.

It's probably just as well for peace in Asia that these staggering logistics realities compel both sides to stare ominously at each other. Both sides know the horrendous geography of Asia against mounting any kind of sustained modern war.

Canadian Productivity Is Behind Britain Among Others

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The Economic Council of Canada has called for a careful inquiry into the problem of labor productivity—and Canadian labor and government would do well to respond to that call.

The council's credentials in this area are excellent. Representatives of labor and industry are evenly balanced in the council's membership, so that it can never be accused of anti-labor bias.

Much of the council's 11th annual review, just published, concentrates on the sacrificed economic problem of labor productivity—that is, the measure of output per worker.

While average wage rates in Canada have been increasing each year at an ever-faster rate, the annual improvement in productivity has been deteriorating. Last year's improvement was only 1.6 per cent, down one-third from the average annual rate for the postwar period—despite record spending by industry on new equipment that would normally be expected to upgrade the levels of productivity.

The Economic Council's figures show much greater improvement in the United Kingdom, Japan and other industrialized countries.

"Many personal and collective aspirations depend upon the continued improvement," the council says of Canada's labor productivity.

But it could have added that many personal and collective rewards are not at all dependent upon productivity. A steadily increasing number of wage settlements provide for large annual pay increases that are not related to any productivity improvements—which, at one time, were the justification for wage-increase demands.

The federal government currently being voted upon by Canadian railway workers, provides for a wage rate on an unprecedented increase of at least 21.8 per cent in wages and fringe benefits over one year. That figure includes a cost-of-living clause that fully protects the purchasing power of the workers' wages during the first year of the agreement.

While the contract is too complicated to summarise easily, component of the increase—1 per cent—appears to be the smallest component.

Some of the blame for Canada's sluggish productivity performance, must go to industry, for often it has failed to invest in efficient production equipment.

However, a recent survey showed that Canadian business plans to increase its 1975 capital spending by just over 30 per cent.

But another factor appears to be the unfavorable composition of the Canadian labor force—especially the rising ill at these numbers of young people, immigrants and others with little employment experience and inadequate training.

One step toward a solution of Canada's productivity problem—that is the problem of making employment more satisfying and rewarding—would be a much more determined effort by federal and provincial governments to provide worthwhile training in employable skills, and to encourage unemployment-benefit recipients to invest some of their otherwise idle time in such training.

That could be a more effective way of restoring economic growth than the pump-priming techniques proposed in the inflationary federal budget at Nov. 18.

LETTERS

Farmers And Economics

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In the issue of it paper there was a letter from Mr. Thomas Walmsley.

He stated that if consumers got in the country and had an abundance of food, then they should give farmers a fair deal.

Well, I'm a retired farmer in Hastings County.

Mr. Ellis, Eugene Whelan and Thomas Walmsley had better get their heads together and have a look at the mess they have made of this country. The farmer can only get a fair deal by the consumer's say, and like it or not, the working man is in a serious state of mind.

My father always taught me, you can't get blood out of a stone. I have found this good advice through my 74 years and want to pass it on to

Bayside Driving Hazards

Editor
The Intelligencer:

I feel that the main driveway to Bayside Secondary School presents an accident hazard to any motorist driving onto or along No. 2 Highway, because of the poor lighting system.

There are bends in the highway to the East and to the West, although the latter is a greater distance away. Thus the approach should have been constructed the same width as the highway. In its present condition, motorists turning onto the highway from the entrance are below the level of the highway and are unable to get a clear view of the immediate area. The same applies to those approached too quickly because motorists are unable to distinguish it clearly.

Furthermore, with the light system as only one side of the entrance, when motorists enter the driveway at the highway, they cannot always judge the distance of traffic. This is especially true when a person enters the school grounds for the first time.

When the school landscaping was designed the engineers should have taken more time to study the entrance and overcome the problems which have arisen. The school has already seen several accidents and I suggest steps be taken to remedy the situation before anyone is seriously injured.

Road Hockey Achievement

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

On Nov. 21 some very enthusiastic children started playing road hockey at 4.30 p.m. Their goal, to beat the World Record of 38 hours and 32 minutes. The game kept 12 of the children tired from lack of sleep and too much exercise until they quit after 50 hours of play. They were helped along by those who passed their goal by 13 hours. Congratulations kids for a job well done. May you all be long remembered for your effort.

They weren't playing only for fun though. They were also accepting donations, the proceeds of which will go to buy gifts for Christmas, for children who are less fortunate than themselves.

On behalf of all the citizens of Madoc I would like to thank all those who helped the children participated, I would like to take this opportunity to say thanks to Bob Quinn and his wife who were instrumental in the success of this children achieved. Also to everyone else who participated in one way or another. We will be paying encouragement, help, food and hot drinks.

These days we hear an awful lot of people saying "What is this younger generation coming to? What with so many drugs and the violence, I don't know what is this country going to turn out like?" Well to these people I'd like to say, "look around you, it's no worse than it was in other generations."

If you want to see good in young people you can always find it. These young kids of West Park Village achieved something Belleville can be proud of.

A VERY PROUD MOTHER.

Greater Spending On Defence Urged

OTAWA (CP) — The cabinet is under pressure from a lobby of militarists to ease the financial constraints on the armed forces, sources say.

The latest sign of pressure came last week when Brig.-Gen. E. A. C. Amy got publicity for a letter to cabinet ministers while Maj.-Gen. Bruce MacDonald went on television to say virtually the same things. Retain the tank in the forces.

A few opposition MPs, associations of armed forces veterans—including the Royal Canadian Legion—even some active servicemen also have spoken out against a situation caused by financial constraints.

The cabinet must decide whether the defence department should be freed from spending constraints that other departments face.

There is no evidence that Prime Minister Trudeau is giving in to the pressure and there is some evidence he is impatient with the military lobby for forgetting that the politician makes the decisions and the military carries them out.

Nor is there any indication that the government is swaying away from the decision made four years ago to get out of the tank business altogether because it had no role in the kind of air-mobile force envisioned.

Brig.-Gen. Amy, former director general of land forces, said in his letter to cabinet and other MPs, that removal of the tank would mean that the forces would no longer be capable of responding to a variety of situations with which they can now be asked to cope.

"It seems that removing the tank from the land force would make as little sense as ordering the navy back to sail or taking jet aircraft away from the air force."

Maj.-Gen. MacDonald said the last Middle East war showed the necessity of having a co-ordinated force of artillery, infantry, air and armor.

Canada now has in excess of 200 Second World War Centurions either in this country or in Europe, only a few of them refitted to help them along until 1976.

Among other things, the cabinet is considering a land forces policy review which deals with tanks.

Gen. Jacques Dextraze, chief of defence staff, has proposed the spending about $200,000 on reconditioning each Centurion to ensure relatively good tanks for between a quarter and a third of the cost of a new vehicle.

Government Outlays Linked to Inflation

MONTREAL (CP — Strong links ex'st between increasing government expenditures and the current inflationary situation, says a report prepared by the Canadian machinery and metal fabricating industry.

The report, tabled Sunday at a national economic outlook conference, recommended the Economic Council of Canada, sponsor of the conference, "give high priority to examining the impact of high-growth government spending on inflation."

Such work should be assigned to an independent Canadian research organization "which should make specific recommendations to reduce this growth."

The study also recommended more effective use of existing government fiscal and monetary policies and specific rather than general measures to cope with cost-of-living increases.

"Stronger fiscal incentives to increase domestic personal savings so that more funds will be available to Canadian investments" was one such measure designed to ease inflationary pressures.

"Crafts are an integral part of our culture." he said.

"There are absolutely no Hong Kong or Taiwan imitations of native craft," emphasizes Mr. Maracle describing his stock.

The storekeeper can relate the history of each item offered for sale and enjoy showing native life and legend with customers.

Santa's Arrival Delayed in Trenton

TRENTON — Santa Claus will be arriving a week later than usual in Trenton this year, parade officials say.

But the white-bearded gentleman will be arriving, says Robert Bell, Trenton's Santa Claus parade chairman. He explains this year's parade along the one-mile Dundas St. route was rescheduled for Dec. 7 so it would not interfere with Belleville's Christmas harbinger.

Next Saturday's parade is shaping up well, says Jack Wilson, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, the parade sponsor. Five bands, all from the immediate Quinte area, will be marching.

All the judges have been chosen, and between 30 and 40 entries are expected he said. Judging will be made in the band, majorette, float and horses categories.

Besides the change in date, says chairman Bell, there is another departure from parades of previous years.

There will no longer be throw aways — items such as candy canes, given parade participants toss out to on-looking children.

"There were too many near-accidents," says Mr. Bell. "They just mob everyone who is giving away something."

Officials are hoping the weather for the 1:30 p.m. Christmas parade will prove to be more hospitable than it was in 1972.

It rained throughout, says Mr. Bell, adding that didn't seem to dampen the spirits of on-lookers. However, it played havoc with decorations on floats, turning them sodden.

Garage Damaged

Firefighters took close to an hour to extinguish flames in the garage used for storing scrap metal.

Officials said fire started in a wall of the garage, thereby forcing firefighters to rip metal sheeting from the wall to reach the flames.

Lampoon Puppets Here Dec. 10

The Toronto — based puppet show will be performing at Trenton Memorial Library Dec. 10. Staring time Tuesday is 4 p.m.

Originally formed by Johan and Allison Vandergun in late 1972, the puppeters have performed at the Factory Theatre Lab, the Royal Ontario Museum and the St. Lawrence Centre, all in Toronto.

This month's show in Trenton, Clowning Around, is geared to the Grade five to Grade eight age group. Two hours in length, and based on the antics of two clowns at the circus it will be without dialogue. A Dutch street organ will take the place of the dialogue.

The two founders of the troupe have held numerous workshops to demonstrate their work with puppets. Johan Vandergun, originally from the Netherlands, is a designer-craftsman, while his wife, Alison, studied fine arts and drama at the University of Guelph.

Canoe Taken From Cottage

TWEED — An outboard-a canoe valued at $175 from the front lawn of his property Sunday. Bob Brooks of Marmora reported the theft at 6 p.m. Sunday from his cottage on the Marble Point Rd. in Marmora township.

Madoc provincial police also investigated an accident Saturday evening in which a car went out of control on the Foundary Line Road 3½ miles west of Hi-hway 62. Joyce A. Kiley of RR 4, Stirling was driving the car when it struck a bank, causing $1,000 damages. Neither the driver or three passengers were injured.

Jones Named Treasurer

TWEED — Heath Jones, a Tweed accountant, was appointed clerk-treasurer of this village Thursday night at a meeting of council.

He replaced G.D.C. Morton, who will have completed 50 years of service as village clrk-teasurer Dec. 31. Mr. Jones will take up his duties Jan. 1.

Miss Marjory Thompson will continue as deputy-clerk-treasurer, a position she has held for six years.

Station Entered

The thief or thieves smashed a window to gain entry and took—or pair of tires valued at $80 and $20 in cash.

The break-in occurred between 11:30 p.m. and 11:45 p.m. when the station was closed briefly.

Birthday Plans Council Topic

The Quinte District Laber Council will meet in the Engineer's Hall Tuesday to discuss Belleville Centennial plans.

Doug Sword, the council's president, said plans are in the works for a special labor project in conjuction with the city's centennial in 1978.

Mr. Sword said it is premature to announce what the plans include, only that they are "ambitious".

General membership will also discuss several donations to be made to Salvation Army posts in the Quinte district — a major portion of the labor Council's Christmas program.

Earlier this month the labor council passed a resolution to provide a Christmas food hamper in conjunction with Belleville Central Volunteer Bureau. This aspect of council Christmas goodwill is being handled by Jim Wiseman.

Oil Boom Brings Problems To Scotland's Poor Highlands

INVERNESS, Scotland (Reuter) — A few years ago the stillness of the Scottish highlands, when even a small boy's whistling might be frowned on as godless, seemed an unchanging as the Scot's kilt and bagpipes.

Sleazi at night serving the steam graves near here of the clansmen who died fighting to return the Stuarts to the British throne in 1746 and you would have been surrounded by impenetrable darkness.

But now the clouds over Moray Firth are lit at night by the glare from the arc lamps of the two coastal sites where giant production platforms are being built for the North Sea oilfields. Work on the rigs goes on 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

North Sea oil promises to bring unprecedented prosperity to the highlands, by traditional economically depressed, bled white by two centuries of emigration from barren moors and glens. But it also is imposing strains on the social and cultural patterns of the region and threatening the natural beauty of landscape that so far has almost escaped the blight of industrialisation.

A Church of Scotland official said that local schoolgirls were turning to prostitution following the influx of high-paid oil workers into the highlands. Rev. Keith Steven, head of the church's moral welfare committee, said that drunkenness and gambling also had increased.

The problem is aggravated by the conditions under which many of the casual oil workers live. Accommodation near the platform fabrication site at Nigg on Cromarty Firth is so scarce that hundreds of workers are sleeping aboard two Esso tankers off the site.

Housing is a major problem throughout the oilboom region. The rush of oil-related work to the highlands fits neatly in with the government policy of reversing the flow of migrants from the cities. But local authorities cannot build nearly enough houses to meet the demand from the incoming work force because so many construction workers and local tradesmen have left to earn big money on the rigs.

This radical change in employment patterns worries some far-sighted highlanders. They are concerned with what will happen in the mid-1980s when the major part of the investment program in North Sea oil may have been completed.

With most of the rigs and on-shore support facilities built, what happens to the construction force? Will farm hands who quadrupled their wages overnight be going to the oil" be content to go back to the pine in 10 years' time at their old wages? Will North Sea oil prove only a short-term blessing? Will the South leave the countryside depopulated and the local work force disrupted and disoriented?

Various government agencies like the countryside decies conscious of this problem, are trying to ensure continuity of employment in the highlands after the oil boom tapers off by encouraging industrial development that would not be directly dependent on oil.

They are paying subs: nidal grants to companies prepared to open factories in the highlands. One such development, for a $345-million oil refinery beside the platform construction yard at Nigg, is at the centre of a controversy which spotlights many of the problems involved in highland development.

Most people in the area and the local planning authority, seem to want the refinery, subject to rigid conditions to prevent pollution and limit damage to the landscape. They believe that some degree of ugliness, smell and noise is a price worth paying for the money the refinery would inject into the local economy and the 320 jobs it would create.

Local residents who want to block the development say the refinery would drive away tourists, mar the beauty of the firth and threaten with pollution a coast rich in wildlife.

They calculate that, with the British government meeting the British government meeting capital cost in development grants, it would cost the taxpayer $198,000 to create each new job. The same investment in light and medium industry would create far more jobs, they said, and do far less harm to the environment.

Their most contentious argument questions the economics of the U.S. money behind the project. The refinery would be built by Cromarty Petroleum, a subsidiary of National Gas Carriers, a U.S. firm. Opponents of the refinery say it would not process North Sea oil from its own doorstep but would instead import Middle East crude, refine it and ship it to the United States.

They say in effect that the British taxpayer would be subsidizing a U.S. company to carry out on Scottish soil an activity and industrial process that would be of only marginal local benefit. It has not escaped notice here that the U.S. environmental lobby has mounted a campaign to block the building of any more refineries on the U.S. Atlantic coast.

A Cromarty Petroleum spokesman, disputing the environmentalists' objections, said that the benefits of the project cannot be assessed just in terms of the number of jobs created but must take account also the millions of pounds the refinery would pump into the local economy each year.

Wide Variation Is Found In Views on Court Reports

OTTAWA (CP) — Should names of persons charged with minor offences be published by newspapers before they are tried?

There are sharply-differing views on the question among individuals, among concerned organizations and even among newspapers themselves.

The Press Council, set up by eight daily newspapers in 1972 to deal with complaints from the public and act as an independent watchdog over their professional and ethical standards, has been considering the issue for two years.

It now has issued a 29-page booklet setting out varying opinions and practices on the matter; it also calls on readers to add their views and join in what it calls a public dialogue. The council itself has no power to enforce any conclusions it might eventually reach.

Nevertheless, the question is one that has long been debated. As the booklet says in a foreword:

"What is involved is nothing less than a clash between two civil rights—the public's right to know and the individual's right to be considered innocent until proven guilty."

In a canvass of its eight sponsor newspapers, the council discovered that several are more lenient charges as general policy but that all insist there must be freedom of editorial judgment as to newsworthiness.

William Heine, editor of London Free Press, argues that "justice must be done in the open, including the laying of charges and the appearance in court at any time of any individual."

"Failure to do so," he writes, "would put in the hands of the police the potential to arrest a person, charge him with a crime in jail and neglect to notify anybody that an arrest had been made."

While The Free Press generally restricts itself to charges involving jail punishment, Mr. Heine observes that it is prepared to be convinced that the truth be put before the public than that magnified rumors circulate.

Gordon Bullock, executive editor of Hamilton Spectator, asks, who is to decide what is a lesser charge? Different people would take different views on the relative seriousness of an offence.

"We can't be adds, "that yet found a way to calculate damage caused by publicity in these matters against the good the press serves by informing the public."

"The prospects of saying to a criminal, 'You've been a bad boy but we'll keep it quiet until after we've decided what to do with you—if then' is alarming."

Martin Goodman, editor-in-chief of Toronto Star, agrees there is difficulty in defining a lesser offence. A purse-snatching might be one, but a theft of them would be of serious concern to the public.

"The first principle to apply . . . is the public interest," he writes. "It is of paramount importance that justice be seen to be done in public. . . .

"If suppressing names becomes a general practice rather than an exception, it will inevitably lead to a public belief that fear or favoritism is involved, even in the handling the administration of justice into disrepute."

Among two organizations dealing with the rehabilitation of convicted persons, there are divergent views.

Phyllis Haslam, director of the Elizabeth Fry Society of Toronto, is against the reporting of names on the ground of damage done to members of an accused's family.

A. K. Cowie, executive director of the John Howard Society of Canada, says:

"Under the existing court system, it does not seem valid to suggest that lesser criminal offences should be reported. Would it be fair not to report a minor theft by a person in a position of trust and be permitted to report the theft of a car by a socially disadvantaged youth?"

A. Alan Borovoy of Toronto, general counsel and chief spokesman for the Canadian Civil Liberties Association, also favors publication.

"This practice risks the unwarranted injury of personal reputations," he says. "But on the possibility of publication serves as a continuing safeguard against abuse by officialdom and, on balance this impresses us as the more weighty consideration."

Two lawyers prominent in the Canadian Bar Association disagree with each other.

Morris C. Shumiatcher of Regina, chairman of its Civil Liberties Section, says pretrial publication of names can work great hardship on the accused.

Morris Manning of Toronto, chairman of the criminal justice subsection, says that in general no rights of an individual are infringed by the practice. He adds it affords some protection against arbitrary arrests.

Aid to Poor Nations Often Creates Problems

VANCOUVER (CP) — If wealthy countries thought before they gave money to developing nations, their aid wouldn't create more problems than it solves.

Yves Bajard of Vancouver, an expert in water resource management who earlier this year spent a month in Ethiopia as a consultant for the Canadian International Development Agency, says rethinking aid can do a lot of damage.

"We have been playing the elephant in the china shop," he said. "It's high time we gave more thought to the kind of assistance we give. The solution is not to stop trying, but to try to be more far-seeing."

Mr. Bajard said Dr. Aswan Dam was an example of a well-meaning but environmentally disastrous project.

"Life in the Eastern Mediterranean has been changed because of a lack of nutrients from the Nile, and irrigation projects in parts of tropical Africa resulted in widespread water blindness—because nobody thought of controlling the flies that spread the disease.

"In effect, we have created an evil, which the people could have done without."

Mr. Bajard, a landed immigrant in Canada, works as an executive engineer. He left last month for Kenya, where he will be working on a feasibility study on co-ordinating urban and industrial development. En route was a stop in Berlin, where he was invited to attend a Club of Rome conference on world population projections.

He said foreign aid is often in the form of selling products without an assessment of whether they are needed or not.

"Sometimes we give assistance without really knowing whether the people we are trying to help will be able to use what we give them," he said.

"We might give electric or diesel pumps, but when the pumps break down nobody knows how to repair them.

"This way you are giving water for six months or several years, or whatever, and then when the people are really used to having water—pop—they're suddenly without, and worse off than they were before."

He said attitudes are beginning to change.

"We are beginning to take much more care and trying to provide simple technological devices, rather than sophisticated equipment which needs oil and maintenance."

Quinte Cuisine

Alma Gassenbeek says she finds herself more and more interested in nutrition and that making yoghurt at home has become an interesting adventure. Mrs Gassenbeek, the mother of Lisa, 12, and Jonathon, 4, is married to Len and lives with her family in Bayside. A retired public school teacher, she has devoted herself in recent years to weaving and macrame which she teaches through Loyalist College Extension.

Yoghurt

three cups dry instant powdered milk
one tsp. gelatin
one tbsp. granulated white sugar one 16-oz. can evaporated milk
four tbsps. fresh yoghurt

Prepare the yoghurt at bedtime, it'll be ready for breakfast.

Preheat the oven to 275 degrees.

Soften the gelatin in two tbsps. cold water. Add the sugar, and then add enough boiling water to make one full cup. Set aside in a large heatproof bowl.

Mix the dry milk powder with two cups cold water. Add the gelatin mixture, then the evaporated milk, and then two more cups of tepid water. Mix well, and blend in the fresh yoghurt. Cover the bowl, and place in the oven, then turn the heat off. Leave the bowl for eight or 10 hours, or overnight.

This recipe makes two quarts. Refrigerate the yoghurt left over from breakfast. Use it with fruits, cereals, or as a substitute for sour cream.

LaLeche League Fosters Breastfeeding

By SHARON ARSHART

Bev Bastable says that just a few years ago — when her son was born — she was very turned off by the idea of breastfeeding.

"I don't know what it was — maybe the mystery of the whole thing. Anybody I'd ever known who was breastfeeding would just suddenly disappear from the room for an hour at a time. It seemed strange."

When Bev and Vern Bastable — then residents of Manitoba — decided to have a baby she set about finding out all the best things for her soon-to-arrive son.

"I found out everybody thought breastfeeding was the best thing but I sure couldn't find very much information ... the only things I could find were published by the formula companies.

"They said things like 'sure mother's milk is best but nobody really wants to nurse to use our formula'," Bev says.

Then Bev discovered the La Leche League.

Just beginning in Winnipeg at the time, the league — pronounced la-lay-chay — is an organization dedicated, simply, to mother-to-mother contact with a major emphasis on breastfeeding.

"We believe in good motherhood through breastfeeding," Bev explains.

When I was nursing Vern I got static from relatives and friends — saying the league really made a difference."

Information, advice and plain moral support are the advantages Bev found at LaLeche and are the reasons that now, with two children past the nursing stage, she's still an active member.

In fact, when the family — now including 18 month old Erin — moved to Bloomfield from Winnipeg, Bev became the driving force behind the formation of a local chapter.

Now in its second month, the group meets in a Belleville home.

At the meeting topics like "the family and the 'breastfed baby'" and "what to expect of a nursing baby" and problems like sore nipples are discussed.

Other related and unrelated mothering topics are discussed, too.

"The league isn't a teaching experience ... just a sharing.

"When I come home from a LaLeche I feel like I can be a better mother."

Prenatal mothers, nursing mothers, mothers of children past the nursing stage are all welcomed to the group. Any woman, in fact, who's interested in breastfeeding is invited to join the non-profit organization. New mothers at Belleville General Hospital are given a LaLeche pamphlet.

Support, Bev Bastable says, is the main thrust of the group, because the community at large often doesn't provide approval or information for the nursing mother.

"Our mothers were brought up in the bottle era and don't provide a lot of help. That's why we welcome grandma's, too."

Old wives tales — like 'you can't nurse if you're nervous or small-breasted or active' and lack of encouragement from mothers and doctors are the main reasons women don't consider nursing more seriously. Preconceived ideas about convenience also interfere.

And many fear unattractive breast changes.

"You can nurse discreetly almost anywhere," Bev says, "it's very convenient, breast size doesn't matter and most of all it's just best for baby."

For information about the league or breastfeeding, phone Mrs. Bastable at 393-3069.

Dowage Empress of Chic

Holt Renfrew and Company Ltd., 137-year-old Montreal-based specialty shop, is still providing it's customers with the prime rib of chic and in 1975 will have 24 "speciality shopper" from coast to coast. Directions of the British Royal Family have bestowed upon the store the special appointment of "furriers-In-Ordinary" and an early advertising print gives Holt's idea of what the well dressed women was wearing way back when. (CP Photo)

By Appointment to the King: Canada's Chic Shop

MONTREAL (CP) — It stands imperiously on Montreal's fashionable Sherbrooke Street, the famous store's windows beckoning the shopper with what the haute couture houses of Paris and Rome are calling THE LOOK for spring or fall.

Through it all, however, the dowager empress of chic remains — across and future testament to the credo that high fashion still is alive and selling despite high costs and the current trend in the fashion industry for dressing down.

Holt Renfrew and Co. Ltd., the store some people refer to as the "Bergdorf Goodman's" of Canada, still is providing its customers with the prime rib of chic and marketing elegance has apparently paid off. In 1975, the store will have 24 "specialty shoppes" from coast to coast.

To the often-heard lament that the world of haute couture is dying, its impeccably-tailored Lenard Sharick, Holt's president, casts a knowin' eye on bein-to-be-hotness-a-long-time look, glances up from behind the enormous desk and shrugs.

"Fashion emanates from lots of places and as long as people are interested in looking good and willing to buy top-quality merchandise their haute couture will remain — and prosper," he says.

Mr. Sharick, who has guided the corporate fortunes of Holt's since 1967, is also optimistic about what he calls a welcome trend toward "casual dressing."

"Sure you'll always have the Beach Brothers suit and the Dior dress but nowadays people can look like a million dollars in a pair of blue jeans and a sweater. It all depends on how you put it together.

"Success for us has meant giving people what they want and trying to be there with the look first."

People it seems are still interested in forking out the few extra bucks, despite the dollar squeeze, to grace the cocktail circuit or the luncheon club in a Jean Patou or a Marc Bohan.

Holt's reputation for exclusivity in presenting the season's high fashion "firsts" to Canada began more than 25 years ago when then-president Alvin Wardell made a "discovery" fling to Europe. In Paris, he met and signed Christian Dior to an exclusive contract. Holt's signed Montpelyte Yves St. Laurent and much of the rest is history.

The 137-year-old Montreal-based specialty store still is the oldest customer at the House of Dior and it still tries, and most often succeeds, in being on top with that exclusive design.

Four generations of the Royal Family bestowed upon the store the special appointment of "furriers-in-ordinary," the accolade coming from Queen Victoria in 1858, Queen Alexandra in 1901, King George V in 1910 and the late Prince of Wales, Duke of Windsor in 1921.

In 1967, Holt's was selected to create and make a coat of Labrador mink as the official wedding gift from the Canadian Government to then Princess Elizabeth.

Holt Renfrew's history began in 1837 when William Samuel Henderson, a wily Irishman, landed on the frontier shores of Quebec City with a small collection of men's hats and caps. The Canadian pioneers, it seems, were ready for a taste of the continental good life and Henderson's business prospered.

By 1930, the original firm was big enough to emerge under the new corporate name of Holt Renfrew Company Ltd. Today the Holt's chain is owned by Broadway-Hale, a major U.S. merchandising corporation.

And despite the constant changes in the face of high fashion, Mr. Sharick says haute couture continues to trickle from the well-springs of the traditional fashion houses of Paris and Rome.

"Most fashion still originates in Paris," says Mr. Sharick, who himself makes three or four jaunts to Europe each year.

Holt's staff of 20 buyers makes anywhere from 60 to 70 trips yearly across the Atlantic to gauge exactly what is "chic"stable" and order the fashion goodies for Canada.

Mr. Sharick denies the store is merely a shopping ground for the rich and superchic.

"Sure we have our carriage trade and that's important but we wouldn't be anywhere without that great broad middle of our customers who buy medium-priced items."

Lest anyone think that the store's reputation for elegance is about to be compromised by its expansion, Holt's president replies:

"Our raison d'etre for being, if you like, is taste — and I'm competing on that — you simply refine it to a new level of excellence. It's really the simplest thing in the world." Naturally.

With Some Doctors IUD 'Losing Favor'

VANCOUVER (CP) — After 79 years, the Ishra-uterine device (IUD) as a birth control method is losing favor among patricians and doctors alike.

Although developers have promoted the IUD as being a far superior contraceptive to the diaphragm, some doctors now say flatly that it isn't so.

New York population control expert Dr. Christopher Tietze, who developed a program for evaluation of IUDs, has said that "as IUD is no more effective than a diaphragm or a condom, when these are properly used."

Vancouver physician Dr. William Seidelman of Reach Clinic says the emphasis in Dr. Tietze's statement is on the proper use of the diaphragm.

An increasing number of women are switching back from the IUD to the diaphragm, which has no damaging side effects, he said.

There's suspicion as hell of the IUDs," said Dr. Carol Herbert, also of Reach Clinic. "We make sure that women who want them are hyper aware of the dangers."

Dr. Fred Bryans, professor of medicine at the University of British Columbia and head of Vancouver General Hospital's obstetrics and gynecology department said women who are inexperienced in dealing with IUDs.

Perforation of the uterus is one hazard, Dr. Bryans said, and it is dependent on the skill with which the IUD is inserted.

"Doctors don't get much opportunity in years how to insert the IUD," he said. "Each case is different and a lot depends on the size and shape of the uterus.

"We can't teach every undergrad to insert IUDs. Students do graduate from University of British Columbia school of medicine) who have never inserted an IUD."

Although statistics are incomplete, the United States Food and Drug Administration estimates that nearly nine million IUDs have been marketed since 1968 in the U.S. of these, 2.3 million were the Dalkon shield device, which was taken off the market in June this year after being implicated in a number of fatal infections and septic abortions.

Canadian statistics on the actual use of IUDs are less complete than American figures, but distributers of the Dalkon shield said an estimated 127,000 units of that device alone were sold in Canada from 1970 until sales were suspended.

Dr. Herbert said she believes there is little difference in safety factors in various types of IUDs. "Variations on the shape of the IUD are strictly for sales," she said. "It's just like selling new cars.

"We still regard the IUD as an experimental device."

Dr. Seidelman said there is not yet enough available data on the Copper 7 and Copper T devices for physicians to evaluate their effectiveness, nor he seen potential hazards in their use.

A 28-year-old Vancouver woman who was fitted with the Copper 7 said in an interview she had such severe reactions to the device—severe cramps, hemorrhaging and infection—that her doctor removed it two weeks after insertion.

Another Vancouver woman, a 28-year-old registered nurse, said she suffered "terrible cramps and backaches—such terrible discomfort that I couldn't sleep," after being fitted with an IUD.

She said the literature her doctor gave her on the IUD didn't point out the danger signs or tell a woman to check with her doctor.

Dr. Bryans said how the copper IUD works is not well understood, but it could be because the copper may cause a chemical reaction and release of enzymes that would interfere with implantation of the fertilized egg. Or the local inflammatory reaction set up by the device may destroy the egg instead of the sperm.

He said the copper IUD has been designed to lower the conception rate and it appears to be a significant improvement, "but it still doesn't get rid of the hazards of IUDs."

See Bigger Profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Textile World magazine says anticipated record sales and profits in 1974 will give a powerful boost to the modernization of the U.S. textile industry. It says this year's sales indicate they will bring profits topping 1973's record $27 million.

Doris Clark 'Disabled' Driving Her Crazy

by DORIS CLARK.

Dear Doris: I am the wife of a man who has been on disability pension for five years. Our lives are torn apart by his bad temper spells. He has threatened to kill me, so he says that I am nagging him. Life has become unbearable for me I take a lot before I break down, but he is getting worse and I am thinking of leaving him.

My problem is that what last bit of money I have is tied up in our home. I own half of it.

If I left him before the house was sold, could he let the taxes go and let it be sold for taxes in about three years? He would be mean enough to do it.

Nervous Wreck.

Dear Wreck: If you are a co-owner and if the house were sold for taxes, you would receive your share of the sale price after the taxes had been deducted. I can see how your husband could prevent you from receiving the portion you are entitled to.

However, about this and the other questions raised . . . Doris, you had be t . . . to a counsellor at your regional welfare office. He will help you assess your situation before you strike out on your own.

Confidential to Unity: Drinking — too much of it — often loosens the tongue.

In your case, the boy friend drinks to forget how the other girl hurt him; and in addition he loses the physical discipline he has when he is sober. So he becomes romantic, remembering you and not the other one.

But since you can't keep him drunk all his life, you can see that alcohol is no substitute for right thinking, mature emotions and some consideration of present company. He should not be harping on an old heartbreak when he is with you.

It wouldn't do any harm to let him know this. In fact it might do him good.

Fiona first became a name to the British public through her articles in the monthly magazine Men Only and her involvement with one of the kings of the British nightclub scene, Paul Raymond.

Her column, in which she describes the sexual performance of men she meets on her travels around the world, is read in 22 countries and the magazine has a circulation of half a million copies a month.

"I read test men just like your road test cars," she says.

She made a television documentary with an African bishop earlier this year, called What the Actress Said to the Bishop, which won a gold award at the Atlanta Film Festival out of 2,000 entries from 22 countries.

She also stars in a sex comedy.

Fiona Richmond was born Julia Harrison, the daughter of a Church of England clergyman and vicar of the parish church serving a rural community in the eastern county of Norfolk.

She qualified for university, was advised by her headmistress to join the women's army, but tried instead to become an actress, auditioning unsuccessfully for several drama schools.

She is writing an autobiography which she describes as a comic sexual romp and would like to write children's books in the future."

Fiona 'Road Tests' Men

LONDON (Reuter) — Every Monday evening in recent weeks, Londoners have telephoned a minister's daughter to discuss their sexual problems on radio.

The weekly discussion program produced favorable ratings for London's only 24-hour talk station, London Broadcasting Co., but was just another string to the liberated bow of Fiona Richmond, a 25-year-old English girl.

Orillia Boy Is Injured In Home-made Bomb Blast

ORILLIA (CP) — Police seized explosives and literature on bombs and guerilla warfare after a 13-year-old boy was seriously injured in an explosion at his home Saturday.

Police said they seized 24 sticks of dynamite, six detonator caps, some chemicals and the literature from the homes of three juveniles, including the home of the injured boy.

Police did not release the injured boy's name.

Teachers Strike Today At Lakehead Schools

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The Ontario Secondary Schools Teachers' federation has notified the Lakehead Board of Education that teachers at all 19 city high schools will go on strike today.

W. J. Jerve, board superintendent, said all schools will be open "as required by law", but "students and parents may wish to use their own discretion" with regards to school attendance."

The 542 teachers in the federation recently submitted letters of resignation to the board to back demands for higher salaries, and have walked out at high schools at intervals during the past week.

About 9,800 students are affected by the actions.

Fellows Who Left Quebec Is Fun Society in Toronto

The group began in 1971 with three former Montrealers joining a fourth in the basement of his Toronto home for their first meeting to plot a way to keep the Montreal spirit in Toronto while poking fun at the Quebec terrorists, who as members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec were behind the Quebec crisis of 1970.

Now with 135 members including three women, the society meets every other month in a room at a social club.

Members wear red tuques symbolic of the Quebec habit, but but also meant to be a joke about the real FLQ's message which included drawings of an armed habitant with a toque, said Michel Labelle, club president.

While the club tries to create bonds between Ontario and Quebec, mainly "we just have lots of fun . . . The society will have lost its raison d'etre if it becomes too serious," Mr. Labelle, 28, said in an interview.

The society's anthem is The Park Bench reminiscent of an event before the club was founded. Ten former Montrealers returned to the city from Toronto for an executive club's annual charity ball in December, 1971.

They brought along a park bench from Toronto which "they bought or stole," said Mr. Labelle. "I don't know. It's still a secret."

The men stood the bench on its side, wrapped it and tied a string to the top to make it look like a firecracker, he said, poking fun at FLQ bombs.

He said meetings are held in English and French, and before flags of Ontario and Quebec, members drink toasts in Canada and old Upper and Lower Canada, the prime minister and the premiers of the two provinces.

Guest speakers are from Quebec, Mr. Labelle said, and are always witty because most members are businessmen who want relief from the serious meetings they attend at work.

He said the society had one problem when it began—some persons declined to join because they did not want to be associated with the letters FLQ which "made them shiver."

The group changed its name but members still are sympathizers who are on committees called cells.

Mr. Labelle said they plan to close membership when it reaches 150 because "we don't want to become too big and take it too seriously."

Bill For Burglaries

LONDON (CP) — Burglaries in the year 1971 cost Britain an estimated $461 million ($1.3 billion) or nearly two per cent of the national income, says a report published by the National Institute of Economic Affairs. The figure is made up of theft, losses, recovery costs and the expense of burglary prevention and insurance, but does not include fraud.

TOTALLY NEW.
TOTALLY BEAUTIFUL. TOTALLY TOUGH.

COMPLETELY RE-DESIGNED FOR 1975.

When we set out to build a new Toyota Corolla for 1975, we aimed our sights ambitiously high. We wanted to improve a car that had become one of the three best selling cars in the world.

And we did it in four ways. We made it more enjoyable to drive, more impressive to look at and even more reliable under Canada's harsh weather conditions. Surprisingly, we even managed to improve on last year's incredibly economical 1200cc and 1600cc engines.

The 1975 Toyota Corolla is slightly longer than last year's model. It has a longer wheelbase and a wider stance. It has more headroom, more legroom, more shoulder room and more room in the trunk. Even the gas tank is bigger.

We added more standard equipment to an already impressive list, modified the combustion chamber and changed the compression ratio to get even better performance from Corolla's rally-proven engine.

And we wrapped it all up in a tough little body that's also the most beautiful Corolla yet.

UP TO $412 LESS THAN PINTO.*

This price difference is based on the manufacturer's suggested list price for the lowest priced Pinto compared with the lowest priced Corolla, at the time of publication. We have 8 Corolla models for you to choose from. And our price includes many standard features which are either optional or simply unavailable on Pinto. Power front disc brakes, an electric rear window defroster and reclining bucket seats, to name just a few.

UP TO $412 LESS THAN VEGA.*

Again, we are comparing manufacturer's suggested list prices for the lowest priced Vega and the lowest priced Corolla at the time of publication. And keep in mind all the equipment that's included in our price which you might have to pay extra for on Vega.

MORE MILES PER GALLON.

Nobody knows exactly how many miles per gallon you'll get from any given car. But this much we do know. Toyota Corolla 1600 just gave 39.6 miles per Imp. gallon in the U.S. government-approved E.P.A. highway tests for 1975 models. Significantly higher than either Pinto or Vega.

MORE STANDARD FEATURES.

Even the lowest-priced Corolla has standard equipment built right into the car that either costs extra or you simply can't get on competitive models.

And, on some of our other models, you get a clock, tachometer and even a 5-speed transmission, all standard. (With 3-speed automatic transmission optional.)

WINTER TESTED IN CANADA FOR CANADA.

Canada's winters are among the toughest in the world. So we chose Canada as the location for testing the prototype equipment which is now standard on all the new Toyotas.

Our Corolla standard battery is bigger than some of our competitors' "heavy duty" models. Heavy duty starters, heavy duty windshield wipers and wiper motor are standard. The heater capacity is increased by 20% and there are wide heat ducts built into the rear passenger compartment.

A corrosion-inhibiting aluminized muffler and tail pipe is standard. And so is the corrosion-inhibiting paint treatment.

2 NEW SERIES.

8 model choices from 2-door, 4-door and hardtop models in our economical 1200 series or from 2-door, 4-door, hardtop, SR5 and station wagon in our peppier 1600 series.

1600 Hardtop 5-Speed SR5

'75 TOYOTA COROLLA

Today is the time for choosing a car on fact, not fiction. And the facts prove that our Toyota Corolla 1200 gives you more car for less money than any other popular small car.

Our price is lower than that of any other popular† small car. No comparable car offers the same amount of standard equipment at anything close to our price.

Corolla is a proven car. It's a best seller in over 140 countries. It has taken Canada's top rally team to four consecutive National Rally Championships.

Parts and components are tested and retested, checked and rechecked. Test cars are subjected to gruelling endurance runs. They are frozen, drenched and crashed. And they are driven under tougher conditions than you are ever likely to encounter.

Above all, we have the kind of pride in our product that has made us the third largest automobile manufacturer in the world.

Get to know us through the Toyota dealer in your neighbourhood.

Local Lions Earn B Championship for Second Consecutive Year

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Major Lion's Club Midget A hockey team is now in with their first game of the season against a Peterbo Minor Hockey Association AAA class club, but happened to the B Championship game of the Lions Midget Hockey Tournament, on Sunday, at the Memorial Arena.

The Lions went into a five minute overtime with the Peterborough Midgets and came out 4-3 victors. The win gave the local squad the B championship of the three-year-old tourney for the second consecutive year.

Burlington Warriors took tournament honors as the A champions. They downed the defending A Champions, Kingston, 5-3 in the final game.

Belleville has been playing in the same OMHA division as Peterborough all year and has not been able to beat them. For that matter, neither have they been able to beat any of the other teams in their AAA division, Oshawa and Kingston.

"Those are different in a tournament," said Lion's Coach Bobby Burrowes. "Winning the season the guys know that if they lose they can always try to beat them again in the next game."

"But in a tournament I think they know that they only get one chance," he added, "so, they make that one chance count."

Last season the Lions were just as predictable in tournaments. They won several championship, both A and B, but in the regular season action cards up empty handed.

This is the third match Belleville's OMHA teams have been participating in Triple A class hockey. Now that the Lions have beaten a AAA club, Burrowes feels things will change.

"They know now that with hard work they can beat the teams in their own league," said Burrowes, "I think probably they'll start winning a few games now."

It was an uphill battle for the locals as they fought back from 1-0 and 2-1 deficits in the first and second periods of the Championship contest.

"They came out kind of flat in the first period," said coach Burrowes, "it took them a couple of periods to really get going, but once they did the game was in hand."

Peterborough, by the same token, wasn't having their best game either, but still, they were able to take advantage of Belleville's slow start.

The locals fell behind 19 in the first period when Peterborough's Steve Lalonde scored. Both teams came on an even keel by the end of the ... baby they'd tied it with Clint Riendeau this third of the tournament). Pat McGinn drew the assist.

The two clubs traded goals again in the second period. Dave Tuckett tallied for Peterborough in the opening minutes of the period and in the dying minutes, Robb Chase connected for the Lions with assists going Sandy Waterson and Dave Eddolls.

Belleville skated all over Peterborough in the third period and, with a few breaks, could have had more goals than the one scored by team captain, Paul Hayman. Assists went Marty Lavery and Dave Giddings.

With just a few minutes left, Peterborough bounced back with a goal to again tie the score. This beat Cornwall in the semi-finals of "B" 3-2, before facing Belleville.

Burlington defeated Kingston 5-3 in the A final, but the game was never really out of reach for the Limestone City crew until the final minutes when the Warriors scored on an open net.

Kingston upended Brockville 5-3 in their tournament opener and edged Brockton-Whitby 3-2 in the second game before facing defeat at the hands of Burlington.

The Most Valuable and Most Gentlemanly Players Award of the tournament went to Kingston's Gerry Lyons. He also took the tournament's Most Valuable Forward Trophy.

Belleville Lions Club midget centre, Clint Riendeau, is held in front of the Peterborough net by defenceman Shawn Smith. Riendeau did succeed in getting rid of the puck to linemate Sandy Waterson who rebounded a shot to teammate Pat McGinn. The Belleville player put the rebound in the net for the winning goal in the B Championship of the Lions Club Midget Hockey Tournament on Sunday.

Burlington netminder, Peter Buttenaar, and defenceman, Peter Nesbitt, took the tournament's awards as the most valuable goaltender, in their respective positions.

"This was the most competitive tournament we've had yet," said tournament convenor Don Carey. "We couldn't have asked for better hockey than we got today."

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

Few people ever experience the pressure of having to stand on the foul line with only one chance to send your team to the dressingroom, winners.

Fewer people still, when called upon to make such a shot, sag able to remain "calm and collected" knowing that every pair of eyes in the building are on you.

Lynn made the shot that upset Belleville Collegiate Institute 46-45 in Bay of Quinte girls basketball finals at Centennial Secondary School.

It was, in every sense of the word, a heartbreaker for the BCI team as they headed back to tie up the game late in the final quarter. BCI at one point trailed Bayside 27-24.

The win by Bayside now entitles them to represent this district in the COSSA finals next week along with giving them their first Bay of Quinte trophy.

With 2:39 remaining in the game then first Bay of Quinte trophy.

With 2:39 remaining in the game and the score 43-40 in favor of the visitors Barb Graham of BCI was awarded two foul shots. She made both shots count putting BCI within one point.

Bayside came bounding right back as they scored another basket to make the score 45-43.

BCI again had their chances as Mary Mischenko was also given two free shots.

She made the first shot, but the second shot bounced off the rim right to teammate Sheila Walsh, who made no mistake in scoring the tying points.

Lynn was awarded one shot with a chance if she made the first. After making the initial shot she missed the second.

"It was just a hell of a game," was Bayside Secondary School's coach Terry Boyd's comment. A fact that no one would dispute.

The score reflects Sue's comment as BCI topped East Northumberland of Brighton, by a score of 43-25.

COSSA Finals will be held next Saturday at Kenner Collegiate in Peterborough.

Bayside's Mia Filpes, beats BCI's Mary Geen to the inside in Saturday's Bay of Quinte Senior Girl's Basketball final at Centennial Secondary School. Mia received her Ved Devil squad to an upset 46-45 victory over favored BCI team.

Brunswick 5-Pin Teams Win Series with Tweed

In a special home and home series with young bowlers from Tweed, Youth Bowling Council members from Brunswick Belleville Bowl got together a total pinfall of 19,080. Tweed's teams racked up a score of 18,115.

Barry Cassibo of Tweed came through with a 1-6 effort to take individual honors with a 886 triple. Barry's 319 was also an individual high but since the bowlers are not given awards for two events, he chose to take the trophy for his triple.

Brunswick bowlers took the other awards.

David Archer checked in with a 321 single to top that category. Cindy' high triple went to Cindy Neal with 667, and single, Sharon Curry, 273.

Saints Take Regiopolis Title

KINGSTON (Special) — Quinte Saints' Rick Bradford dropped a jump shot in the dying ... on the final buzzer of the game to give his team the Regiopolis Senior Basketball Tournament title in Kingston on Saturday. The Saints won the 16 team competition with a 43-42 victory over Kingston Collegiate Blues.

Loyalist College women's volleyball, the latest team to be formed there, came up with an impressive showing in their season debut.

Four teams took part in the year's opening competition of the regular season in the Eastern Division of the Ontario College Athletic Association, on Saturday at Loyalist.

Loyalist came out of the tournament in second place with five of a possible nine points. This is only the second year the local college has had a team.

In the first match, Loyalist met St. Lawrence of Kingston. The host team proved to be too tough for Kingston as they won all three of the games. Scores were 15-10, 15-7 and 15-12.

In the second mini-series, between the home team and the strong Algonquin team Loyalist did not fare so well, dropping all three games by scores of 15-3, 15-2 and 15-5.

Things did not go so well in the second game as Durham pounced right back with a 15-9 victory.

The Loyalist girls got back on track in the final game and despite losing five points, due to a player out of position, managed a 15-8 win.

The same four teams will hook up again next Saturday in Oshawa at Durham College for the second tournament of the season.

In other games Saturday, Algonquin swept Durham 15-7, 15-5 and 15-6; St. Lawrence defeated Durham 15-8, 16-14 and 15-11. In the final series, Algonquin blanked St. Lawrence 15-13, 15-5 and 15-4.

Four Goal First Kills Cats

BRAMALEA (Special) — The Belleville Bobcats had their winning streak cut short Sunday night as Bramalea Blues gained revenge for their loss in Belleville on Friday. The Blues won the second game of their home-and-home series with Cats by a 7-2 margin. Belleville leads Bramalea 7-5 in Friday's Metro Junior B encounter.

Bird's Settle For Tie

TRENTON (Special) — Trenton's Handy Stand Juveniles are still undefeated after 10 league, exhibition and tournament games this season. But the team can no longer put a win streak on the line.

In Sunday night Quinte-St. Lawrence League action at the Community Gardens here, Napanee Kelly Tiremen, after building a 3-1 lead in the first period, held Bird's to a 4-4 tie.

The long haul to the Victoria Park Arena proved costly for the Cats Sunday night. After the lengthy bus trip and 10 minutes of the opening period the Belleville team found themselves down three goals.

That was the story of the game. But the end of the first complete period left the Cats down by trailing 4-1.

Bramalea captain, Dan Walker, opened the scoring for the home club after 1:26 had elapsed. At 5:48 the Blues were in front by two on Wayne Hebert's mark and by the 8:24 mark it was 3-0 Bramalea on Steve Beasley's power play tally.

The Cats finally got on track and at 9:48 they got their first period Grant Keegan scored with assists going to linesmates Jim Richardson and Rob Foster. The three Cats veterans monopolized the Cats' score sheet on Friday night and Sunday picked up where they left off.

Bramalea rounded out the opening period's scoring with a goal at the 16:47 point. Dean Hartwell got that one.

The se... 1 period belonged to the Cats as they outshot the home team 18-12. Blues' goalie, Barry Oakes, once again proved his worth, as he limited the Belleville team to just one goal.

The Cats replied just minutes later...at 4:40, when Richardson converted passes from Gorgan and Foster.

In the third period the Blues added a power play goal at 1:39 and rounded out the game's scoring at 9:06. Walker and Dick Poplel scored those two.

Bramalea outshot Belleville 46-47 on the night, while the Cats took six of the contest's 10 penalties, totalling one of the two five-minute majors for fighting.

Hawks Win 3-0

North Stars Can't Produce On the Road

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"I can't figure out how a team can play so well at home and just die on the road," said Minnesota coach Jack Gordon after Chicago Black Hawks beat the North Stars 3-0 in a National Hockey League game Sunday.

The victory put the Hawks back in second place in Division II, one point ahead of the North Stars.

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia Flyers crushed Kansas City Scouts 10-0, Buffalo Sabres beat Pittsburgh Penguins 8-2, California Seals topped Washington Capitals 5-2, St. Louis Blues tied New York Rangers 4-4, The Toronto Maple Leafs played at Detroit and were postponed when the Red Wing players were unable to get to the rink because of a heavy snowstorm.

In Saturday's games, Minnesota beat Chicago 5-3, Los Angeles Kings thumped Boston Bruins 7-0, Detroit shut out Kansas City 1-0, Buffalo tied Pittsburgh 5-5, Toronto beat Washington 7-1, Montreal Canadiens defeated St. Louis 7-1 and Vancouver Canucks blanked New York Islanders 3-0.

"After the first period we kind of got the sad. "I thought we had some chances later on, but nothing we did was right."

At Detroit, officials had not decided on a date for rescheduling the game between the Leafs and the Red Wings.

Sunday night, though, it was a little difficult to keep the fellows interested. The Flyers had built a 10-goal lead over the Scouts entering the third period.

"Believe it or not, it was a hard game to coach," said Shero.

Bernie Parent picked up his fourth shutout of the year by stopping 22 Scouts shots while Bobby Clarke scored once and set up four others to spearhead the rout.

Rod Gilbert's second goal of the game came with 2:08 remaining and brought the Rangers even for the third time in the contest. The tie maintained New York's home supremacy over St. Louis.

Reese Robert made good on two of his chances and set up a third goal to lead the Sabres to their eighth straight game without a loss.

"It's a relief to win on the road finally," said California coach Marshal Johnston. "It will definitely give the team a lift."

Wayne Cashman

In for Repairs

BOSTON (AP) — Left winger Wayne Cashman of Boston Bruins underwent surgery Saturday to repair a ruptured disc in his back and will be out of National Hockey League play for six to eight weeks, the Bruins said.

"As far as we know right now, the operation was a success," said Dr. James Haddisen, who performed the surgery.

"A disc in Wayne's back had ruptured and a piece had broken off and was pressing against a nerve, causing severe pain."

The operation was on an area of Cashman's back that was injured in the 1972-73 season.

Cashman, a 28-year-old native of Kingston, Ont., has been one of the best all-star games but in 16 regular-season outtests, he had five goals and 11 assists.

New Owner in Winnipeg

Jets Celebrate with 3-2 Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Weather and front-office moves, or non-moves, dominated the World Hockey Association Sunday.

Winnipeg Jets officially obtained a new owner in a ceremony that was celebrated by defeating Quebec Nordiques 3-2.

Ben Hatskin, former president and co-owner, handed over the league franchise to Bob Graham, new president and head of the group of Winnipeg businessmen who organized a public fund-raising drive to purchase the team.

In Toronto, the WHA club owners ended their weekend meeting with the future of at least three franchises still clouded.

The session was described by league president Dennis Murphy as a "housekeeping" effort but rumors persisted that Chicago Cougars are heading to Baltimore and that Indianapolis Racers will change ownership or be taken over by the league.

The trustees also are expected to have taken measures to provide Montreal Stars with financial assistance if the team goes broke.

On the ice, Minnesota fighting Saints upset Cincinnati Roadrunners 4-3, Edmonton Oilers downed New England Whalers 6-4, Houston Aeros crushed Indianapolis 7-3 and Chicago Cougars stopped San Diego Mariners 3-2.

The Michigan-Crusaders' game was postponed when the Cleveland Stags were unable to fly to the stretch as Rich Preston, Ted Taylor and Jim Sherritt were left behind because of inclement weather.

In Saturday's games, Cleveland defeated Houston 5-4 and Chicago topped Minnesota 7-5. Indianapolis battled Houston 4-4 for a 3-2 tie before letting up somewhat slightly in the second period and suffering their 11th straight loss, a WHA record.

Houston took advantage in the first period. Forward Ron Climie scored once and assisted on two others as the Oilers in their impressive victory. Climie also found the Indianapolis goal.

Danny O'Shea stole the puck from Jim Watt. The goal came with both teams skating two men short in each period, as the Toros stopped San Diego The centre's last two goals were unassisted.

Weather Cuts NFL Attendance

Atlanta Fans Snub Falcons

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The 53-degree temperature and Atlanta's football fortunes combined to set an National Football League record for no-shows Sunday, factors that Falcons' owner Rankin Smith can understand.

"The weather was bad and the team is bad," said Smith when 46,203 ticket holders failed to show at Atlanta where the Rams defeated the Falcons 30-7.

Bad weather struck some other centres as St. Louis Cardinals, heading for the playoffs, lost 17-23 in Kansas city Chiefs, Houston Oilers downed Pittsburgh Steelers 13-10, Buffalo Bills edged Baltimore Colts 8-6, Cleveland Browns blanked San Francisco 49ers 7-0.

New York Jets stomped San Diego Chargers 27-14, Philadelphia Eagles knocked off Green Bay Packers 36-14, chicago bears edged New York Giants 16-13, Minnesota Vikings defeated New Orleans Saints 29-9, and Oakland Raiders demolished New England Patriots 41-36.

Despite a snfall of 52,723, only 18,802 showed up in freezing rain and snow to watch the Jets play the Giants on a last-minute field goal.

Only 14 seconds remained when Miro Roder kicked a 36-yard three-pointer. It was the fourth consecutive game the Giants lost in either overtime or in the last minute of play.

Cleveland's smallest home crowd ever, 34,526, turned out in the snow and sleet to see Ed Brown, starting his first game, snatch three San Francisco passes and lead the Browns to victory. The third interception led to the game's only touchdown, a one-yard plunge by Ken Brown.

QuarterBack Fran Tarkinton completed 19 passes for 318 yards as Minnesota thrashed New Orleans. John Gilliam caught five passes for 109 yards and two touchdowns.

Despite being, St. Louis Cardinals grabbed a playoff berth when Philadelphia stopped Green Bay.

St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart threw two interceptions which Kansas City turned into second-half touchdowns.

Houston limited Pittsburgh to 84 net offensive yards. The winning points came on Skip Butler's 34-yard field goal with 2:52 remaining. It was Houston's fifth victory in its last six games.

Quarterback Joe Namath and the Jets handed San Diego its 10th loss of the season. Namath saved the gusty wind and rain at Shea Stadium with 17 completions while Pembroke has 26 Nepean Raiders and Smiths Falls Bears at Gloucester 16 and Brockville 14. Smiths Falls, however, have a game in hand tonight.

The Lumber Kings were the only other team in action twice on the weekend, edging Smiths Falls 7-6 Sunday night after being beaten 63 by Nepean Saturday.

Traffic Jam In CJHL Race

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Back-to-back wins in the Central Junior Hockey League during the weekend have given Rockland Nationals a tenuous grip on first place in the six-team league.

The Nationals thumped visiting Brockville Warriors 8-4 Sunday night after trimming Gloucester Rangers, the host team, 11-8 Saturday.

Their double victory gave Rockland four points and snuiged them past Pembroke Lumber Kings, which won once and lost one during the week-end.

Rockland now has 25 points while Pembroke has 24. Nepean Raiders and Smiths Falls Bears are tied for third with 20 points.

Brockville 14, Smiths Falls, however, have a game in hand on the leaders.

The Lumber Kings were the only other team in action twice on the weekend, edging Smiths Falls 7-6 Sunday night after being beaten 63 by Nepean Saturday.

Stoke City Tops

LONDON (CP) — Big spending Stoke City stormed to the top of the English League First Division soccer race Saturday with a 1-0 win over Leicester.

The ambitious Stoke club has never won the league title, but it has handed out a lot of cash in the transfer market in a bid for first place this season.

Dennis Smith scored Stoke's goal from a cross by substitute Ian Moores with four minutes remaining in the game, played before 29,721 fans. A key factor in Stoke's win was a strong performance by goalkeeper Peter Shelton, making his home debut.

Shelton was recently transferred to Stoke from Leicester for $720,000, a British record for a goalkeeper.

Stoke	25	points from 20 games.
Ipswich	24	from 20.
Liverpool	24	from 20.
Everton	24	from 19.
Manchester City	24	from 20.

Ipswich defeated Carlisle 3-1, Liverpool and Coventry tied 1-1, Everton beat Birmingham 4-1 and Manchester City lost 3-1 to Newcastle.

In other First Division games, Arsenal blanked Middlesbrough 2-0, Leeds topped Chelsea 3-0, Burnley downed Luton 3-2, West Ham defeated Queen's Park Rangers 3-0 and Tottenham beat Sheffield United 1-0.

Manchester United took a 5-2 win over Sunderland in a battle between the top two clubs in the Second Division. Manchester now has 31 points, six more than Sunderland and Norwich.

In the Scottish League, Celtic and Rangers both won to remain tied for first place in the First division. Celtic edged Morton 1-0 and Rangers beat Dundee United 4-2.

Hibernian, three points behind the leaders, kept pace with a 3-1 win over Ayr.

Kareem Leads Bucks to Win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points as Milwaukee Bucks beat Philadelphia 76ers 117-113 Sunday night.

It was the Bucks' sixth victory in the last seven games.

Abdul-Jabber, the NBA's most valuable player in three of his five seasons in the league, scored only six points in the first two periods.

Philadelphia, with Steve Mix scoring 23 points, Billy Cunningham 21 and Fred Carter 20, closed to 109-108 with two minutes remaining in the game, but Abdul-Jabber's hook shot and two free throws by Dandridge and Gary Brokaw lifted the Bucks to victory.

Phoenix came back from a five-point deficit early in the fourth period to nearly win the game in regulation time. But Charlie Scott, whose basket tied it at 98-98, missed a free throw and sent the contest into an extra session.

The Lakers then went to work with Hawkins pumping in three baskets as Los Angeles jumped ahead 109-103 and easily held on for the victory.

Scott scored 26 and Dennis Awtrey added 19 for the Suns.

George Carter's 17 points in the final period turned back a Utah rally and led Memphis to its ABA victory.

Saturday's NBA results: New York 118 Buffalo 111; Portland 117, New Orleans 85; Washington 122, Seattle 90; Milwaukee 126, Chicago 98; Golden State 128, Los Angeles 118; Phoenix 112, Houston 100.

Almost 20,000 Attend Banff Arts Festival

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Almost 20,000 people, an increase of more than 30 per cent from last year, attended this year's Banff Festival of the Arts, the Banff Centre school of fine arts reports.

Dates for the 1975 festival have been set for Aug. 7-23, and while specific programs have not been announced, they are expected to follow the usual mixture of opera, ballet, drama, concerts, musical theatre and displays of visual arts.

A survey of audiences at the 1974 festival indicated that 30 to 40 per cent of those attending "never" attended opera or ballet at home, although they turned out in good numbers at performances on summer evenings here in the thin mountain resort.

And the survey showed they found the performances surprisingly good. They were asked to rate the shows "excellent," "adequate," or "disappointing" and 65 to 81 per cent of them called the shows "excellent," with Fiddler on the Roof taking top marks.

The fine-arts school, founded in 1933 as a summer drama school, has grown into what amounts to a graduate school for young professional performers on the threshold of their careers. The school has long since outgrown its initial popular reputation as a summer camp for dilettante rich men's sons and daughters.

Major performances this year included productions of Mozart's opera, Marriage of Figaro, and James Reaney's play, Sticks and Stones: Part I, based on the notorious Lizzie, Ont., murders of the 1880s. The centre this year also formed the Canadian Chamber Orchestra, which was raised "excellent" by 75 per cent of its audience.

However, the centre continues to struggle with financial difficulties. A provincial government institution associated with University of Alberta, it does not qualify for federal government grants from the Canada Council, though many of its students win Canada Council assistance.

The 1974 festival was run on box office receipts of $28,300 and grants from the province and corporations totalling $17,000. By severely limiting advertising and presentation expenses, it reported a surplus of just over $2,000.

The school and the festival have been built on what its founder, Senator Donald Cameron, calls "rattling the tin cup." He now is retired, but still takes an active interest in the venture and has proved to be one of the best line-up rattlers in the field.

Students pay minimal tuition fees and in most departments are admitted only by successful audition or demonstration of their work. But during the intensive six-week school period, they work with top-flight instructors and professional performers.

Last summer's faculty included such star names as violist William Primrose, violinist Henri Temianka, one of the founders of the Paganini Quartet, and cello virtuoso Tsuyoshi Tsutsumi. Head of the drawing and painting department is Takao Tanabe, and head of the opera department is Bernard Turgeon.

The centre has two modern theatres with spacious workshops and rehearsal halls on its mountain-side campus overlooking Banff townsite. Most performances and exhibits are held there, but some festival events also take place in the town and—for the first time this year, overcoming a national parks barrier—at one of the nearby camp grounds.

While the audiences this year were principally Albertan, some came from Australia, England and Europe.

Almost one-third of those attending were last-minute purchasers of tickets, but another third bought their tickets up to five months in advance.

In Tough Winnipeg North Side Sex Is a Means to Get Glue

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hundreds of children in the toughest part of Winnipeg are growing up on a steady diet of crime.

Workers for the Children's Aid Society in the north-central part of the city tell of sixteen-year-old children who set fires, of seven-year-olds assaulting foster parents and of young girls turning to prostitution to finance glue-sniffing.

"Getting into trouble isn't frowned on. Getting caught is the crime."

Mr. Farmer and his co-workers are aware of the many factors that lead to juvenile delinquency. Parents overwhelmed with their own problems, lack of family life at home or the difficulties facing rural or native people in adjusting to urban living.

At the same time, however, they feel the present rehabilitation system for juveniles is less than adequate.

"It's a game to these kids," said social worker Heather Martin. "The police pick them up and they go to the Youth Centre. The next day they get a lecture from a juvenile court judge and a ride home from a social worker who gives them the same lecture.

"I know of kids who've gotten into trouble just so they could be in the Youth Centre for the weekend dance."

Jim Pacey said delinquents in their mid-teens laugh at the courts, and he said the courts have to make good some of their threats to frequent attenders and concentrate preventive measures on the very young who are now in a life of crime.

Last year, city police apprehended 8,000 juveniles and about half of this number were detained for further action. Some have their cases dismissed in juvenile court, some are referred to the children's Aid Society and some are fined or ordered to make restitution.

A small number of young offenders are raised to adult court or sent to training schools. About 11 per cent of the youngsters apprehended by police go on probation.

Despite the concerns expressed by Children's Aid Society workers, Lloyd Dewalt, director of probation services at the Manitoba Youth Centre in Winnipeg, said the juvenile court and rehabilitation system in the province is working reasonably well.

There hasn't been a controlled study of the system, he said, but studies in similar areas show as many as 80 per cent of the persons put on probation stay out of further trouble with the law, at least over a period of several years.

Mr. Dewalt said setbacks and relapses are an unfortunate but accepted part of medicine and perhaps the same kind of thinking should prevail in the field of rehabilitation of offenders.

"It places an impossible task on the system to expect a 'cure' in every case," he said.

Sixteen Hundred Seek Berths on Queen E2

LONDON (CP) — Sixteen hundred people have booked, or are negotiating for, berths or places being offered on the Cunard flagship Queen Elizabeth 2 when she makes her maiden TORONTO-the-world cruise in January.

Although Cunard is offering passengers the chance to spend only part of the cruise if they cannot afford all 72 days, it is expected that up to 1,500 people will make the whole trip.

More than half the passengers will be from North America; other strong contingents will be from Britain and South Africa. The voyage—described as the ultimate in world cruising—also is proving popular with German and Swiss travellers.

The ship is designed to carry 1,850 passengers but on this occasion the payload is being restricted to provide even more luxurious conditions on a ship whose voyage that will cover more than 38,000 miles.

After leaving Southampton Jan. 4, QE2 will pick up additional passengers at Cherbourg before sailing for New York for her North American passengers. From there she will cruise south to Port Everglades and on to Curacao, Salvador, Bahia and Rio de Janeiro.

Crossing the south Atlantic she will call at Cape Town, Durban, Mombasa and then anchorages before starting the Far East sector of the cruise in Bombay, Colombo, Singapore, Bali, Hong Kong, Kobe and Yokohama.

The superliner then crosses the Pacific on the longest leg of the cruise, a distance of 5,000 miles—to call at Honolulu, Los Angeles and Acapulco before before the ship sails south to make her first passage through the Panama Canal to call at Balboa, Cristobal, Cartagena, Curacao and Everglades and New York.

It will be the first time QE2 has been seen in nearly half these ports of call.

Highlight of the shore excursions planned for passengers will be a three-day stay in mainland China for 600 people. The party will travel overland from Hong Kong and stay at the Fung Chang Hotel opposite Canton's famous trade fair centre. Other excursions will include an eight-day safari in Africa.

Travellers will pay as much as $28,000 ($48,000) each for the best suites on QE2. One of the two most expensive suites has been taken and the second has been earmarked for an American couple. Among other passengers already booked are five suites including three babies in arms.

Before embarking on her most ambitious tour, the 65,000-ton ship will have a refit run to turn to the United Kingdom in December. Opportunity will be taken to complete work on a dozen new cabins.

She will have a ton of caviar, five tons of lobster, 15 tons of mignon and two tons of pate will be taken on board QE2 before she sails from Southampton before the cruise begins. The wine cellars will be stocked with an extra 27,000 bottles of champagne and wine and Cunard estimates that during the whole cruise more than half a million cups of coffee will be consumed.

Cunard says if the maiden world cruise is a success it may be repeated at two-year intervals.

Growth Rate Down

The growth rate for the gross national product expenditure indicator is reduced to 5.5 per cent from six per cent as the slack that remained in the economy following the 1970 slowdown was almost completely taken up in 1973, says the Economic Council of Canada in an annual report. Graph included an indication of 1976 and 1977 expenditures. The Economic Council said the economy can only grow at its capacity to produce real goods expands. (CP Newsmap)

Showbiz Shorts

LONDON (AP) — Richard Burton, who angered many Britons by calling Winston Churchill a coward, portrayed the British wartime leader in a television play Sunday night and some reviewers said it was one of the actor's finest hours.

The play, Walk with Destiny, broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corp. was among weekend programs marking the 100th anniversary of Churchill's birth. It covered the years between 1936 and 1945.

Advance interest in the production was high because of wide publicity and criticism of anti-Churchill remarks made by Burton in a New York Times article. Burton, 48, described the British statesman, among other things, as "an evil coward on a moral par with Hitler and Stalin."

Only one London TV critic was lukewarm about Burton's performance. Some were ecstatic.

"Richard Burton's interpretation was a masterpiece of subtlety, adroitness and control," Alan Coren wrote in The Times.

Richard Last of The Daily Telegraph, wrote:

"That he could play this complex giant so convincingly as a far-sighted, even noble saviour and actually mean what he wrote the other day is not within my capacity to believe."

But James Thomas of The Daily Express said Burton played Churchill without a ounce of humor and failed to achieve the "towering performance" that was needed.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — June Hunt, the daughter of the late billionaire oilman H. L. Hunt, says she doesn't care about money and wants to be a singer and guitarist. Hunt died last week.

Miss Hunt, 29, said in an interview that her first record, about a little blue man who loses his guitar, a woman and says he "robs" her, will be released this month.

Miss Hunt said about money: "It has nothing to do with true happiness."

Thyroid Therapy Can Be Tricky

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently, I went to a doctor for a thyroid check-I am 25 and have needed thyroid medication in amounts up to three grains ever since I was 12.

After the test the doctor said I didn't need thyroid, but when I reminded him I was taking it a grain a day, he said: "You can take it if you want to."

Seven or eight years ago a doctor took me off thyroid and it was an unpleasant experience. I ended up weighing over two grains a day.

I'd appreciate your opinion. There's no point in spending money on medicine I don't need, but I'm not anxious to do a repeat of the last try without thyroid. I do have a weight problem and am tired a lot.—S.A.L.

It's true that if a patient is getting enough thyroid to bring the system up to normal, that's what the test will show—normal. Stop the medication, and after a time the thyroid test will show low thyroid.

But this can be a trickier situation than it sounds like. The longest use of thyroid (and you've been taking it for 13 years) can suppress the normal function of the thyroid gland, and given time the gland may revert to adequate activity without medication.

(Note the word "may." This, as I said, can be tricky.)

The best answer I can give you is that a thyroid test, taken while the patient is on thyroid medication, doesn't necessarily show whether the medication still needs to be continued. Sometimes a physician can estimate correctly in such a case; sometimes he can't.

You don't say just what the "unpleasant experience" was when you were taken off the old several years ago. If I knew, my reply now might (or might not) be different.

However, I think you should, for your own satisfaction, learn what a thyroid test shows after you have been off the medication for a time. If it shows normal then, you don't need the medication.

There can be a psychological dependence on thyroid medication, which has to be considered.

I trust that you are not taking the thyroid for your weight problem. It isn't the right answer.

Likewise your being "tired a lot" could be from your weight. Or from numerous other possibilities, including incorrect diet, lack of adequate sleep, glandular problems such as diabetes or low adrenal function.

Medical problems don't always have black and white answers. I'm not saying hypothyroidism I don't know enough about your case to say or don't need to continue your thyroid medication. But you do now have my appreciation of what to do next.

Another test after omitting the medication for 60 days. Then you'll have a sounder idea of whether you need to look elsewhere for a solution to your problems.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does watching television in the dark harm your eyes in any way? If so, how?—S.P.

It does not harm the eyes.

Jim: "In the early days of contract you became famous as a user of socalled psychic bids. Why did you stop?"

Oswald: "There was a very good reason. I found that I lost more on hands where my partner was afraid to bid for fear that I had a psychic, than I gained on hands where my opponents were fooled. Then, there is another reason. A psychic can throw against his perpetrator."

Jim: "You are so right. Here is a hand I played recently. It was obvious that three no-trump or a vyclab bid with a club suit as his run out so I didn't bother to double three clubs. West opened the queen of clubs and led his ace and promptly led back the five of hearts.

Oswald: "If there had been no adverse bidding you would surely have played your 10 spot, wouldn't you?"

Jim: "Certainly. I would be hoping to find just one card—the jack in the East hand. However, East had passed in three notrump. His bid was clearly an open one. It looked as if he needed the ace and king of hearts for his bid, so I hopped up with the queen and another psychic bid hit the dust."

CP News Roundup

Retail Business Waning

MONTREAL (CP) — Struggling against inflation, the retail trade industry faces weakening consumer demand and higher costs that will result in a decreased growth rate, says an industry study.

During the years 1975 to 1977, the industry will experience an annual real growth of 4.3 per cent compared with the 6.6-per-cent rate of 1970 to 1973, says the report tabled Sunday night at a national economic outlook conference sponsored by the Economic Council of Canada.

A further reduction was forecast for the years 1977 to 1983 when the growth rate is expected to decline to 4.7 per cent.

Inflation was the major question facing the industry because it was responsible for decreased consumer demand, higher material costs, lower profit margins and curtailment of capital expenditure.

The study maintains that unless these detrimental trends are improved, even further delays will result in capital expenditures, necessary for improvement in the industry.

Strike Ends

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Operations at Great Lakes Paper Co. are expected to resume this week after about 1,300 sawmill workers returned to work last Thursday, ending a strike that began Oct. 11.

MP Hurt

OTTAWA (CP) — Lloyd Francis, the 54-year-old Liberal MP for Ottawa West, was in good condition Sunday after being injured in a two-car collision Saturday night.

Mr. Francis received a number of broken ribs and other minor injuries.

His general condition was described as "not serious."

Report Hit

TORONTO (CP) — The Algonquin Wildlands League accused the Ontario government Saturday of producing a "meaningless" report to back his policy of allowing commercial logging in Algonquin Park to continue.

Last week, Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier released a report in the legislature that stated there is insufficient timber within a 50-mile radius of the park to supply current timber needs.

In a news release, league president Brian Cragg said the government figures are "meaningless."

Centennial

Churchill's widow, Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill, now 89, walked to the parish church of St. Martin on the arm of her grandson, Winston Churchill, who at 34 is following in the footsteps of his grandfather as a member of Parliament.

Kennedy Praised

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro says in an interview that he and his fellow revolutionaries were grieved and disgusted by President John Kennedy's assassination because they had nothing against him despite his tough anti-Cuban policies.

Castro, interviewed in Oui magazine, said the former president was "a brilliant man, with his own ideas and initiative. He was an intelligent and able leader of American imperialism."

Distrust in Quebec Disappoints Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield says his greatest disappointment in 26 years of political life is his failure to win the confidence of Quebec voters.

"I went after the national leadership of the Conservative party in Ottawa to work at improving our position in Quebec and at winning the trust of Quebecers," he said in a recent interview.

"I came with the ambition of substantially increasing the support of Quebecers for our party . . . but I must accept the evidence that I did not meet with any great success."

Mr. Stanfield nevertheless has no feelings of bitterness or rancor toward Quebecers, who have systematically turned their backs on him in the six years since he first led the federal Conservatives in an election.

Describing himself as "realistic and democratic," Mr. Stanfield says he recognizes that the presence of Pierre Trudeau as Liberal leader destroyed his chances of becoming prime minister of Canada.

Mr. Stanfield, by his own choice, spoke almost entirely in French during an hour-long interview with the French Service of The Canadian Press.

"I hope as leader of a national political party I have contributed something to strengthening Canadian unity, to helping build a greater understanding among all citizens," he said.

"I think I have represented our party as well as possible across the country but I am disappointed to have failed in Quebec.

"While I was the Acadivca over to our cause despite their Liberal tradition. I must receive that the greatest failure in my political career was to have been unable to win the confidence of Quebecers, even of English-speaking Quebecers."

On The Move

Chicago auto dealer Guy Beaufort checks for traffic before pulling out in his Vanguard electric car, Tuesday at Chicago. Beaufort says sales of the 1100-pound, 2½ horse-power auto are increasing. It is believed to be the cheapest American made car, listing for $1,300, has maximum speed of 28 miles an hour, and can be recharged overnight in any 110-volt household outlet for 18 cents. Professional Jealousies

Retarding Health Care

MONTREAL (CP) — A study paper on Canada's health care services says professional jealousies and status conflicts in the medical profession are retarding the country's health care system.

In a sweeping list of recommendations directed at the federal and provincial governments, the public and private sector, the paper says Canada's health care system must become more integrated and "team oriented" to encourage the maintenance of good health.

Prepared for a National Economic Conference, which began here Sunday, it says closer cooperation between all levels of personnel now involved in health care will not be achieved until several barriers are removed.

Pact Made

THUNDER BAY (CP) — A tentative agreement for a new two-year contract was reached Saturday between the Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. and locals 2837 and 2980, lumber and Sawmill Workers Union.

The agreement will affect about 1,400 bush workers in Abitibi's Lakehead, Sault Ste. Marie and Iroquois Falls divisions.

Boycott Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — About 50 persons demonstrated briefly in front of a downtown supermarket Saturday, urging shoppers to boycott grapes and lettuce imported from California.

Dick Piper, spokesman for the Ottawa Grape and Lettuce Boycott Committee, said the store was chosen as an example of local stores that do not indicate the origin of the two items.

Unionists Held

LONDON (Reuter) — Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, today named more that 200 men and women it said were imprisoned around the world for their trade union activities—and suggested the total number detained might be more than 20,000.

Many of the prisoners "have not been charged or tried, while some have been tortured," Amnesty said.

Spain had 78 imprisoned trade unionists—the largest number in any one country, Amnesty said. The other prisoners were scattered through the world.

Confidence Lack Could Be Hazard

MONTREAL (CP) — A combination of bad economic news may create a lack of confidence in investors that will cut short a recovery which many economists expect to begin next year.

This was among several conclusions in a set of economic papers prepared for an annual economic outlook conference sponsored by the Economic Council of Canada, which started Sunday.

Here are some of the other possible future developments economists see:

—Canadian businesses have been catching up to do because they have not been investing as heavily in new equipment as those in other countries.

—The average age in the work force will be lower and there will be more women workers, with implications for changes in types of jobs offered and hours because of different goals and lifestyles.

—Rates of productivity gains will be lower, partly due to a lower level of experience in the work force.

—Any reduction in inflation rates will result from political decisions and not advances in economic theory.

The Economic Council, a government-funded research agency has commissioned papers from four economists and 16 committees of businessmen to serve as a basis for discussions at the three-day conference.

Carl Beigie, executive director of the C. D. Howe Research Institute, a private foundation, said in a paper on material shortage that he had not found "much solid support for the more pessimistic view that the world has recently crossed a threshold into generalized and permanent materials shortages."

He said materials shortages developed as production levels in major economies peaked at about the same time. Now the situation has been reversed.

"A serious danger . . . is that investment needed to relieve future shortages will be delayed because of weakness in demand and declining rates of profit."

The result, he said, is a risk that when economic growth resumes it will be cut short because of an early re-emergence of shortages.

Others Seek Help As Paralysis Eased

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto teen-ager who underwent spinal surgery in the Soviet Union has been besieged by other paralysis victims wanting to know how and where they can also be healed.

Ed Relprich, 18, whose legs were crushed and paralyzed in a 1971 motorcycle accident, has received more than 75 letters, telephone calls and visits from strangers asking the same question: "Can you help me?"

Ed still is confined to a wheelchair but now has feeling in his nose-to-navel level.

After his accident, Canadian doctors told him that he would never walk again. But Soviet doctors said the operation earlier this year in Leningrad, in which damaged sections of vertebrae were removed to ease pressure on the spinal cord, might help him to walk unaided after two years of exercise and massage.

Ed has heard from paralysis victims across North America and as far away as Europe and Africa. "There are so many requests I can't keep track of them all," he said.

One long-distance caller was a paralyzed American detective that during a drug raid near the Mexican border.

Among Ed's visitors was 20 youth in a wheelchair from Caledonia who was injured in a Disneyland ride.

"All I can do is give these people the address of the hospital in Leningrad where I was treated," said Ed.

He said at least two people who came to him for help—one Indianapolis racing driver and a Canadian woman—have also travelled to Leningrad for operations.

Ed flew to the Soviet Union after a neighbor showed him an article on the specialist treatment available there.

Rally to Hess

BONN (AP) — More than 1,000 persons attended a rally Sunday to demand that former Nazi leader Rudolf Hess be freed from jail in West Berlin by Christmas.

Indians Not Given Priority

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Flora MacDonald, the Progressive Conservative party's Indian affairs critic, says Indians "are not the priority they should be with the government."

Miss MacDonald, member of Parliament for Kingston and the Islands, made the comment in an interview while attending the annual British Columbia Conservative convention this weekend.

"I think the major reason for the protests and increasing militancy is that, the government has failed to respond to the very real social needs of Indians," she said.

"When you consider the department of Indian affairs has determined that 20,000 houses are needed for Indians in the next year but only have plans for providing 2,000, you realize the problem."

"Housing should definitely be the priority because so many other things, such as education and health, depend on adequate housing," said Miss MacDonald.

Some New Faces, Many Re-elected

Winter Weather Affects Vote in Quinte Municipal Elections

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

It was never the most fiery election year.

Nonetheless, Quinte district voters Monday fought snow, sleet and ice, slogged to the polls and shaped their civic governments for the next two years.

The result: Some new faces and new leaders; some shifts in popular support; some confirmations of confidence.

Picton has a new mayor — Donald . King, who rang the changes on two veteran challengers.

So has Deseronto, where Peter Dickinson also scored in a three-way race.

In the northern townships, Hastings County warden Jack McKenzie handily won over two rivals.

In Prince Edward County, warden Keith MacDonald had an easy victory.

The mood altered in many municipalities when the votes were counted.

In Belleville, the turnout was 29 per cent, said city clerk Earl Dafoe — in contrast to the 33.7 per cent of 1972. In Picton it was 44 per cent — down from 48 per cent. In Trenton, the vote was about 36 per cent — off six per cent from last election.

These were among results of those votes:

Belleville — Ald. Ben Corke, long-time city councillor, led the polls with 3,982. Councillors Jean Smith and Stu Meeks tied next with 3,885 — the same politicians who shared the top three 1972 slots, though in different order.[Newcomer Ald. Doug Mccrae] two vacancies are Brian Kennison investment dealer, and Wally Dever, school principal.

Trenton — Mayor Patrick, selected by council earlier this year, defeated Paul Tripp one-time councillor, leading community personality 1,851-1,827. Pete Aziz, a veteran of town government returns to council, winning the last slot.

Among the heavier voting areas was Stirling where more than 80 per cent of the eligible electorate re-elected Reeve R.E. Shortt.

The election also gave Hastings board of education seven new trustees.

Nuclear Accord Explained

Ford Admits Pact Allows Arms Race

WASHINGTON (CP) — The new U.S.-Soviet strategic arms agreement allows both countries to continue costly nuclear weapons buildups over the next decade, President Ford has acknowledged.

In a news conference Monday night, Ford said the accord, worked out last week in Siberia with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev, allows each country 2,400 long - range missiles and bombers.

Of that quota, both countries can place multiple independently targetable warheads (MIRVs) on 1,320 missiles.

Although the president said this agreement "put a cap on the arms race," he described a situation in which both countries have great flexibility in increasing the number of MIRV missiles as well as the size and lifting power of each missile.

For instance, the Soviet Union has about 2,300 long-range missiles, none of which is believed to carry multiple warheads. Moscow can and is expected to install MIRV warheads on up to the 1,320-missile limit.

The United States already has 422 of its 1,710 offensive missile force carrying multiple warheads. Ford made it clear Monday night the United States will push its MIRV program to the limit.

"We do have an obligation to stay up to that ceiling," he said of the figures worked out at the Vladivostok summit. "The budget, that I will recommend will keep our strategic forces either up to or aimed at that objective."

Ford's claim for the agreement, which will run from 1975 to 1985 once technical details are worked out, came under immediate challenge from Democratic Senator Henry Jackson of Washington state.

In a telephone interview, Jackson said that "the total budget next year just to take care of the costs of inflation."

Nevertheless, he said that in the long run there "very, very definitely" will be an actual savings in military spending because of the new arms agreements.

"If there had been no ceiling . . . we would have had an arms race" that would have cost the U.S. dearly, Ford said.

At 8 in the president said an annual cost of $18 billion "is in the ball park" for building the U.S. arsenal to the new limits.

Monday's Storm Now Over

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The wintry blast that gripped southwestern Ontario Monday, disrupting everything from motor vehicle collisions to basketball spot-checks, appeared to be on the wane today.

The forecast for most of the province is for cold but generally clear weather.

The storm started in the Windsor area Sunday, leaving more than a foot of snow there. By Monday afternoon it left a trail of freezing rain and snow from Windsor to Kingston.

In between, thousands of cars were abandoned and hundreds of motorists rescued as snowmobiles and accommodated overnight in police stations, schools and service stations.

The areas such as St. Thomas and St. Catharines, schools were closed and motorists warned to stay off the highways.

Voting Extended In Some Centres

By DAVID COHEN
The Canadian Press

Bad weather and voter apathy combined Monday for poor turnouts and possibly prevent-setting two-day polls in some of the municipal elections held across Canada.

Snow, rain, sleet and hail hit most of the heavily populated southern part of the province Monday and voting day, discouraging many voters who had already been showing signs of apathy. Some gave up on the polls.

Harshest hit by the storms was the Windsor area, where 11 inches of snow had accumulated by voting day.

Approximately 16 per cent of the city's 468 polls failed to open because of the storm in nearby Maidstone, Rochester and Tilbury townships, election had to be postponed.

All these areas had less than nine-hour voting periods Monday and will have open polls once again today.

The Ontario Municipal Election Act stipulates that polls must be open nine consecutive hours. If for some reason this period is interrupted, the polls must open the next day for a nine-hour period.

Completed polls in Windsor were taken to city hall. Officers at incomplete polls took ballot boxes and their keys home, braving protests from a number of candidates.

These candidates argued that returning officers should not have both ballot boxes and keys.

At Queen's Park officials said the postponed elections may be a first for Ontario.

Premier William Davis said the government will take another look at having municipal elections in the province at a more seasonable time.

The election marked a further step toward the uniformity of municipal elections in Ontario this year. 76 municipalities voted officials to one-year terms so that they could move into line with the rest of the province for the 1976 elections.

Several populous centres did not vote in the elections this year but will vote in the 1976 elections. These include municipalities affected by the government's regional government scheme or by government restructuring.

Setting an Example

The pressure was off Mayor Robin Jeffrey this election, after she received an acclamation to office in early November, but when election day dawned wintry, she set an example for Belleville citizens by voting early at the Kiwanis Centre. She is shown here handing her ballot to Deputy Returning Officer Fred McGarvey and poll clerk (background) Ralph Nichol.

Value of 'Solitary' Doubted

Ombudsman Asks Study Of Abolition of 'Hole'

OTTAWA (CP) — The ombudsman for the approximately 10,700 federal prisoners has called for a special study to determine whether throwing a prisoner into the "hole" either for protection or punishment is justified or efficient.

Inger Hansen says the holesolitary confinement or dissociation, whatever the term used—can be cruel punishment and inhuman treatment.

She said the study should determine whether the hole is useful as a punishment, is the most efficient way to protect certain prisoners and whether there can be an alternative for the latter point.

The recommendation probably is the most dramatic of 11 that Miss Hansen, Vancouver criminal lawyer appointed "correctional investigator" for Solicitor-General Warren Allmand last year, made in her first annual report tabled in the Commons Monday.

Another that could become highly controversial calls for appointment of an outsider to preside over in-prison disciplinary hearings and to determine guilt or innocence of prisoners.

Others call for:

—Changes in laws and regulations concerning earned remission (time off for good behavior); statutory remission leaving the last third of a sentence as the outside and temporary absences. These are expected to be covered in legislation that Mr. Allmand will submit in Parliament shortly.

—Changes or an end to practices under which prisoners must forfeit property.

—Appointment of a lawyer to examine, adjust and make recommendations for changes in the disposition of prisoner claims for injury or loss of property. Miss Hansen reports serious delays in dealing with these claims and many injuries, mainly loss of fingers, going uncompensated.

—The right for a prisoner to invest his funds outside the prison. At present his funds could be put into the Inmate Trust Fund, the interest from which goes into the Inmate Welfare Fund.

Executives Likely To Follow Bombings

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — More executions of Ethiopia's former traffic leaders are expected in reprisal for terrorist bomb attacks in Addis Ababa.

The ruling military council blamed supporters of deposed Emperor Haile Selassie for explosions at noon Monday in the city hall and in a downtown hotel. The official casualty count was 13 injured, but witnesses said at least six persons were killed and dozens were injured.

The military council accused supporters of the old regime of trying to spread confusion and chaos and said it would take drastic action.

Other sources believed the bombs and another one set off Saturday night were the work of the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF), which recently threatened to carry its 14-year guerrilla campaign for the independence of Eritrea province to the capital.

The military council executed 60 members of the old regime on Nov. 23 but is holding about 150 others in the cellars of the Grand Palace for military trials which are scheduled to start Wednesday. Selassie is confined to a suite in the palace.

Five more persons were arrested Monday and the nightly curfew was moved up from midnight to 9 p.m.

On the Job Classes For Bayside Students

A new approach to Grade 11 physics is under way at Bayside Secondary School under the direction of teacher David Smith. It is designed to provide students with opportunities to discover applications of physics principles in the community and in other areas of the school besides science.

Float Damaged

City police are looking for the person or persons who took 12 stuffed animals from the Ontario Humane Society float which had just finished taking part in Saturday's Quinte Santa Claus Parade.

Police said the theft occurred when the float was parked in front of Foley's Foundry on Wallbridge Cres. Saturday afternoon.

Total value of the stuffed animals is unknown, police said.

For seven weeks this fall, students have spent Thursday afternoons outside school, investigating how physics is used in industry. Considerable hands-on student investigation goes on before the outside visits, and the small groups of three or four students receive instruction from plant personnel during their visits.

Among the programs the students participated in was assisting with Grade 4 classes from Bayside Public School who came to the high school labs for instruction, carrying out a physics experiment at Loyalist College and learning the use of an electronic calculator and visiting Stephenson Adamson Co., a typical mechanical engineering firm and the non-destructive testing centre at CFB Trenton.

Because Bayside Secondary is on the semester system, with 40 minute-classes, the students miss only one other subject period every three weeks.

Forty students are participating in the out-of-school classes, with only three or four in each outside tour at one time.

Stickle Says City Riding 'Wave of Development'

Belleville's building boom topped the $16-million mark this year, the biggest year of building in the city in 49 years, and more than double the $7-million recorded in 1973.

City Building Inspector Grant Stickle said in an interview "the city is riding on a strong wave of development".

The building surge this year — while frank in the face of mounting interest rates on mortgaging for residential units — is explained largely by exceptionally strong development in the city's industrial sector, he said.

During the last year, eight new industries located in the city. Building permits show this new industrial growth valued at $6.1-million — more than 39 percent of the city's dollar growth for the year. The industrial sector accounts for the year's most dramatic increase compared to the 1973 figure of $791,000.

While mortgage financing seemed to have little affect on industrial expansion, the city's residential development suffered during the year.

Mr. Stickle said the slow new residential growth of approximately $6-million — compared to this year's $4-million.

In consecutive years since 1971, city building has dropped in value by an average of more than $3-million a year, a fact explained by Mr. Stickle as the effects of tight money and shortages of serviced land.

Mr. Stickle said for the over-all growth to continue in the city, more serviced land would have to be provided. Statistics in the inspection department show that the number of permits issued is no less than last year's 421 permits with the overall increase recorded through larger projects rather than more smaller ones.

Brighton Rejects Arena In Only Referendum

Election razor were anything but close in the village of Brighton and Murray and Brighton townships on Monday's municipal election.

The lowest voter turnout occured in Brighton, where incumbent reeve Dorothy Britnell retained her lop village seat with a resounding 859 to 197 vote win over newcomer Basil McMeister, the led in all seven polls.

It was a closer battle for the position of deputy-reeve, as incumbent William Dank defeated former reeve Norman Roberts by 586 to 470. Mr. Roberts is a retired police officer.

For Reeve Britnell, the win adds two more years to her five-year council experience, while Deputy-Reeve Dank will enter his third term.

The only incumbent for council, William Pettingill, topped old opponent with 794 votes for one of the three seats. He was followed by newcomer Glen Quick at 687 and another rookie, Dick Julian with 548 to complete the council makeup.

Unsuccessful bids were made by former councillor W. D. (Scotty) Broughton who finished with 439 votes, and Raymond Simpson, son of retired veteran councillor James Simpson, who failed to carry on the family tradition, collecting 377 votes.

Index! S.M.

Well back of the pack were newcomers Fred Phelan, 113, and Ralph Collins, 105. Also claimed to the public utilities commission were Perry McIntosh and Rev. C. McLaren.

About 47 percent of the electors at Murray Township where the first election in five years was held, 1,007 voters out of those 4,402 eligible cast their ballots, or about 23 percent. "That's about average, considering the weather," noted Clerk Ken Rose.

There was no election for reeve, as incumbent Harry Lafferty was acclaimed for his third term.

Incumbent James Quinn won a third term as well as deputy-reeve, defeating seven-year council-veteran Hanley Down by 603 to 345.

Newcomer Angus McFee led the race for three council positions with 851 votes, followed by incumbents Clifford Wannstrom and Ross Hall. Unfortunate hazard the elements to exercise their franchise. There were 3,401 eligible voters, and 1,118 showed up at the polls.

Newcomer Tops Thurlow Polls

By JIM SMELLIE
Staff Reporter

A candidate making his first try for council in Thurlow Township, Kenneth Yorke, wound up topping the polls in Monday night's municipal election.

Mr. Yorke, an administrator at Hastings Manor Home for the Aged for 27 years before he retired this year, beat incumbents George Beer and Don McKeown on council. Mr. Yorke picked up 954 votes.

Councillor for the last two years, T. Walter Hamilton with 801 votes failed to be re-elected. He fell 27 votes behind Don McKeown with 828 votes. George Beer collected 721 votes.

Township clerk Clare Herton said more than 4,500 electors cast their votes for council and school board, about 30 per cent of the eligible voters.

Mr. Yorke said after being elected that he is "happy but humble" to be chosen. "I think the reason I was elected was not for what I had done in the last two years (of the campaign) but for what I had done in my 27 years as administrator of Hastings (County caring for people."

"I look forward to working with the present council and am sad that everyone couldn't win," said Mr. Yorke.

The four other candidates running for the three positions as councillor and their results were Gerry Masterson with 480 votes and Nettis Brownlee with 136 votes.

Allman to Check Ellis Allegation

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand promised Monday to look into the basis of a 1973 RCMP investigation of Conservative MP Jack Ellis.

He said in the Commons he does not know who ordered the investigation or why Mr. Ellis was but told of inquiries about his possession of a confidential Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) document.

Referring to a statement last Wednesday by Mr. Allmand, Mr. Ellis (Hastings) said it seems absurd that the matter could have been considered an offence under the Official Secrets Act.

He was confident the investigation was ordered by the cabinet, not the RCMP.

Mr. Allmand said last week the investigation, which found Mr. Ellis had not committed an offence, came after an allegation that possession of the document "could have constituted an offence under the Official Secrets Act."

All that the document might have shown is "evidence of momentarily-inept bungling by the UIC," Mr. Ellis said.

"There could have been a question of the reputation of the government being involved, but not of national security as implied by reference to the Official Secrets Act."

Mr. Ellis's attempt to have the matter referred to a Commons committee for study was turned down by Speaker James Jerome. He said the subject of the investigation was first raised by the Conservative MP himself and that Mr. Allmand has promised to provide further information.

Dunk Still Mayor In Campbellford

Of the six councillors voted in Monday night, 50 per cent were newcomers, with one, Neil Burgess, topping the polls with 754 votes.

Other new faces on Campbellford council are Douglas Sharp and Harold Little. Re-elected councillors were incumbents William Murray, William Machesney and Odell Dunk running for another term.

The four candidates elected to the Public Utilities Commission were Hector MacArthur, Glen Vanderwater and Georgs Jackson, all incumbents and newcomer Robert Bell.

The two incumbents running for public school board, Cyril Johnson and Howard N. Sheppard were both re-elected.

In Campbellford there are eight polls and a spokesman from the town office said voter turn-out was light.

Hospital Evolution

Belleville General Hospital officials are faced with a dilemma: how to reconcile the conflicting recommendations of two recent studies on hospital usage.

In a provincial government study, Dr. Peter Gordon of Halifax says, among other things, that a combination of circumstances has caused inappropriate use of hospital and nursing care beds in Hastings county.

A report from the U.S. hospital consultant firm of Gordon A. Friesen (Mr. Friesen was administrator of Belleville hospital back in 1937-41), on the other hand, evaluates the need for more hospital construction.

BGH board chairman Cari Bateman has noted these contrasting offerings and, understandably, hospital authorities will be taking a look at them with a view to local needs.

One recommendation of the provincial report which is bound to cause dismay, at least among patients who have benefited from its existence, is the phasing out of the present Queen's Self-Care Unit in Belleville.

This was a pioneering effort, under the ministry of former Health Minister Dr. Richard Potter, but according to the Gordon report, it is inadequately staffed and is costly source of in-patient hospital care.

The concept of self-care, however, evidently finds favor with Dr. Gordon, in that he recommends it be replaced with a smaller unit in the Edith Cavell building at BGH. This of course would have the merit of closer proximity to the hospital proper and would facilitate patient and medical staff alike.

Looking at the broad spectrum of hospital care today, and at the way it will evolve, one statement of Mr. Friesen stands out. He says the time will come when the hospital as we know it will disappear. He adds that preventive medicine will come first in the community, and curative medicine second.

This is an exciting prospect where the health of the general public is concerned. It also presupposes, and this is important, better care of the individual where the individual himself is concerned. This can only mean greater discipline and moderation, for where various indulgences are concerned the end result is not infrequently injury, suffering, and even death.

The Accident Syndrome

Who would have thought that in 1972 — the latest year for which figures are available — Prince Edward Island led the provincial roll of impaired drivers with 1,036 impaireds per 100,000 population.

That's the word from Toronto writer Dick Brown. Ontario ranks eighth among the provinces with 630, with Quebec only 504. The Yukon and Northwest Territories are in a class by themselves with a staggering 2,306 per 100,000.

If some provinces look better than others, it is also a very dangerous situation. As Brown suggests, police supervision may be less strict in some places; as it is, more than 100,000 Canadians were charged with impaired driving in 1972. And the temptation to the drinking age, incidentally, is a contributing factor in the rising statistics.

There is another aspect of the problem of road safety in Canada. It is that, the way people drive. And U.S. consumer advocate Ralph Nader has been under fire for something he said in this regard. Nader has blamed the safety of cars, whereas a professor of psychology at the University of Winnipeg, John Clake, says human errors cause most mishaps. Clake describes these as "a disaster in the safety field because he has absolved workers (referring to industrial accidents, as well as car accidents) of their guilt for the irresponsible behavior that underlies many accidents."

Clake says he is convinced there are "accident-prone" people whose behavior leads them to become repeatedly involved in industrial and other mishaps. In addition there are countless near misses. But he says safety research has not yet advanced to the point where the "personality quirks" of these people can be readily identified.

Impairment then is one thing, and being accident-prone is another. Together they account for much of the tragedy of accidents in whatever form they take. Of the two, however, impairment is the most recognizable, and deplorable. It is something both police and courts should seek to control with all the power at their command.

Apartment Dwellers Hit

Inflation's Impact On Real Estate

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst Tri-mess News Service

Today's inflationary pressures are having an unprecedented impact on the real-estate development industry.

The effects range from cancellation of major retail projects to unemployment among senior executives in the industry.

But the broadest impact is on people who live in rented accommodation.

In the past, apartment landlords would normally insist on a two-year lease—to ensure stability and to avoid the cost of frequent redecorating, among other reasons.

Now, such reasons are outweighed by rapid erosion of the dollar. In many Canadian cities, the one-year lease is replacing the two-year term as a standard.

Even monthly tenancy is becoming a much more common arrangement, since it maximizes the landlord's opportunity to increase rents.

With the growth of supply of rental accommodation lagging well behind the rise in demand in most parts of the country, apartment owners encounter little serious resistance to rent increases.

Commercial rentals are not much more stable.

The familiar pattern of letting 25-year rental contracts at firm rates appears to be on the wane.

The new trend is toward five-year terms, with the tenant agreeing to protect the landlord against any increase in the cost of living, in taxes and in maintenance costs.

Distressing as they may be for the tenant, such tactics are not necessarily examples of gouging. Owners of rental property are often faced with unexpected demands by lending institutions to pay higher interest rates on their mortgages.

The institutions, in turn, feel entitled to boost their lending rates in step with the increase in their own costs of borrowing money.

The result, in an ever-growing number of cases, is cancellation of construction plans for rental projects and then a greater scarcity that can only put further upward pressure on rental rates.

Construction, of course, is not stopping altogether.

The recent federal budget contains some incentives to apartment-house construction, and projects to cut the tax on building materials is approximately in half.

Some major construction projects are obtaining the needed financing by offering a share of the ownership to lending institutions or to participating retailers.

Major development projects are still being advanced in a number of cities across the country—such as Sarnia's Seaway Centre and Bridgeview Marina, and Kamloops' 18-million city hall, convention centre and cultural complex.

But the harm that supervisionitis has already caused—through cancellation of projects and the dispersal of technical and managerial skills—will not easily be undone.

For many Canadian families, accommodation will continue to take a bigger and bigger share of the budget.

And for real-estate developers, the task of picking up the lost momentum may well require greater federal and provincial intervention than the industry has ever witnessed.

A Word in Praise of Work

Kingston Whig-Standard

We hear so much these days about the drudgery and unrewarding toils of work that a few words taken from a recent convocation address by Canadian author Catherine Davies to Trent University deserve repetition here.

"There are people now to whom work is indeed a four-letter word .. It is held responsible for a number of commercial ills, and the popular psychiatrists, who writhe for the glossy magazines, urge women to keep their husbands from working if they wish to save them from premature death.

"The popular moralists have their knife into the work ethic, too. They have been fulminating for years or more against a dreadful denial attitude they call 'The Protestant Work Ethic'.

"It is not work that kills, but the surrender of the spirit, the withering of the sympathies, the numbed say-nothing response to life, that some people bring to their work that kills, and kills indeed sometimes, and destroys the spark of vitality is entirely unnecessary.

The suggestion here is that the unfruitful drudgery inherent in the "nine-to-five syndrome" is more a function of the worker's own mental attitude towards work in general, than a function of the work itself; that work can be more than a master which enslaves its pitiful servants in a system of compulsive materialism. Indeed, in this view, work can become the most "consistently interesting thing to do."

They are words well worthy of heed by both young and old.

Allan Lawrence Possible Runner For Leadership Of Conservatives

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA- If the Conservatives are looking for color in a new leader — and a dimmer splash never did Pierre Trudeau or John Diefenbaker make in the vote department — they need look no further than former Ontario Attorney General Allan Lawrence, now two-term Tory MP for Northumberland-Durham.

Not that some of the other contenders and a dimmer political leadership are exactly drab — Alberta's Jack Horner from Crowfoot comes on with gilt and glitter by the ten-gallon hat — but Allan has continued to have more than his share of what it takes for a politician to get in the public eye.

It becomes clearer by each passing day that the good, grey Robert Stanfield is leaving sooner than later.

In any political day less dazzling than Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's juiced-up heavy era, Robert Stanfield could have been the premier's man to beat.

But the Canadian voter, possibly politically inebriated by inflation and the kaleidoscope of our troubled times, haven't been buying cool, clever, judicial and reasonable leaders like Robert Stanfield.

So cedar could be the key to the door of power.

And Allan Lawrence has it.

Contemplate, if you will, the beautiful brouhaha he busybodied up with his dark hint that bookies are lurking in Parliament's corridors of power.

Anyone else could have said it, and — yawn.

Bookies, why not?

Parliament's got its own agents for tickets to just about every lottery going. Its own liquor store, and for the convenience of late and early drinkers, its own hotel pub.

But when Allan Lawrence says things, he shouts, and everybody seems to listen.

Just glance down the list of things he has said, in recent years, colorful cracks that made the newspapers and the boob tube and set Tory heads on edge.

When he minced the Ontario Conservative leadership by only 44 votes, he had called winner and Premier Bill Davis a lazy overspender on education and said the Tory caucus was also "dead from the eyeballs."

And there is no shortage of Conservatives around who figure he may have something — provincially as well as federally.

He could have had something, too, when, as Ontario Attorney General, he publicly called on the federal justice minister to "get off his duff" and clean out Canada's prime drug distributor.

On another memorable occasion — and again a lot of Conservative heads did not agree with — he said that welfare programs should be set up to "get the load off the taxpayers and layabouts up off their butts."

He once had an urge for a crackdown on young drug addicts, and wondered if it wasn't time for the police to get tough.

He worried that some of the feds in charge of law and order weren't serious about the country than the victim.

Homosexuals in his Toronto riding organized to defeat him — and failed — because they complained, he had called them perverts.

Maybe the trouble with colorful Allan Lawrence is that he has the habit, not of the politician in these days of mumbo-mouthing around the issues — of calling the shots as he sees them.

Like when he said at a federal election rally that as far as Pierre Trudeau was concerned, the Prime Minister's "knowledge and vision of Canada stops short this side of the Ottawa River."

It was a phrase in what, for him, was a backing off, he wasn't charging Pierre Trudeau with a built-in Quebec bias, he was just saying that the other provinces included in Ontario, just didn't do as well by the feds.

Decentralization And All That

Mystery Of a 'Provincial Plan'

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The government, it seems, may be going to put a pet out of its misery.

For more than two years now it has been known that the government was working on a wise plan for decentralization in the province.

But it has been working in deep mystery.

A few facts have been known—one of them that there was a study underway on the impact of locating government offices, or parts of ministries, in other areas of the province.

But there was not much that was concrete to go on.

A short ago, however, Treasurer (and minister of economics and intergovernmental affairs) John White, MPP for Dufferin-Simcoe, made the incidental remark that the government intended to release "a substantial plan" in 1975.

And surely this must be the plan it has been working on for so long.

As Opposition Leader Robert Nixon has pointed out, the only evidence that the planners talked to anyone outside their own ranks on this program was a meeting Mr. White held with 18 unidentified businessmen to discuss land use last July.

The Globe and Mail commented that this left "there is a place where things like this might be discussed, and it is called the Ontario legislature."

This legislation aside from decentralization has been bedevilled by out guide-lines for such things as preservation of farmland for agricultural purposes, control of urban sprawl and lay down ecological requirements.

Some of these have the unpopician that aside from the physical impact it will have on the province the government may be looking for certain political impact.

In fact perhaps quite a political impact.

The Conservatives now are known as the "country party" or "built."

And if this law has any important impact on decentralization it could be good election material.

For the greatest portion of the public is concentrated in the major centres.

And these people always have felt that they got a raw deal at the expense of the cities.

Seat Belts Now Compulsory in N.S.

Brantford Expositor

Four years after Ottawa decreed that all new cars coming off assembly with seat belts, Nova Scotia is the first province to make the wearing of belts in their use compulsory. It is a step that is needed desperately in a country where traffic fatalities exceed a staggering 6,000 a year, and almost half of them in Ontario.

But for the lofty courage of the Davis government, which introduced and passed such a law in its Throne Speech nine months ago then backed off, Ontario could have been the first on Canada's biggest field of carnage with this step of cutting the toll.

Compulsory belting is steadily spreading. Five Australia's New South Wales started it two years ago and the front seat riders and saw his road deaths drop in the month by 29 per cent, the rest of the country has fallen in line. So have New Zealand, Britain, France and Puerto Rico.

Next July 1 Sweden will have a similar law with the usual exemptions for rear riders, taxis, delivery vans etc.) and draft legislation is being discussed in Japan, Belgium, Switzerland and Ireland. Also Holland, which is spending $5 million a year on Canadian Safety Council and Washington D.C. in Ontario's Scarborough has shown a 63.4 per cent nearly drop in fatalities, although only 23 per cent were wearing seat belts properly.

In Australia since the new law came in, the rate of use has increased from anyone at a large Melbourne hospital have received head lacerations resulting from traffic crashes have dropped 31 per cent and eye-injury cases by 360 per cent.

Some "arguments" against the use of seat belts are flimsy excuses. A favorite is that a belted driver is trapped inevitably in case of fire. Five after a crash in which a car was staged television crime shows), and it takes only a split second to get out. The belted driver is more likely to stay conscious and escape.

Then there is the claim that compulsion infringes personal freedom. It is already law that the liberty of the individual must be curbed by the liberty to endanger others or take unreasonable risks with one's own life. What about the laws compelling the wearing of helmets when motorcycling, or those requiring vaccination against contagious diseases to guard the health of a whole community? There is much fiction and arrant nonsense in the personal freedom cockatoos.

Indians And Colonialists

Letter in The Montreal Gazette

I really enjoyed the last paragraph in the article by Peter Gzowski (Nov.19) where he asks "if the Indians are truly landlords of half of Canada, what does that make the Canadians living there, squatters?" The answer to this rhetoric is, yes they are squatters.

Colonialism, whether perpetrated by a few or a gigantic number is still colonialism. 400 years ago, America was free. The Incas, Aztec and Mayan Empires flourished and the North American was left alone.

Who invited miscellaneous murderers, pirates, looters and other gangsters to America? It certainly was not the Indian people. Since then, the colonialists have taken it upon themselves to pour untold millions of other land grabbers into America, to enslave Americans to a museum piece existence in various deserts set aside for their use.

Canada and the U.S.A. sit back smugly and revile "colonialist" regimes in South Africa and Rhodesia forgetting that they themselves are the biggest colonialists of all. Let them look back at their own bloody past and let them heed the Hopi prophecy of 1904.

In fact, it points out that one day the white colonialists will kill each other off in thermonuclear warfare and that America will revert to the Americans.

Caughnawaga.

BY AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Only one new face will appear on Trenton council in January, as Mayor Robert Patrick and other incumbent council members received another two-year mandate from 35 percent of the town's eligible voters Monday.

A councillor, till his defeat in 1972, F. J. (Pete) Aziz collected 1,826 votes to place sixth at the polls and assume the seat vacated by former councillor John Bunn.

In the only upset of the election, Barry Box, a 16-year former employee of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, ousted 13-year PUC veteran Charles Hilton.

Former Mayor James Macdonald garnered 2,137 votes to easily win re-election to the commission. Mr. Box placed second with 1,651 while Mr. Hilton was behind at 1,527.

At the time the town hall closed Monday, figures for four of the 39 polls in Trenton had not been posted. Results for the utilities commission are incomplete.

Mayor Patrick, after accepting the congratulations of his opponent, Trenton wholesaler Paul Tripp, said he is satisfied with the vote of confidence Trenton had given him.

Mayor Patrick moved up to the mayor's seat Jan. 1, 1974 when former Mayor Duncan McDonald resigned. He was chosen from among fellow councillors and did not win the office in an election.

He said the road improvement program undertaken by his council played a significant part in his, and the council's, victory.

Mayor Patrick took 1,851 votes to Mr. Tripp's 1,827, in an election day marred by snow, sleet and freezing rain. The 3,678 votes cast represent 35 per cent of Trenton's total 9,833 eligible voters.

The turnout vote was down from 41 per cent in the 1973 race.

Mr. Tripp blamed his defeat on what he called a possible misinterpretation by voters of his political intentions in Northumberland County.

He said his call for Trenton to look west would not have signified a monetary disregard for the east half of the town.

Fighting in his sixth election, the former councillor said the east side has never strongly backed him. Paul Crowther also cost him votes, he said. Part of his strength is drawn from older residents who feared the weather conditions.

Among councillors, George Greer was returned for his sixth year and fourth consecutive term with 1,798 votes tally.

Councillor Greer placed fourth in the vote getting, increasing his personal total by 60 votes from 1973 when he finished sixth.

All other councillors are entering their second consecutive terms.

Peter DeGroot topped polls among his fellow councillors with 1,877, one more vote than Ronald Price, who also placed second behind John Bunn in 1972.

Robert Wannamaker, who moved to the council seat vacated by Councillor Patrick when he became mayor, placed third with 1,830 votes. His tally marks a personal improvement from the seventh place finish in 1972 with 1,222 votes.

Voters appeared to indicate a desire for experience in their representatives. Of the other five candidates, none had served on council.

Frank Meyers, Sam Clements and Samuel Potts improved on vote totals garnered in their 1973 election bids, but fell far short of the 1,826 vote of Mr. Aziz.

The two newcomers to the election fray Louis Knack and Lloyd Wells, with 982 and 855 votes respectively, did not fire the voters interest.

Mr. Wells, did, however, get best from an unexpected source — the display sign out side of his Dundas St. West store caught fire and sent up a measure of smoke. No damage was done.

Some political observers have attributed the return of the incumbents to the lack of issues in the campaign. The trend quickly became apparent as returns from the polls began arriving at the town hall.

The only bitter battle waged during the election centred on the PUC. Mr. Box directly challenged chairman Charles Hilton with claims the PUC had done little, to also look in the town's water system.

Relaxed Rivalry

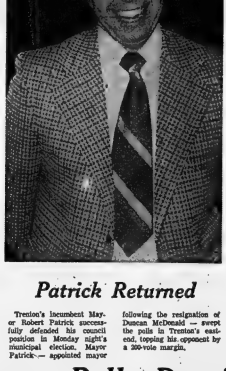
King Picton Winner

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

PICTON — In a three-way race for mayor, Donald King came out on top with 564 votes, with incumbent Mayor James Bird polling 498 and contender Margaret Ackerman polling 457 votes.

In an interview following Mr. King's victory, he said he owed his success to the "hard work and dedication of his campaign committee".



Picton town clerk Andrew Jarvis stated that voter turnout was about 64 per cent as compared to 1973's 66 per cent turnout.

Incumbent Reeve Ross Cronkwright was returned to office by a vote of 985, challenged by newcomer Albert Piroth, polling a total of 525 votes.

For councillor, Richard Byers, newcomer to the election, led the polls with 986 votes, with incumbents Russel Alexander, Bessie Ward and Norman March and newcomers Charles Heburn and Harry Abram completing the six councillors.

Incumbent Christopher Lockye was returned to the office of Public Utilities Commission with newcomer Burt Dousett. They were challenged by Gordon Nourse.

Sidney's Councillors In with No Fight

Sidney Township's reeve and council had an easy night Monday. They all were returned to office by acclamation.

Councillor McCurdy announced some time ago that he would not seek re-nomination in the upcoming election because of personal and business obligations. He allowed his name to stand when no other township resident filed nomination papers.

By not having an election, Sidney Township stands to save about $2,000 in administration and printing expenses. Of that amount, the township saves an immediate $1,500 slated as payroll for poll staff and rental of polling stations.

"Financially it's good for the township.", said clerk Hugh Lyons.

Bridge Major Issue

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

AMELIASBURG — If Monday's municipal election results in Ameliasburg Township are any indication, the proposed high-level bridge slated to replace the bridges and causeway linking Prince Edward and Hastings County will remain at Rossmore and Belleville.

Voters clearly showed they wished to maintain the status quo as they elected three men with clear-cut opinions on having the new bridge at the present location, and two others who took the role of fence-sitters.

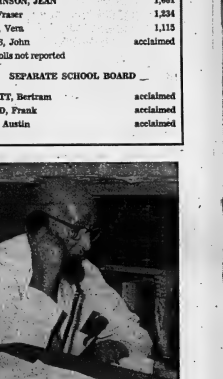
Mr. Wetherall won handily by 720 to 278.



Incumbent councillor Gordon Babbitt easily defeated Norman Peel for the deputy-reeve's post in a similar situation, by 680 to 328. Mr. Babbitt also wants the new bridge at the same place, while Mr. Peel chose to wait for the results of a ministry study before voicing an opinion.

For the three councillors' seats, newcomers Dr. Robert Vaughan and Paul Boyd, and incumbent councillor Glen Goodfellow outdistanced three other hopefuls by wide margins.

The final tally showed Dr. Vaughn topping the polls with 602, followed by Goodfellow at 582, Boyd, 444, Jack Dingle, 396, Ken Mitchell 311 and John McGinnis 199.

Mr. Dingle had advocated a poll of residents on the bridges issue. Mr. Mitchell though there should be no change unless it meant accommodating large trucks.

Out of 3,900 eligible voters, 1,000 turned out to cast their ballots at the 19 polls, a little less than in 1972's said clerk William Nightingale.

Here Comes The Vote

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis was the key man on election night in Picton Monday. Supervising poll returns, he receives latest vote by phone.

Ellis Predicts Higher Sugar Prices

OTTAWA — The price of sugar could top 15-pound by Christmas, Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, warns.

Mr. Ellis makes the prediction in a prepared criticism on the recent federal budget.

Sugar, notes the MP, also has climbed 400 per cent in price over the last 18 months.

The latest federal budget, said Mr. Ellis, will further drive up living costs and increase industrial unrest.

The budget will cost their worker for his fears about what lies ahead in our government - fueled inflation. The employer surely knows that he can only live so long with rising costs and remain solvent," said Mr. Ellis.

"They both miss the point that the cost of living and their influence in the government itself," he says.

Patrick Returned

Trenton's incumbent Mayor Robert Patrick successfully defended his council position in Monday night's municipal election. Mayor Patrick — appointed mayor following the resignation of Duncan McDonald — swept the polls in Trenton's eastend, topping his opponent by a 200-vote margin.

County Voters Trudge to Polls Despite Winter Onslaught

Foul weather failed to foil the democratic process as the happy Hastings County townships and villages went to the polls Monday.

In the town of Deseronto, a threeway - challenge for mayor — won by Peter Dickinson — saw 54 per cent of the eligible voters, cast ballots.

In the northern townships, where poor weather swept in later in the day, several municipalities reported the vote way up over previous campaigns.

In Faraday, where county warden Jack McKenzie easily brushed aside two opponents to retain township, the vote was reported doubled from last election.

Townships like Herschel and Limerick also drew fair-sized turnouts.

There were exceptions. At Frankford, with a vote only for council, the vote was estimated at 22.5 per cent. At the extreme north edge of the county expectations for a lively vote had centred on Bangor — Wicklow — McClure township. Site of a controversy earlier this year over a provincial park development, the election brought on a campaign for the reeveship, won handily by incumbent Felix Browne.

A keen contest in Sophiasburg Township was won by incumbent trustee John Hoskinson, who defeated James Cullen, Carl Van Skiver and Robert Thompson.

PCs Fighting Redistribution, Proposal May Be Doomed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives vowed Monday to block a plan to redistribute and add Commons seats, said the government acknowledged that the proposal may now be doomed.

Official notice of the Conservative intention was given in the Commons by Walter Baker, deputy House leader. A few minutes later, Liberal John Reid said in an interview the redistribution bill might not meet a Dec. 31 deadline.

"Yes, we're very concerned," said Mr. Reid, parliamentary secretary to government House Leader Mitchell Sharp. The move appeared to be part of a series of Conservative filibuster attempts that means the bill probably would sit through the usual Christmas recess.

Mr. Reid said filibusters appear to be in the works on the bill to provide the oil export tax and the subsidy to imported oil consumers, another bill to establish an export development corporation and the redistribution bill.

The word filibuster—lengthy speeches to delay bills—was not mentioned by Mr. Baker. But other Conservatives said last week they would fight the redistribution proposal to the death.

John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) has said any means, including a filibuster, would be used by British Columbia and Alberta Conservatives to stop the bill. They believe it would enlarge the Commons excessively without giving their fast-growing provinces adequate representation.

If the bill does not pass by Dec. 31, the present system of redistribution will continue under a rule adopted 19 months ago when all-party study for a new system began.

Outside, the House, Mr. Reid repeated his contention that the Conservatives reneged on an agreement to pass the bill quickly. He blamed this on "lack of leadership."

He and Mr. Sharp both said no procedural methods such as be used to have the bill pass. However, some limit might be applied on the petroleum tax bill debate, Mr. Reid said.

Delaying the redistribution proposals is part of a Conservative attempt to block the petroleum bill which also must be passed by the year's end if the subsidies are to continue unbroken, he said.

Mr. Baker and other Conservatives argued that the bill would lead to an infinite series of seat additions to the 264-seat Commons, producing a House that might become unwieldy.

He said the bill should be sent to a Commons committee for thorough study and another attempt made at a better solution.

The government will be flexible when the bill reaches committee, Mr. Sharp said in an interview. But he doubted that a more fair solution can be found.

The bill would add 15 MPs to the Commons for the next election, expected in 1978, and others after each 10-year census. With the promised addition of a second Northwest Territories seat, the House would expand to 288 MPs in the next redistribution, based on the 1971 census.

Based on the belief that the present system limits representation of larger provinces, the bill would ensure no loss of seats for any province, but would give larger ones more seats through expansion of the House.

In the next redistribution, Ontario's 88 seats would go to 95, Quebec's 74 to 78, B.C.'s 23 to 27 and Alberta's 19 to 20 while Manitoba and Saskatchewan each would gain one seat for totals of 14.

Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick would be unchanged at seven, four, 11 and 10 seats, respectively.

If the present system were used in the next redistribution, only Ontario and B.C. would gain with three more seats each. The other provinces would either lose or remain constant.

The bill would give Quebec one more seat in the next redistribution and four more in post-1981 redistributions. Mr. Sharp said in the House this number might be changed later if population projections are not borne out.

Quebec is a keystone province under the present system, and no province would have an average constituency population greater than Quebec's.

For provinces with more than 2.5 million people, now Ontario and Quebec, representation would be determined by dividing the average Quebec constituency population into the other large provinces' population.

Small provinces—those under 1.5 million—would have their seat number determined by dividing their population by the average constituency population of all small provinces at the previous redistribution.

British Columbia and Alberta are the only provinces that fall into the group classified as intermediate. Representation of growing provinces in that group would be determined by increasing the number of seats by one for every two that would have been given if the province had the same average constituency population as the small provinces with the largest average riding population.

Roman Spent Most

OTTAWA (CP) — Stephen Roman, the millionaire businessman who outspent all other candidates in the 1972 federal election and lost, did exactly the same thing this year.

Figures compiled by the chief electoral officer show that Mr. Roman, president of Denison Mines Ltd., spent $108,739 in his unsuccessful bid to unseat Liberal Barney Danson in York North riding on the outskirts of Toronto. Mr. Danson, appointed urban affairs minister after the election, spent $41,835.

Writer's Cramp

OXFORD, England (CP) — Raymond Cantwell is worried that higher postal charges will lead to him losing his reputation as the world's champion letter-writer. In 26 years, the former circus entertainer, now aged 53, has had 25,000 letters published in newspapers and magazines around the world.

Grain, Flour Shortages Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Warnings of grain and flour shortages in Eastern Canada because of the strike by federal inspectors' increased the pressure on the government Monday as mediation talks to end the dispute continued.

But Treasury Board President Jean Chretien, whose department bargains with the employees, told MPs at a Commons committee meeting that the time was not ripe for parliamentary action.

J. F. Blakney, chairman of the Canadian National Millers Association, said in an interview Monday that the strike, coupled with one earlier this year by ships' officers on the Great Lakes, would mean bread, pasta and flour shortages.

The association represents millers who process 98 per cent of the country's flour.

Shortages, in turn, would result in higher consumer prices and layoffs in the flour milling industry, he said.

"We have only 50 per cent of our winter requirements in eastern positions," Mr. Blakney said. "The other 50 per cent is at Thunder Bay or back of there."

The grain strike by 223 grain inspectors, which began Nov. 22, has halted all shipments in Canada. The inspectors ensure the quality and sanitary condition of grain.

As the strike continues, the Great Lakes shipping season is shrinking. The season ends Dec. 17 and ships must leave Thunder Bay by Dec. 12.

Mr. Blakney said the railways could not handle the volume of grains involved.

Mr. Chretien said Parliament may be asked to deal with the strike if there are problems for the country but the employees had 1st legal right to walk out and now was not the time for action by the Commons.

No Conflicts Of Interest Discovered

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday he uncovered "potential conflicts of interest" before new rules came into effect last month to restrict any private business and financial activities of cabinet ministers.

"Of course there were potential conflicts of interest," he said when questioned in the Commons. But no actual conflicts were found and all potential conflicts had been eliminated when the rules became effective Nov. 15.

Prisoner Not Frightened So Jail Guards Beat Him

TORONTO (CP) — A former guard at the Toronto jail testified Monday that a new prisoner at the jail was beaten after he told guards the jail did not frighten him.

"The prisoner was kicked . . . you could set the boots landing in the face, stomach and groin," Garry Danny, 32, told the Shapiro royal commission which was set up following allegations of guard brutality at the jail, formerly called the Don jail.

The prisoner urinated and after he and five other guards had beaten him, Mr. Danny said,

Mr. Danny said he also hit the man "one or two times" after he appeared to be unconscious "because of the attitude the inmate had (and) what he said in front of the other inmates."

The man's attitude might have given other prisoners the idea that the jail's reputation as "the toughest institution in Canada" had changed.

Mr. Danny said he felt obligated to join in the beating. Otherwise the other guards would have thought "I wasn't working for the Don Jail but was working for Queen's Park."

In testimony earlier Monday Mr. Danny said he and guard Dwight Sleigh took another prisoner, about 18 or 19 years old, to a broom closet to "teach him a lesson."

"I slapped his face maybe twice with an open hand. Sleigh then open-handed him on the face and on top of the head."

Mr. Danny said the prisoner had complained of having to do cleaning while at the jail awaiting sentence.

Prisoners, between the ages of 16 and 21 who are kept in a special section of the jail legally should be forced to clean any area except their jail cell.

Man Says Police Roughed Him Up

TORONTO (CP) — Tom Henderson, 19, testified at the royal commission into police practices Monday that five plain-clothes officers broke into his apartment and roughed him up during a search for drugs last February.

He was the first to testify at the inquiry, set up in October to investigate allegations of brutality by Metropolitan Toronto police which were reported in Toronto newspapers.

Mr. Henderson, a mail carrier, said police eventually found 1½ ounces of hashish and 800 tablets of LSD.

He, his wife, Jill, and her 14-year-old brother were watching television when he heard a key in the door, the night lock was smashed and one officer said "Where's the stuff?" Mr. Henderson testified under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

He said that when he asked: "What stuff?", Sgt. Robert Rusk punched him in the chest, knocking him backwards on to a bed, and grabbed him around the throat, saying, "I'm going to kill you."

Mr. Henderson testified that when he was taken to the police station, he was punched in the jaw by Constable Brian Jilks and a mechanical "claw" was attached to his nose and then used twice on his leg and once on his penis when he refused to talk while handcuffed to a chair.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (the sinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and clinical observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Sodium Dyan) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stand-by cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Favorite Outfits 'Second Time Around'

Evening Glamor

Barbara Ross is another of the Mary-L's regular customers. Here she models one of her favorite purchases, an evening gown that seems "made for her". She holds a child's toy, one of several such items available at lower than usual prices.

Kim Fink's very favorite outfit for classes at Centennial Secondary School is a suede patchwork skirt with a brown knit sweater. She tops it all off with a sheepskin coat.

If it sounds like an expensive ensemble for a school girl, you don't know Kim's secret. She buys all of her clothes from a boutique that only sells things second hand.

"I couldn't afford clothes like this if it wasn't for the Mary-L," she says. As it is, she pays for all of her own clothes with her part time job.

The six-month-old boutique sells not only clothes but everything from skis to baby furniture on a consignment basis.

Kim's top was $4.50 and her suede skirt $10.50. The sheepskin coat, which was brand new though "second hand", was $100.

"Very few of our things are in the $100 price range," Lois Vaughan emphasizes.

"For the most part they're much cheaper ... many winter coats are in the $20 range."

Mrs. Vaughan and Mary Lou Ross are the shop's proprietors.

Barbara Ross, a secretary, also buys much of her wardrobe at the boutique.

"I think I save 75 to 80 per cent on my wardrobe. This way I can go clothes shopping every week."

"This dress is worth at least $80" she says. "And it's brand new to me."

Mrs. Vaughan says that both she and Mrs. Ross take advantage of the store's bargains, particularly for their own children.

The cost: $2.

Perfect for School

Kim Fink's new suede patchwork skirt is somebody else's old one, but Kim doesn't mind at all. Wearing "second hand" clothes is one of the smart ways she has to dress well but inexpensively for school. She finds all her good fashion buys on the racks at the Mary-L Boutique.

THE DRAGON EMPRESS
By Marina Warner

Tzu-hsi of China, who entered the forbiden city of Peking in 1851 as one of the weak young Emperor's many concubines, became Asochka ruler not only of the city but of a China resisting the encroachment of the barbarian (read white) world. Tzu-hsi was not the usual stupid, Tru-hsi survived the destruction of everything save herself and died an ancient Sacred Cow, honourably in her bed.

Marina Warner's picture of 19th century China is fascinating with many curious, occasionally disquieting illustrations.

In this book Tzuhsi is exposed as a complex personality. She was extremely conventional but as ruler had a passion for power and intrigue. Exceedingly vain, she gave much care to her appearance, and loved painting and the theatre.

This book is available in Corby Library.

LISA

Today's Child

By Helen Allen

You can guess from the diffident smile that Lisa is shy.

Just turned 13, she is always quiet with new people, but with people she knows Lisa is bright and entertaining, displaying wit and a sense of humor.

French and German in background, Lisa is tall and in good health. She has fair skin, green eyes, reddish brown hair and the freckles that usually go with that coloring. (The freckles are fading.)

Lisa is an average student in Grade 8. She finished Grade 7 with a high B average. Reading is her favorite subject and she reads outside of school as well as in with a preference for suspense novels. She looks for suspense on television as well.

Drawing and painting are Lisa's hobbies. She plays volleyball at school. Like most teens she is fond of rock music.

Most of the time Lisa is good-natured and co-operative but she has an independent nature which manifests itself in occasional stubbornness. She needs a mother and father who can handle these infrequent spells calmly and firmly.

Because of an unhappy experience in her life, it will be hard for Lisa to believe that a family really wants her as a daughter. Her adopting parents must be able to give her that assurance, along with their love.

Lisa wants very much to belong to a family. And she hopes it won't be too much to ask if she can please have a pet, preferably a cat.

To inquire about adopting Lisa, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station H, Toronto M4P 2H7.

Bernard and Julia Nelson of Kamloops, B.C., wade through some of the letters they received after Mrs. Nelson was named a $400,000 Irish Sweepstake winner. Most of the letter writers requested some of the prize money but the Nelsons plan to simply keep them as reminders of their win. (CP Photo)

Begging Letters Plague Winner

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Lottery fever reached its peak in Julia Nelson's home three or four days after she was declared super-prize winner in the latest Irish Sweepstake.

Since then about 100 have piled up, in most cases they ask for a gift or loan from the $400,000 winnings.

Ironically, most of the letters come from Ireland.

"I think it is something that happens to every reverse winner," said Mrs. Nelson. "There are natural con artists who write every winner for money.

"It is something I would never think of doing myself."

Neither she nor her husband Bernard feel any of the letters are worth turning over to their lawyer, who will be handling the Nelson's financing from now on.

Mrs. Nelson has been advised not to answer the letters with her signature in case of forgery.

One such letter is from Reverend O'Hanlon of Dublin, the young nurse who drew Mrs. Nelson's winning ticket.

Another man asking for money are basically all the same—only the amount varies.

One man in Dublin asked for $24,000 so he could move out of his present home because it is too damp. When he gets into the new home and sells the old home he will repay the Nelsons, he said.

A Hamilton man asked for a free loan of $9,000 to repay a bank loan, in return he promised to buy sweepstake tickets for the rest of his life, and, if he ever won, to repay the Nelsons the $9,000.

Another man asked for money to buy himself a car because he is driving a 1936 model.

"If he wants to bring the car to me, I'll trade him even for a new one," joked Mr. Nelson. "It's probably worth more than any new car."

The Nelsons won't throw the letters away. When they move into a new home the letters will be put away in a desk.

Doris Clark

Granchild Too Much Trouble?

Dear Dorth: This letter is really to Bewildered:

So it's too much trouble to keep your own grandchild? Have you ever thought how you would feel if you were to lose this daughter of yours? You would never forget that when she needed your help and understanding you insisted on her giving up her own baby.

Why can't she still go to school. It will be difficult, but then her friends know she had the baby anyway.

We lost our only daughter when she was 15. If I could have her back I would be glad to stand by her, in any trouble she might have. All children go through a difficult time, but later when they grow up they usually are a great comfort to you. It is you who needs to do some real thinking before it is to late. Write to me if you care to.

Mrs. S.Y.

Dear Mrs. S.P.: I couldn't agree more and your thinking is enlarging upon my own response, as it appeared in the column.

If Bewildered writes in that she wants to send a letter to you, I will be glad to supply you with her name and address.

Dear Doris: I wonder if any of your readers would have a poem called, "The Baby's Stocking?" The first lines, as I remember, were: "Hang up the baby's stocking; Its sure you don't forget. The dear little dimpled darling, Has never seen Christmas yet."

This is as much as I remember. I said it in a Christmas concert about 67 years ago.

Dimpled Darling.

Dear D.D: Sounds vaguely familiar I think someone must have read it to me when I was knee-high to a grasshopper.

There must be somebody who could give us the whole thing. Readers?

DEAR DORIS: I have a charcoal portrait done by my late uncle. He was a natural, untrained artist.

Lately I had a buyer for this portrait who is determined that he wants it. He knew my uncle as a child and feels it is my duty to let my uncle get his reputation that he would give him as an art collector.

I would like to know what you think this piece is worth. There are six portraits in all, about 28 by 32 inches. The prospective buyer wouldn't give us a clue.

DEAR FAIR: The only person who would really have a clue is an art expert. Take all six portraits to art dealers in nearby cities, after your fingers have worked down the yellow pages and located them.

You need several separate and unbiased opinions. Then you can decide whether to keep the portraits in the family or sell them. If you do sell them quote a fair price and stick to it. Perhaps the buyer does not know their now for going places.

Biblical Blue Jeans 'All the Rage'

ROME (Reuter) — The battle of the blue jeans has entered a new and violent phase in Italy.

Blue denim jeans are such big business here that, for the last two years, manufacturers, hoping to snare a corner of the market for a basically similar product,...have been vying with each other for the most audacious publicity.

"Jesus" jeans started things with its advertisements containing biblical quotations—such as If You Love Me, Follow Me—next to almost nude starlets. The ads stress Vaticus protests but quadrupled the manufacturers sales.

Kings' Jeans has now gone one step further. The Vicenza firm, whose daily output of 4,-000 blue jeans is distributed throughout northern Europe, has just launched an advertising campaign based on vicious parody.

Fifty thousand posters and paid publicity spreads in the Italian editions of both Vogue and Harper's Bazaar fashion magazines show a shaggy-haired youth aptionally smashing a burning automobile with a bar. On the poster are the words of Karl Marx, A Spectre is Haunting Europe.

For a few of the Milan shops who featured the poster in their display windows, the spectre was haunting them. Outraged straight passers-by took the poster as an invitation to participate in the violence—and smashed in the shop windows.

Adriano Goldschmied, public relations director of Kings, confirms only that "a number of company outlets that displayed the poster received threats.

"However, we have just conducted a survey of public reaction to the posters, and, all told, the results are positive. Everyone's first reaction was shock. Older people don't like it, but young people do, which was our intention."

"The person who ought to be up-most offended is Karl Marx, the champion of the battle against capitalism, who is being exploited by the despised consumer society," the magazine said.

In other developments in the jeans publicity war, Gianni Moziol, the advertising manager who devised the original Jesus jeans campaign, reported that a new Italian religious publication for young people, Jesus, was named as an indirect result of the jeans' publicity campaign.

"A marketing study conducted by the publisher of Jesus magazine demonstrated that Italian young people identified more with the Christ figure when he was called Jesus in English rather than with the traditional, and more formal, Gesu Cristo," after we had coupled Jesus with blue Jeans," he said.

One prominent Italian manufacturer of jeans, Ermenegilde Zegna, who does not manufacture jeans, named a new line of slacks for "anti-jeans."

To publicize them Zegna coined the slogan: Slacks for Men Who Cannot Or Will Not Always Dress in Blue Jeans.

Ann Landers

You Can Keep Him Around And Still Say No!

Dear Ann Landers: I am a reasonably attractive, sensible girl, age 19, and in college. My friends consider me vivacious and fun to be with. I am a virgin and have every intention of remaining so until marriage.

I'm writing about my boyfriend, but it is his problem and I'm not going to let him make it mine. He says he loves me and that I'm torturing him to death because he needs more action.

"He happens to be very good looking, bright, knows all the right words, and has accustomed to getting what he wants. But the fact that he can't get it from me is driving him crazy, too.

I'm not writing for advice, Ann. I don't need any. I'm just hoping you will print my letter so others out there like me will know they don't have to give up everything he asks for. And I'm not afraid of losing him either. I've already told him to shove off if the "torture" gets too much for him, but he still sticks. Him flyspaper—Is not.

Dear Ja: Sounds as if you've got it all together honey. Cheers! A letter like yours is a real day brightener. (Are you listening, students?)

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I were married young, but we were very much in love and I was sure it was the thing to do.

We now have four children (the eldest is 10) and I never thought our marriage was anything but happy. He never complained about anything and our children are truly beautiful. My husband has always had more freedom than most men. I've never nagged or question him and his home was his palace, or so I thought.

Now for the shocker: Three weeks ago he told me out, of a clear blue sky that he wants his freedom—no reason, except that both 19) and now that he's just turned 20 he feels he must be allowed to "try his wings."

Where did I fail?—Lonely And Heartsick

Dear L.: You didn't fail. Your husband did. He failed to grow up and accept the responsibilities of marriage.

After 11 years and four children, it's a fine time to discover he has "untried wings."

My guess is that after a little high flirting, his wings will get tired and he'll turn into a homing pigeon.

Don't make the dumb mistake of giving him a divorce. Insist on separate maintenance. And if you're smart you'll leave him alone until he gets his head screwed on straight (with apologies to Herb Shriner).

Dear Ann Landers: Can you me one more letter on a Night Owl who is married to a Morning Canary? It can work because we've been happy together for 32 years. The secret is to have respect for one another's prime time.

I am nearly 60 years old and my peak efficiency is between midnight and 9 a.m. I have to be at work at 5:59 a.m and the air is beautiful at that hour of the morning. I am also proud that at my age I can accomplish things when most folks are laid out. Of course, when I told up at 4:00 p.m. some people laugh and make boat jokes, but I don't mind. Someone has to take care of the world during those odd hours. I wonder how many people realize what goes on while most of the world sleeps? Tell 'em, Ann. Oddballs like me help keep the wheels going 'round.—Owl From Minnesota

Dear Owl: I wouldn't call you an oddball. You sound great. The world needs nocturnals as well as diurnals. Bless you.

Professor Given Task Of Making Region Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Henry Mayo's kindly, tweedy, professorial style conceals a practical mind that has helped shape several Canadian municipalities.

But the 63-year-old political science professor will need more than past experience in Edmonton, Calgary and the Niagara region to handle his latest task—designing sweeping improvements to the six-year-old Ottawa-Carleton regional government.

"It is the national capital," he said in an interview. "It must be looked at differently from any other place in Canada."

Prof. Mayo has been commissioned by the Ontario government to carry out a two-year, $250,000 study on Ottawa — Carleton, the first of a new breed of Ontario regional governments. Prof. Mayo is a co-author of Scholar said has written books on democratic theory and Marxism. (CP Photo)

He was one of a study group hired in the 1950s by the Social Credit government of Alberta, to look at Edmonton and Calgary municipal problems. The provincial government carried out the study group's proposal that the civic cities swallow nearby towns.

In the mid-1960s he was asked by municipal leaders in the Niagara area to draw up a government plan for that region. He recommended a two-tier system with a regional council and 12 member municipalities.

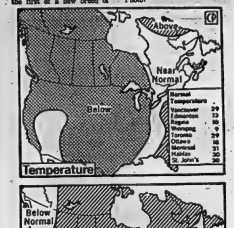
More than 90 per cent of his proposals were accepted by the provincial government, Prof. Mayo said.

The political scientist likes the two-level system despite the Manitoba government decision to establish a single local government in Winnipeg.

"One tier is a pretty drastic blow to a long history of local self-government," he said.

Outgoing Ottawa mayor Pierre Benoit has said that Ottawa should expand to include neighboring urban areas, a view vigorously opposed by other local municipalities.

But in a recent interview he said that a single municipal government for the region is bound to come, but the present two-tier system is probably the only way regional government can win acceptance originally.



Reeve Andrew Hayden of suburban Nepean township, a critic of the local regional government, has proposed creating five urban and five regional municipalities in the area. Ottawa would lose slices of its territory to adjoining Gloucester and Nepean townships, parts of which are highly urbanized.

He would dissolve the present regional government and erect a new regional council for the five urban cities. Ottawa would lose its dominant position on this council, getting less than half the seats.

Prof. Mayo listens patiently to such proposals but shows little enthusiasm. He will probably hear them again when he holds public hearings next year. He said he is more interested in the services provided by municipalities than in the form of local government.

Construction, Language Top Quebec Problems

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Bourassa's Liberal government has produced five straight budgets without tax increases and a leading business authority predicts Quebec's economy will perform in 1975 "at least as well" as the over-all Canadian economy.

But all is not beautiful in la belle province. Approaching the new year, the Bourassa Liberals are under fire regarding corruption in the booming construction industry, the province's newly-enacted language legislation and secrecy regarding escalating costs of the $13-billion James Bay hydro project.

Charles Perrault, president of the Conseil du Patronat du Quebec (Quebec Employers' Council), told a reporter the construction activity growing since 1973 reflects to a degree "the catch-up factor" following a prolonged building lull.

"But from what I can see there is a good deal of forward strength in that sector, which coupled with the rest, makes the Quebec forecast at least as good as the Canadian one," Mr. Perrault said.

The value of Quebec construction under way in 1974 was placed at $8.1 million by Statistics Canada. Robert Heth, general manager of the Montreal Construction Association, said "we expect the New Year to be equal or maybe slightly better than 1974."

A three-member inquiry commission under Judge Albert Cliche—appointed after a rampage of destruction at the James Bay site in March—uncovered widespread corruption in the construction industry and evidence of government favoritism toward one labor federation in violence-ridden inter-union rivalry.

Mr. Perrault said the government had been guilty of tolerating conditions in the industry and he hoped it now would "have the courage" to follow up the commission's findings with prosecutions. He added that Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer, target of resignation demands, and Justice Minister Jerome Choquette should have moved earlier.

On another front, an inquiry was launched into allegations of influence-peddling in the provincial-municipal field. Alleged hanky-panky in the northern administration of the province was investigated.

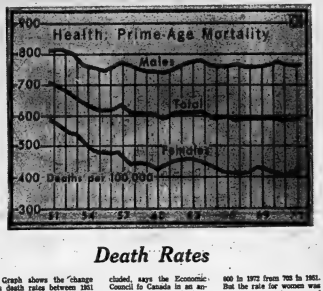
The big Liberal representation in the Quebec national assembly was shaved by one—to 101 in a 110-seat house—when the once-powerful Union Nationale elected a lone member in August.

Maurice Bellemare, the Union Nationale's interim leader, was a by-election victory over Liberal Jean-Claude Rocois, who had resigned his seat and asked for a people's mandate after being accused of acting illegally as a Crown prosecutor while holding also a law office.

In June, Mr. Bourassa announced new conflict-of-interest rules after Parti Quebecois members charged the government gave large contracts to a company under the minority ownership of the premier's wife, Andree, and her brother, Tourism Minister Claude Simard.

With only six members, the PQ mounted a lively performance in its first assembly session as official Opposition. The party, which seeks an independent Quebec in a Canadian common market, sought to make itself more broadly acceptable to the electorate by pledging at a November convention to hold a separate referendum on the independence question if it comes to power in future elections.

Observers predict the Bourassa concept of "cultural sovereignty" for Quebec, which some citizens on both sides of the linguistic fence describe as obscure, will continue to unfold in 1975 as it did in 1974.



They also say the Bourassa government showed astute political timing by picking 1976 as the year to introduce perfamed Bill 22, making French the official language of Canada's... only French-majority province.

They note that the Bourassa forces, re-elected by landslide in October, 1973, have at least three years to go before the next election and may in the meantime manage to apply balm to the wounds opened by their legislation.

The measure received a stormy passage through the assembly in July. English-speaking opponents are pledged to continue the battle in the coming year. Some French-speaking groups also are opposed to the legislation on the ground it does not go far enough to protect the French culture in an English-language North America.

Meanwhile, the government was piloting through the assembly a bill designed to extend Quebec's responsibilities over immigrants within the province, and empower the provincial immigration department to be more aggressive in recruiting potential Quebecers abroad.

Death Rates

Graph shows the change in death rates between 1951 and 1972 in the 35 to 64-year-old age group. Accidental and violent deaths are excluded, says the Economic Council in Canada in an annual report released Tuesday, to 581 deaths per 100,000 in 1972 from 703 in 1951. But the rate for women was down 28 per cent, compared with only seven per cent for men. (CP Newsmap)

Arbitration Award Below Minimum Wage

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister John MacBeth admitted Monday a provincial arbitration board had awarded workers in a Dutton, Ont., confectionery plant wages lower than the provincial minimum wage.

He was replying in the legislature to an earlier question from Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

Mr. MacBeth said the award would provide "one or two classifications" of employees with below-minimum wages between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31.

"Clearly the minimum wage would prevail in any such circumstances," he said.

He said the registrar of the Labor Management Arbitration Commission had agreed to reconvene the board to deal with the situation.

Davis Rejects Request For Ontario Mini-budget

However, the premier said he would give some thought to having Treasurer John White make a statement on the economy in the provincial house.

He was replying in the legislature to Liberal Leader Robert Nixon who posed the requests in light of economic indicators which Mr. Nixon said show a downturn in business activity and an upturn in unemployment.

Premier Davis said he questioned what a mini-budget might contain because it was too early to assess the impact of downward trends in the economy in the United States.

Election Date May Change

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario still take another look at changing the date of municipal elections following a snowstorm that played havoc with voting in Windsor, Ont., Premier William Davis said Monday.

He said suggestions that the Dec. 2 elections be scheduled to a more reasonable time of year had been studied on a number of occasions.

"I have no objections to having another go at it," the premier said in the legislature in reply to opposition questions.

Voters Ignore Weather to Return Incumbents

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The political climate was favorable to the incumbents in Monday's Belleville civic election.

In an election criticized as a lacklustre exercise having no issues and more importantly no burning issues, an estimated 25 percent of the 20,000 city electorate dragged through Belleville's first snowstorm of the season to return the incumbents with a wide margin over 14 newcomers.

Alderman Ben Corke, a nine-year council veteran, topped Monday's polls drawing 3,962 votes — all before the poll-supplier count of Alderman Jean Smith with 3,336 in the 1972 campaign. In that election a record-breaking 32.5 percent of the voters turned out to vote on a campaign marked by the lately-contested runaway campaign where Mayor Robin Jeffrey defeated incumbent Dr. Russell Scott.

Mayor Jeffrey this year was acclaimed taking much of the excitement out of the contest, said voters and candidates alike in recent weeks.

The incumbents in the order in which they placed are Ben Corke, (3,962), Jean Mecks and Jean Smith, (3,885), Joe Cox (3,888), Paul Russell, (3,845), Art Keegan (3,545), George Zegouras (3,302) and Jack Ireland (3,256).

Brian Knudsen — and election favorite since the early days of the campaign drawing strong support from the business community and city service clubs — trailed the incumbents by 734 votes, clinching the ninth-council seat with 2,528 votes.

City Hall and the Queen's Hotel — traditional election night gathering places — reflected both the weather and the political climate Monday night with most candidates satisfied with telephoning for ongoing election results.

Alderman Corke said he is "delighted" with his poll-topping total and guessed the mayor's acclamation and bitter weather were the reasons for the weak turnout.

Alderman Ireland said voting issues were not an integral part of this year's election, council excitement Monday was generated in the race for the top of the poll, "Brian's always a keen rivalry for the position."

Alderman Paul Russell who sat one point behind the polls said he is pleased with those voters who came out . . . incumbent councillors are doing a good job".

Alderman Jean Smith begins her third term as a Belleville alderman with her re-election Monday night "happy to be re-elected . . . I enjoy being an alderman."

Returned for his second term, Alderman Jim Mecks said he is "more than satisfied" with the Monday vote. Aldermen Mecks and Smith tied for second spot on the poll. "I was disappointed that more people couldn't get out and vote but the result is fine with me."

Alderman Joe Cox, also beginning his second term, said he reads the vote as a "confirmation of the work council has done."

Alderman Art Keegan, council veteran and "mayor" of Foster Ward said simply following the vote tally, "I'm glad to be a member of the team that is running our city."

"I've never worked harder in a campaign than in this one," said Alderman George Zegouras, who polled eleventh in the last election and later appointed to council.

Brian with one of council's new faces, said people are my first priority and I thank the voters that I am one of them".

People in Belleville have indicated that they are happy with their past administration and I am delighted to be p...t of the incoming se...ration" said the tenth and final alderman to be elected, Wally Dever.

Roy Nethercott said people must be satisfied with the incumbent. "There were 14 candidates for two seats — not 22 for 10 seats," he said.

Carson McLauchlan, taking a familiar line among the losers, said he was "pleased" with the votes he polled despite the loss.

Loyalist College teacher Ray Michol said "I'm not too disappointed . . . it's been an extremely good experience."

Frank Seemungal, who polled eleventh said he was not "upset" and that he had "learned an awful lot and met with many good people".

Jeanette Whitfield said she would try again for a city council seat and polished council process in "different days ahead".

Ken Liddle said the electors had voted on the basis of "familiarity" with known aldermen and not on "ability".

Clarence Young, an environmental watch-dog who was the most active election campaign had little to say following the defeat, only that he is considering running again.

Bill Morrison, of Canadian National, said he will seek a council seat next election and that "everyone worked well".

Andre Mercier said he didn't know if he'd run in another election. "I had a lot of fun and made a lot of friends."

While early election returns seemed to indicate a voter turnout in the range of 35 to 40 percent, final figures released by the city clerk's office show 32.5 per cent of the Belleville vote was cast. The original estimate was a "ballpark" figure based on the votes for the leading aldermen.

WALLY DEVER

Dever, Knudsen Join Eight City Incumbents

Belleville voters Monday night indicated their confidence in city council that had been in office for two years.

With the exception of two councillors, who declined to run for re-election — Dr. John Gegg and Hugh Porter — all incumbents were returned handily. The first eight of the available ten council seats were filled by sitting councillors.

The two new members of council — both first terms — are enthusiastic about their opportunity.

Wally Dever (pronounced Dever, he insists), said it had been a long night, but he was delighted with the result of his first effort in politics. "A lot of work went into this election — on behalf of all candidates. We've been out every night and I'm quite happy with the result of our first effort."

Mr. Dever, principal of William R. Kirk School, said he is primarily interested in the welfare of mentally and physically handicapped individuals. Increased availability of housing and serviced land also rank high among his priorities.

The other newcomer to council, Brian Knudsen, said he is grateful for his support.

"I know that I am going to have to adapt. My aim on council will be to exercise financial responsibility — common sense. If we don't have the money, you won't see me voting to blow the budget."

Both newcomers expressed pleasure at joining the veterans on council. As the evening wore on, the race for the final two aldermanic positions bounced between candidates Ray Michol, Frank Seemungal and the two who finally made it.

By midnight, however, both new council members had passed the 2,000 mark and it was obvious that they would be the only ones to go on to the "fourteen new faces seeking to fill the vacancies on 1973's council left by Aldermen Stock and Porter.

Little Change Posted On Separate Board

Five incumbent trustees with the Hastings — Prince Edward Counties Separate School Board were returned in Belleville Monday, and one was defeated by a former board member making a comeback.

Zdenek Kvarda, trustee for the last two terms, was defeated by 25 votes less than those polled by the last place winner.

Comeback trustee was Paul Wall, a founding trustee with the two-counties board, who was defeated four years ago.

Heading the polls in the only municipality to have a separate school board election this year in the two counties was Msgr. J. P. Sullivan, with 1,016 votes. He was followed by Joseph Chappell with 855 votes, John Granville with 687, Fleming with 638, Paul Wall with 634 and Michael Collins with 578. Belleville has six seats on the 14-member board.

Of the defeated candidates, Mr. Kvarda polled 553 votes and James Wiseman 328. Mr. Kvarda placed second in the election two years ago.

The two separate school board members retired this year and were replaced by acclamation. Hugh McNulty of Tweed was succeeded by Leonard O'Leary and Rev. Walter Hamilton, who represented Prince Edward County was succeeded by Herb Brown of Picton.

Board chairman Lillian O'Connor of Marmora was also returned by acclamation. Rev. Louis Casartelli, who represents the northern part of Hastings County and Napanee district, received an acclamation.

The three Trenton trustees received acclamation for the next two-year term. They are Bert Jarrett, Frank Hyland and Austin Scott. Angus Yorke and Ivan Ross returned without a contest in Tyendinaga.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1972

Corke Tops Poll

The downtown merchant garnered a total of 3,962 votes to top incumbents Jean Smith and Stu Meeks at 3,885 to lead all candidates for city council.

When it became obvious that Mr. Corke was going to lead the polls, he said "Well, I'm glad some of the more frivolous candidates didn't get too much support.

"With the weather the way it was I'm grateful to everyone who voted — no matter how they voted.

"I'm also thankful that people realize that councillors must make decisions at times that they know are unpopular. But they must be made for the long-term good of our city," he said.

Mr. Corke, noted for his watchdog role on council, promised to continue his vigilance.

"There are a lot of things this city needs or would like to have," he said, "but first things must come first. We have to look at every proposal in terms of all the people in the city."

Seven New Trustees On Public School Board

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Hastings County Board of Education will have seven new faces when it convenes for a new two-year term in January.

This represents the largest turnover in the public school board in the six years since its inception. The board will have nine former trustees in 1973-74.

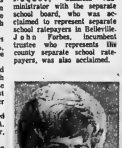
Belleville will have only two of its veteran trustees in office next year. They are Miriam Graham, who topped the Belleville polls with 3,145 votes in 80 out of 83 polls, and Don Thrush who was in fifth place for the five city seats with 1,905 votes.

Defeated incumbent was OSD teacher Michael Roberts, who served one term with the board.

City solicitor Robert Ord placed second at the polls with 2,538 votes. Third was Eloise Burr and fourth was Loyalist College psychology teacher Richard Williams.

The newcomers defeated were William Hockley, A. McDougall, Robert Ladoucier, Jake Smut and Robert Gray.

Two former board chairmen did not stand for election in Belleville this year — Mac Smith and James Parker.



In Trenton, incumbent trustee Jean Hutchison headed the polls with 25 out of 29 polls reported with 1,641 votes, followed by Brendon Junior school principal Fraser Rose with 1,324 votes. Third candidate for the two Trenton seats was Vera Greer, who polled 1,315 votes. Ralph Weaver, the other Trenton trustee on the last school board, did not run for re-election this year.

Ralph Swan polled 941 votes in Thurlow to win the school board seat. He defeated Roy Halpenny, who polled 384 votes. Milford Waller, incumbent trustee, stepped down this year.

Emerson Robinson, incumbent trustee with the board for six years was defeated in Ward 1 by George Lakey of Carlow. Ward 2 competitor Bangor Wickler and McClure, Herschel, Montague, Carlow, Huntingdon and Maye.

Final new trustee is Edgar Taquet, business administrator with the separate school board, who was acclaimed to represent separate school ratepayers in Belleville.

John Forbes, incumbent trustee who represents the county separate school ratepayers, was also acclaimed.

MIRIAM GRAHAM

Four wards returned trustees by acclamation. All were incumbents.

Earl Hawley was returned to represent Ward 3, comprising Bancroft, Faraday, Marmora and Lake, Marmora and Cashel.

Jim Spry was acclaimed in Ward 3, comprising Rawdon Township, Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, Madoc Village, Marmora and Lake Marmora Village, Deloro and Rawdon.

Ward 4, Huntingdon, Tyendinaga and Deseronto, returned Ken Liddle without a contest. Raymond Howe and Don Williams were acclaimed in Sidney, Sidney and Frankford.

Ward 5, Graham, heading the polls in Belleville said she thought the number of incumbents returned indicated that "we are doing our fairly well-educated students". She said the totals proved that people vote (about 25 per cent of the 20,000 eligible this year) are interested in school boards as in council.

Mrs. Hutchison, who topped Trenton polls, said she was glad to be back. "The next two years will be busy now, with inflation to combat."

Newcomer Ord, second from the top for the five Belleville seats, indicated that this was a hard election to predict. "There weren't that many well-known names and the voter turnout had some bearing," he said. "The public wanted to be assured there was some continuity on the board. There is a good mix between old and new."

The 17th trustee on the board, who represents the Mohawks of Tyendinaga Reserve, is appointed by the band council.

Waiting for the Word

The waiting's over now but Monday night the candidates were anxiously playing the waiting game in the city council chambers hoping to be returned to sit there again or else start fresh. Alderman Ben Corke watches the results on the board while Jack Ireland and Paul Russell, also re-elected, watch also.

Vote High Despite Weather

A day that started out badly and got steadily worse, saw the number of eligible Belleville voters turn out to indicate their approval of their council of the last two years.

A turnout estimated by city clerk Earl Dafoe at between 35 and 40 per cent of eligible voters returned all former councillors standing for office to their positions.

Hail and freezing rain greeted potential voters as the polls opened at 11 a.m. As the temperature dropped later in the day, snow took over to further discourage travel.

However, under the circumstances, the turnout compared favorably with previous years, Mr. Dafoe said.

The traditional turnout at City Hall after the polls closed, however, was light compared with previous years. A few candidates and their workers were on hand to watch the totals being tallied on chalkboards but the jostling crowds of previous elections were absent.

Election Offbeat

This year's municipal election was marked by vast differences and a few striking similarities to the one in 1973.

For one thing, in both elections voters had to trek through heavy snow to cast their ballots. But the 1973 election with a hard-hitting mayoralty race sparked more interest and a higher vote turn out than this one.

Last year 32.5 per cent of the eligible voters came out to cast their ballots while this year estimates put the turnout at between 30 to 45 per cent.

In both elections, three women ran for office: Mayor Jeffrey, Jean Smith and Vera Heimbach in 1972 and this year Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Heimbach joined by Jeanetta Whitfield, with only Jean Smith getting elected, tying for second place with Stu Meeks.

Andre Mercier was the first candidate to appear at City Hall after the polls closed at 4 p.m. He said he came so early that no one was there so he left and returned a bit later. Alderman George Zegouras was the second to arrive. He last to leave was Stu Meeks and Bill Morrison.

This year's campaign has been described as a lacklustre one and election night was no different. Twelve of the 22 candidates showed up at city hall.

But basically whether victorious or not, the majority of candidates were content to spend election night quietly with family and friends.

Stormy Election

Local elections brought the first big blow of winter to the Quinte district Monday. Voters trekked to the polls amid snow and ice and household chores whose homes were also voting stations had to keep the approaches cleared — like Mrs. Dorothy May, 75 Cedar St., Belleville.

Record Setting Spree For Prolific WHA Jet

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Hull, who last week added two records to an already astonishing career list, is the World Hockey Association's new scoring leader.

Hull took over the lead from Houston's Gary Veneruzzo in WHA record 17 shots and four goals in Winnipeg's 7-4 victory over Michigan Stags last Friday night. It was the third four-goal game for Hull since the league began play three seasons ago and marked the seventh 50-goal game of his career.

He also broke Bryan Ward's record of two years ago for the fastest 30 goals by one player, coming in the Jets' 18th game.

The output—33 goals and 15 assists for 48 points—moved Hull three points in front of Lund.

Hull's Winnipeg team-mate, rookie Ulf Nilsson of Sweden, is third among WHA scorers with 34 points—three more than Houston's Frank Hughes and four ahead of Toronto's Wayne Dillon, who rounds out the top five.

BOBBY HULL

The Jets also lead in the goal-tending statistics, with Joe Daley having stopped all but 24 of the 307 shots he faced thus far for a 2.10 goals-against average. Wayne Rutledge of the defending champion Aeros is second at 2.85.

Aeros Hook Up with Toros

Hughes Houston's Leader

TORONTO (CP) — Frank Hughes, once the property of Toronto Maple Leafs, never did make a major hockey league appearance at Maple Leaf Gardens. Tonight, he gets that chance as scoring leader of Houston Aeros.

The defending World Hockey Association champions are led by Hughes' 30 goals, take on the Toros at the Gardens in one of three scheduled league games.

Hughes, who led the Aeros with 49 goals last season, seldom receives as much publicity as the Howe family—Gordie and sons Mark and Marty.

"I've never received much recognition in comparison to the Howes and I know not to expect it," says Hughes, 25, a winger from Fernie, B.C.

"They've added more class and talent to the team but everyone else could."

Hughes was picked by the National Hockey League but was traded to the Aeros after a brief stint in the minors and then was relegated to Phoenix in the Western Hockey League. Later drafted by Houston, he didn't saw action in only five NHL games.

While at Phoenix, Hughes joined centre Larry Lund and winger Andre Hinse. The same trio stayed together when they moved to the Aeros in 1972 and they now are working their fifth consecutive season together.

All three are among the top 10 points leaders in the league. Lund has 18 goals and 30 assists for 36 points, just two fewer than leader Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets. Hughes has 11 assists to go with his 30 goals and Hinse has eight goals and 19 assists. That is a total of 94 points by the line.

But Hughes says he is finding the WHA tougher this season.

"Every team has the added incentive of beating us because we're the champions and the two points are getting harder to take away."

The Toros have lost their last three home games but have won their last two road games and still lead the Canadian division with the Aeros and Winnipeg.

New England Whalers visit Michigan Stags tonight while Phoenix Roadrunners take on the Mariners at Long Beach.

Baltimore Cougars ?

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says it has learned that a Baltimore group headed by retired business executive William Hirschfield expects to be the new owner of the World Hockey Association's Chicago Cougars by the end of this week.

The newspaper said today that the Hirschfield group will given a refundable option to negotiate a deal for the financially-troubled Cougars after picking up the club's $75,000 salary bill two weeks ago.

The Globe and Mail said hockey financial observers close to the situation indicate the Chicago players will become Baltimore players in time for their Saturday night home game against Toronto Toros.

Knights Clip Hounds 7-5

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont.(CP) — Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds had their Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A unbeaten streak ended at nine games Monday night as visiting London Knights handed them a 7-5 setback.

The victory for the Knights was the second in as many nights and marked the first time since Sudbury Wolves and the Sault have been in the Memorial Cup hunt.

Junior A league that the Knights have managed two victories while on a Northern Ontario road trip.

Sunday night Sudbury, London defeated the Wolves 4-3 on a late third-period goal by Dennis Beaudoin.

Against the Greyhounds, London struggled through the first period with a 1-1 tie after being outshot 23-3. Mike Kazmeila, scored twice for the Knights.

BLACK MARKEES TEAM

OXFORD, England (Reuter) — A black American has been included for the first time in the Oxford University rugby union team, which will meet Cambridge University, Dec. 10 at Twickenham. Ray Burse, 23, of Kentucky, was selection after a successful debut for Oxford against Gloucester last Saturday when he scored a try and made another.

GETS NEW CONTRACT

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins Monday night announced they have signed quarterback Bob Griese to a renegotiated multi-year contract. The details of the pact were not announced. Griese, whose old contract would have expired at the end of the 1975 National Football League season, led the Dolphins into the NFL playoffs four straight years and to two successive Super Bowl titles.

Blank Atlanta Flames 2-0

Share of First Habs' Reward

MONTREAL (CP) — For the first time since the 1975-76 National Hockey League season, Montreal Canadiens have defeated Atlanta Flames at the Forum.

The Flames had two wins and two ties against the Canadiens at Montreal but last 3-0 in the only NHL game Monday night.

Defenceman Larry Robinson scored both Montreal goals and goaltender Michel Larocque stopped 22 shots to record his first shutout of the 1974-75 season.

"Both teams checked closely tonight," said Montreal coach Scotty Bowman.

"Atlanta checks well. You have to play right against them."

"All the wings were coming back tonight," said Robinson. That helps us on defense.

"Our forwards were not taking any foolish chances and they were not getting caught up."

Montreal defenceman added his second goal of the night and fourth of the year with less than five minutes to go in the second period.

Vail and Montreal's Doug Risebrough got into a fight after Risebrough and Bouchard tangled near the Atlanta bench. Vail was ejected for being third man into that altercation.

Atlanta's lost defenceman Randy Manery his 10 for first penalty after he suffered a sprained ankle when checked heavily into the boards by rookie Risebrough.

The victory moved Montreal into a first-place tie with Los Angeles Kings in the Norris Division. The Kings have a 13-3-4 record while Montreal is 13-6-7. Atlanta is 13-8-5, two points behind first-place Philadelphia Flyers in the Patrick Division.

In games tonight, Vancouver Canucks are at home to Minnesota North Stars, California Seals visit St. Louis Blues and Buffalo Sabres are at Washington Capitals.

The Dolphins Deliver When Chips Are Down

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Paul Brown watched Miami's defensive Dolphins put the finishing touches on their AFC championship Dolphins beat his Cincinnati Bengals 34-3 Monday night and said: "They're back in the Super Bowl swing."

The Dolphins, who have been in the last three Super Bowls and won the last two, agreed.

"This was our best performance of the year," said Miami quarterback Bob Griese, who can win a fifth straight playoff berth by beating Baltimore Colts Sunday. The Dolphins have a 9-3 record, are tied with Buffalo Bills for the American Conference East Division lead.

Quarterback Bob Griese, who completed 11 of 17 passes for 118 yards and threw four-yard scoring passes to fullback Larry Csonka and Jim Mandich, said the Dolphins have the ability to excel in crucial games.

"It's nice to know when the chips are down that it's a ball game we're going to get it," said Griese.

"That was just like a playoff game. We've been in a lot of them and that it's a must game and we've got to execute, everything seems to fall into place. I think it gets down to pride."

The Dolphins' defence held the Bengals to just 44 yards rushing, 61 of them in the second half. Ken Anderson, the AFC's leading passer, was held to 119 yards on 14 pass completions—189 yards below his average.

Cincinnati's biggest scoring threat was killed in the third quarter when Anderson was tackled by linebacker Bob Heinz for an gain on fourth down at Miami's four-yard line.

The Bengals' only score came on a 29-yard field goal by Horst Muhlmann after Morris fumbled at the Dolphins' 22. It was the only mistake made by the Dolphins, who committed three of five Cincinnati fumbles.

The Dolphins got a 42-yard field goal from Garo Yepremian and ended the scoring with a two-yard run by Benny Malone in the fourth quarter.

A key factor in Miami's 20th straight victory at home was the running of fullback Larry Csonka, who came back from a nagging ankle injury to total 125 yards in 25 carries.

The Bengals' own playoff hopes all but died with the defeat. With a 7-5 record, they would have to win their final two games while Pittsburgh, 8-4, would have to lose both for Cincinnati to—or in the AFC Central Division.

Sabres' Trio In High Gear

Statistics released by the league today show the trio has enjoyed almost phenomenal success in collecting points in recent weeks.

The Sabres currently lead the Division 4 standings with 46 points—an 11-point advantage over the second-perienced Boston Bruins.

In 36 games this season, the Perreault, Robert and Martin combo has combined for 40 goals, 38 assists and 107 points. If they were to maintain their output for the remainder of the season, the three-some would finish with 153 goals and 329 points. The Sabres' 684 output so far is 131 goals.

The record for goals and points by a line was established by Boston's Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman in 1970-71 when they amassed 149 goals and 328 points. Esposito currently is rousing second to team-mate Bobby Orr in the scoring race with 40 points on 20 goals and 31 assists.

Defenceman Orr has 41 points, including 15 goals.

The three Sabres have scored 36 goals in their last 14 games. Robert has led the way with 17 goals, during that span and has scored at least one in each of his last seven games. Martin has 11 goals in the 14-game total, while Perreault has eight.

With the high-powered performance of their French Connection, the Sabres have won only one of their last 19 games and have won their last nine played on home ice.

Another club enjoying success is Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup Kings. The usually porous Kings of early campaigns have revitalized the league's finest goal-keeping to date.

Rogatien Vachon has allowed only 21 goals in the 15 games he has played for the Kings—this on a 1.44 average.

That's the best average after 15 games since veteran Jacques Plante's 1.33 average with Montreal Canadiens in 1956-57.

The Kings other netminder—Gary Edwards—has a 2.38 average to give the team an over-all mark of 1.85. Los Angeles leads the Smythe Division with 16 points, one more than Chicago Black Hawks.

SLICES — When Sherry Bassin isn't teaching law at Durham College in Oshawa, he's getting screen honours of a different nature to a young group of hockey players in Pickering.

Pickering Panthers, leaders in the Eastern Division of the Metro Junior 'B' Hockey League, appear to be getting the message. Pickering is a skating team and that quality has not only helped the club to the top of its division. It has also been instrumental in piling Panthers into the Ontario Winter Games.

Panthers, with Trenton Minor Hockey Association products Tim Manley, Bill Glover, and Tom Manley in the lineup, qualified for a berth in the games, with a 4-3 home-ice victory Friday over Caledonia.

Since he's a Westerner (Somme, Saskatchewan), Bassin would like nothing better than to see his club go all the way to the Canada Games which are being held in Lethbridge, Alberta.

But first, there's that important late-December date in Thunder Bay for the Ontario playoff.

Naturally, we'd like to see our Bobcats in the Canada Games. But we'll have to wait. In the meantime, all the best to Bassin and his Panthers, crowned in Metro games with the Cats.

Prices for tickets for opening and closing ceremonies at Olympic Stadium run from $8 to $40, and at Olympic Harbor, Kingston, $5 to $18.

Ticket prices for individual events range from $2 to $32. In most cases, the lower price is for standing room.

It Sure Beats Snow

After last night's snowfall a picture of this nature seems out of season. The three Bellevillians had their pictures taken in this warm scenic backdrop just a few weeks ago. While on a spur-of-the-moment vacation in Florida, in November, the three decided to try their Canadian fishing skills on the fish off the coast of Miami and Beach. Their northern techniques paid off as (left-to-right) Larry Barriage displays chark, Mel Barriage shows off sailfish and Jim Cannon holds up dolphin.

Philly?

Staub, a New York Mets' outfielder for the last three National League baseball seasons, is part of a three-way deal which also includes Detroit Tigers, say sources at baseball's annual winter meetings.

The Phillies, also of the National League, in turn sent catcher Bob Boone to the American League's Tigers. The Mets obtained centre fielder Mickey Stanley and relief pitcher Bill Slayback.

Chuckwagon Unloads

Chuckwagon Foods moved into a tie for third place in the Gas Heater Hockey League Monday night with an 8-6 drubbing of Jim's Pizzeria. In another game, Constellation upset the Yardmen 6-3 and Stanley Structures dumped Art's Exxo 7-1.

The win by Chuckwagon snapped a three game unbeaten streak by Jim's. The Pizzerians had not lost a game, but they hadn't won one either. They their last three outings were tie games.

Chuckwagon now has six wins and tie in ten games. The 13 point total gives them a share of third place with Rollins Lumber. Rollins was idle Monday night.

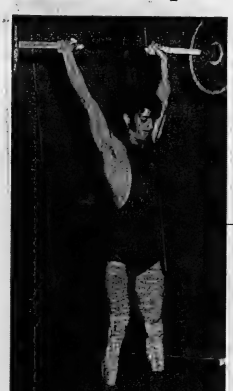
Joe Scanlan recorded the shutout.

It was doubles night for Constellation Carpets. They doubled the score on the Yardmen by getting double tallies from Keith McConnell, Greg Bellis and Ken Vos. The latter also added a trio of helpers to his two goals.

Pat Mullins, Dick Fobert and Dave Macdonald each scored once for the Yardmen.

Stanley Structures moved three points up on the 5th, second place Belleville Generals with their victory over Art's. Bob Wladyka, Ron Fuller and Ray Summers had the goals each to lead the winners while Ray Harrington added the seventh. Wayne McGeachy got three assists.



Eric Maher scored the only goal of the game for Art's.

Prior Shatters Records

Walt in Impressive Comeback

OTTAWA (Special) — While Gary Walt proved to himself and his fellow competitors that he had fully recovered from his serious leg injury, Ben Dunlop showing he made in the Ottawa Invitational Weightlifting Meet on Saturday, was slightly dulled by an even brighter moment.

While competing in the 165 and under weight class, Walt placed second. He demonstrated the confidence he had in himself and his once useless knee by coming up with a total lift of 672.25 pounds, his was the greater lifter who placed third and just 12 pounds short of his personal high of 684.

Even Walt's amazing comeback had to take second place though, as Ottawa's Russ Prior came first in the 242 pound class and smashed Canadian and British Commonwealth Weightlifting records.

Prior snatched 323.75 pounds and clean and jerked 461 pounds for an astounding total of 783.75 pounds. This mark demolished the former senior record books for his class.

Walt, who weighed in at 238.75 pounds compared to Prior's 241.5, snatched 292 pounds and clean and jerked 380.25 for his second place total.

Gary's brother, Art, is also on the comeback trail. His comeback is due to absence of his own choosing rather than that of injury. Competing in the 198 and under weight class, Art finished first with a 644.74 pound total. He snatched 292 and clean and jerked 352.75 to reach that mark. Both his total lift and snatch are new Ontario Senior records for his weight class.

Paul Barrett, showed Apollo coach, Ken Carr-Brand, "a lot of promise" as he finished first in the 181 and under weight class. Barrett, competing against six other lifters, snatched 259 pounds and clean and jerked 336.25 for a 595.25 total lift. This was well ahead of the rest of the field.

In the 165 and under class Belleville's Joel Carr-Brand finished fourth and Rob Allore came sixth.

Another brother act placed second in back-to-back competitions. Ron Hayes came first in the 148 and under weight class with a snatch of 301.75 and a clean and jerk of 239 for a total lift of 644.75 pounds.

Right behind him, in the 132 and under class, was brother Roger. He finished second in that class with a 352.5 total lift based on a 154.25 snatch and a 198.25 clean and jerk. His total was less than six pounds off that of the first place finishers.

Ranks of Cats Thinned For Meeting with Nats

While most coaches and general managers have to worry about player injuries throughout the season, for Belleville Bobcat coach, Bob Boyle, and general manager, Peter Matthews, the problem of hanging on to a full roster has taken a couple of different routes.

In the early part of the season the Bobcat officials had to contend with an influx of player resignations and requests for releases.

As time progressed and the Cats got further into regular season action the coach and the GM had to make the best of player shortages due to absenteeism—which for a while, occured at the rate of one a game.

Now that those two routes have been successfully curbed, another drawback could appeared its way to the Cats door.

This one appears to be worse than the other two. Cat officials now have to contend with shortages of players because of illness. Not just colds or flu, but sickness that knocks players out of action for lengthy periods.

Steve Keech, the former junior A player now with the local B's, has been out of the lineup for over two weeks due to problems with his sinuses. Corrective measures have been taken, and Keech is expected to be away for another couple of weeks.

New Cat rookie Brent Rancourt, from Bancroft, Sask., is out for an indefinite period. He's been missing since Thursday.

Seems he has to be a case of the chicken pox.

Hopefully most of his teammates have already had that illness or there might be an epidemic running through the Cats' dressing room.

What's next? Who knows? One thing though, if bad luck runs in threes the way it is said in, the Cats shouldn't suffer any more player shortages — for any reason.

Tonight, Belleville hooks up with Toronto Young Nationals in what promises to be an interesting confrontation. The Nats have been rebuilding their club since the big raid by the Junior A's in early 1973. Belleville too, is in the midst of revamping its ranks.

Four Toronto Groups in Bidding for Baseball Franchise

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Major league baseball officials took up the subject of expansion today while everyone waited for the big trades to break at the annual winter meetings.

Expansion was on the National League agenda with owners due to get a report from a special committee and up last August to study the possibility of additional clubs.

"There's a lot of pros and cons regarding expansion," NL president Charles Feeney said Monday. "It's going to get a lot of discussion."

The American League, on the other hand, does not have expansion on the agenda but pressing for a franchise. In recent years, two clubs have been added in the National League — New Orleans and Seattle, which have donned stadium uniforms in each league for the 1974 season.

Brown rolled three out after being awarded the SuperSonics' 119-116 victory over the San Diego Clippers Monday night.

Approval of expansion is not expected at these meetings. The major concern for now is baseball's economy is regarded as

As the major league baseball trade deadline nears, the Toronto Blue Jays are reported to be close to completing a deal that would play a split season at Baltimore and Washington.

The lack of players was emphasized Monday when the two leagues held their draft of minor leaguers. Only three players were chosen at a cost of $15,000 each.

Meanwhile there was little action on the trading front. Tommy Harper was the first player to go — dealt by Boston to California Angels for infielder Bobby Bolin.

Harper, 34, is a 13-year veteran who can play the outfield and third base, but Manager Dick Williams said he would probably use him as a designated hitter.

Harper batted .237 with five homers and 24 runs batted in last season. He has a .257 lifetime batting mark and is an accept base stealer.

Bolin, 27, fills the need of a reserve infielder following the retirement of Jack McKeithan after last season. The Angels had purchased Bolin while he also has played with the Mets, San Francisco and Milwaukee.

Illegal Time Out Hurts the Kings

There was 1:49 remaining in the fourth period when Brown and Kansas City-Omaha Kings center Nate Archibald tangled for the ball from Brown and signaled time out, then realized it was an illegal call in the last two minutes. The Seattle forward dunked the ball down the court and the Kings' momentum was wiped out.

"That call had a great deal to do with it (the last)," Kings coach Phil Johnson said after the game. "The referee is here to officiate, not be supposed to acknowledge it."

"The rules committee will look at it," Johnson said. "It's a rule that's been in effect for a long time and it's been misinterpreted by a lot of people."

Johnson said he would ask the rules committee to look at the rule.

All O. J. Wants Now, Is Super Bowl Win

To O.J., the pot at the end of the National Football League rainbow is not money, of which he has plenty or fame, which he handles with nonchalance, or rushing records, which he broke frequently last season.

O.J.'s cherished goal, the one that has eluded him in his six seasons with the Buffalo Bills, is for the team to win the Super Bowl.

"I'd like to win the rushing championship this year, but it's a secondary goal," Simpson said Monday. "The first goal is the Super Bowl."

O.J. and his team-mates might get a shot at it. The Bills and Miami Dolphins are fighting for the East Division title of the American Football Conference. And even if the Dolphins should win that battle, the 9-3 Bills are in excellent position to grab a wild card berth in the NFL playoffs.

He came out of the University of Southern California with the Heisman Trophy as college football's outstanding player in the United States in 1969 and was the first draft pick of the Bills, who had won only one game in 1968.

For the next four seasons, Simpson played for a losing team. The low point was 1971 when the Bills won only one game and lost 13.

Then, last season the team began clicking and compiled a 9-5 mark, largely on the running of Simpson, who set a rushing record of 2,003 yards and cracked seven other NFL marks.

The Bills were a running team last year. This season, with good passing from second-quarterback Joe Ferguson, they have a more balanced attack. Even with the improved passing attack, Simpson has reeled off his third 1,000-yard plus rushing season in a row. He ran for 67 yards in Sunday's 54 victory over Baltimore Colts, giving him 1,004 yards this year.

But Simpson said his personal achievements mean little now that a shot at the league title looms.

"I'd like to do better," he said, "but the fact that we're 9-3 makes me satisfied with the season.

"Over-all, I'm happier this season than I was at this time last season.

"Getting 2,000 yards satisfied my ego personally and left me with only a few goals in football," he said. "In fact, getting the 2,000 yards narrowed down to one thing what I want to attain in football—playing on a championship team."

Finished Product

Jerry Pietrobon and Fred Elwood have opened Canada's second brass bed factory in Niagara Falls — the honeymoon capital of the world. The firm encourages customers to take a hand in designing their beds and prices range from $300 to $700. In the last seven months the owners have done exhaustive research of new design ideas and hope to expand the operation into brass coffee tables, coat racks and room dividers. Jerry's wife, Mary Lou, admires one of the finished beds in the showroom. (CP Photo)

Sphinx Needs Surgery

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A simple neck operation and some surgery around the thighs, say the experts, and Egypt's fabled Sphinx will survive another several thousand years.

Drifting desert sand has been eroding the soft-stone monument and its massive, headless head is too heavy for its neck, said Nasser Hassan, chief inspector of the Egyptian antiquities department.

"But we have been working since the middle of last year.

India Turns To Oxcarts

BOMBAY CP — Thanks to the severe oil crisis, the oxcart no longer is considered by Indian planners as a symbol of their county's backwardness.

In fact, they expect that the slow and cumbersome vehicle, hitherto despised by educated Indians, will help to overcome acute transport problems.

All over India freight movement has become a nightmare following the steep rise in oil prices. While the government-owned railways have jacked up freight charges, truck companies complain that there are not enough vehicles in the market.

Motilal Mehta, a leading business man of Dombile, now uses oxcarts to bring sugar, cooking oil and other articles from rural areas to his warehouse.

Since oxcarts are not allowed to ply within Bombay limits, he has built a barge transit warehouse 25 miles from the metropolis.

Mehta says the oxcarts sometimes take 20 to 30 days to cover a distance of 800 miles.

"But you can depend upon them. There is no government red tape as in the railways," he points out.

Several leading manufacturers are switching over to oxcart transportation, partly or fully.

New Delhi Statesman reports that a big sugar mill in Coimbatore in Tamil Nadu state now uses oxcarts to distribute supplies.

The government planning commission has begun a survey of the role of oxcarts in the national economy.

The Indian Institute of Management in Bangalore has taken up a project to "modernize" the oxcart. Institute director N.S. Ramaswamy says the idea is to speed up the carts and reduce the burden on the animals.

India has more than 12 million oxcarts. Costing more than $15,000 they already carry more than 80 per cent of farm produce to urban markets.

But the use of oxcarts to transports manufactured goods had been declining for the last five years. Now, the acute oil crisis has given them added importance in the eye of sophisticated manufacturers.

"Thank God for our oxcarts. They are going to save our economy ultimately," says B. R. Reddy whose firm in Hyderabad, Andhra state, makes electric irrigation pumps.

What Every Man Wants

LONDON (CP) — A newspaper competition inviting advertised examples of useless items of conspicuous consumption gleaned such entries as: a telescopic gold swizzle stick to take the bubbles out of champagne; a gold miniature catapult for shooting paper pellets at sleepy colleagues; a gold spinning "decision top," and "a silver-plated newspaper stand to hide behind at breakfast."

like the sentry which it was supposed to be. The Sun's body and the large human head with its resulting squibs have fascinated tourists.

The Sphinx "is probably an idealized portrait of Khafre and the Sphinx is as good as new — almost," he said.

Work braces were installed to shift the weight of the head to the shoulders and the thighs were wrapped in plastic and injected with chemicals to prevent further deterioration.

"The braces were built during the Second World War to protect the Sphinx from German bombing raids, but no one knows their power were put on," Hassan said.

There are no plans to restore the missing nose, which contrary to popular belief, he added, was not shot off by Napoleon's invading troops in the 19th century.

"A religious sheik mutilated the face in 1436 because he believed the flow of people visiting the Sphinx was a sign of atheism," Hassan said.

He added:

"Without the nose, the face is more effective. It gives a feeling of time. The Sphinx represents Egypt's passage through times of crises without succumbing."

Built 45 centuries ago, the Sphinx stands before the Pyramids of Cheopsand Chenge, looking east into the rising sun.

Booby Trap

FLEETWOOD, England (CP) — Automobile seat belts are a booby trap for big-busted ladies, says Mrs. Nancy Barnes, a Lancashire trade official who finds adjusting the belt across her own 46-inch superstructure leaves her "choking for breath." She has written Transport Minister Fred Mulley urging him to exempt women with big busts from the government's proposed seat-belt legislation.

Children — that architect transformed into a monument for him from a block of rock that remained after the stones had been taken for the pyramids," Hassan said.

Standing 66 feet high and 240 feet long, the Sphinx was built during the fourth dynasty or 2,450 years before Christ.

During several periods in its history sand has threatened to cover it completely. The first attempt to clear the sand was made by French archeologist Mariette Pasha in 1886. Later in the century the sand from the neck down was removed.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, December 4

Aries (March 21-April 19) You expect more from others today than you should. You'll misinterpret a friend's independent behavior as disloyalty.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) There will be disruptions on the home front. Family members won't co-operate properly. Don't be a principal offender.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Be extremely tactful in handling subordinates today. One of them has an old grudge smouldering that's about to ignite.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Your material picture looks good for now, but there's a leak that should be plugged. It's your tendency to spend foolishly.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be far more talented and patient today with outsiders than you will be with your own family.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Another's actions will anger you. You're more likely to keep it to yourself than to let him know about it.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Most of the time you try to be fair and reasonable. Today, you're overly protective about things you deem are yours.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't push yourself beyond the limits of your energies. You'll only be frustrated if you take on too much now.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Avoid the company of one today with whom you've had cross words recently. A thoughtless remark could set off new sparks.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you know well is a trifle too curious about some matters you consider personal. He'll be prying again today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You're likely to yield today to another's wishes and act against your better judgment if you don't stand up to the pressure.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) One that you'll team up with on a chore is too independent to be a good co-worker. He'll try to boss you if you let him.

CP News Roundup

Farm Body To Define Policies

WINNIPEG (CP) — The National Farmers Union (NFU) will grapple today with a new consolidated policy statement and its members could lead to a wider rift between the union and the federal government.

Roy Atkinson of Saskatoon, NFU president, told the annual meeting Monday that the federal government appears bent on destroying the Canadian Wheat Board's orderly marketing of grain and the Crowsnest Pass freight rates on grain and took an opposing stance to that of the rulers at last month's World Food Conference in Rome.

The new union policy urges that Canada emphasize the consideration of world economics and political relationships in sales of food to be used as an effective weapon to fight human suffering and to promote world peace.

Canada was a party at the Rome conference in blocking discussion of trade policies which must be considered to effect world food security, Mr. Atkinson added.

He said the conference was a fiasco because of the political approach used by the developed nations rather than a humanitarian attitude.

The developing countries wanted to protect their own economic advantage and, as a result, failed to come to grips with human need.

Rather than consider new relationships that would assist in the distribution of food to the needy, Canada and the other "fat and happy" developed nations have tended to exploit the developing nations to "produce materials that we can use and have at very low cost."

Shun Talks

NEW LISKEARD, Ont. (CP) — The Temiskaming board of education has told its secondary school teachers that it doesn't want to continue contract negotiations, a teachers' spokesman says.

"They want to go into final arbitration," said Bob Kemball, a member of the teachers' negotiating team, in an interview Monday.

"They felt our demands and what they were prepared to pay are too far apart," he said.

Quitting Forces

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has reported to the Security Council that Peru has indicated its intention to withdraw during the first half of 1975 from the UN force keeping the peace between Israel and Syria on the Golan Height.

Last Friday, the Security Council—by a vote of 13 to 0—agreed to extend the mandate of the force for another six months.

Not Involved

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has no involvement with an advertising campaign by the Citizens' Coalition against the wage demands of the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO), Eric Winkler said Monday.

Charge Untrue

OTTAWA (CP) — Prisoner ombudsman Inger Hansen has made a special investigation into allegations of discrimination against French-Canadians at the Prison for Women at Kingston, Ont., and found nothing to substantiate them.

However, she said in a report issued Monday that "there is no doubt that programs for French-Canadian inmates are lacking at the Prison for Women."

Reorganized Egg Agency Is Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Brian Ellsworth, manager of the Ontario Egg Marketing Board says there is a need to reorganize and restructure the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) and that the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board should be persuaded to remain a part of CEMA in order to see the changes through.

The B.C. board notified CEMA on Monday of its intention to withdraw, effective Jan. 1, 1975.

Ed Morgan, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. egg board, recently told a House of Commons committee inquiring into the operation of the national egg marketing system that the B.C. board is owed more than $450,000 by CEMA and is withholding a levy imposed by the federal agency.

CEMA has said it owes the B.C. board a little more than $23,000.

"We're hopeful that the B.C. board can be encouraged to stay in the plan," Mr Ellsworth said.

No Evidence Found Of Bribe by SIU

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Allmand said federal Monday that evidence he has on the Liberal party at the centre of corruption or bribery involving the Seaforers International Union does not "cabinet minister."

Mr. Allmand told reporters that he got from the RCMP a transcript of a telephone conversation between Liberal Malcolm John Munro and Roman Gralewicz, president of the SIU.

"There is nothing to indicate any kind of corruption or any kind of bribery," the minister told reporters outside the Commons.

The statement comes after Morton Shulman, New Democrat member of the Ontario legislature from Toronto High Park, who said he will read in the legislature parts of a transcript of a police-taped conversation between Mr. Munro and an SIU agent.

He said this will buttress his charges. He has said the SIU made campaign donations to

Haldeman Says Acts Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman says orders from then-president Richard Nixon prevented his telling the Watergate grand jury that the White House had a clandestine taping system.

"You didn't mention tapes and you hoped they wouldn't be revealed," said assistant prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste Monday as he began to cross-examine Haldeman at the Watergate cover-up trial. The questioning has to continue today.

"I was under orders from the president of the United States that it would not be disclosed," said Haldeman. "It was not a matter of my hopes, it was my instructions."

But Ben-Veniste noted that Haldeman had resigned as Nixon's chief of staff two weeks before his May 14, 1973, grand jury appearance.

"I still considered myself subject to orders given to me during the term of my service to the president of the United States," Haldeman replied.

Stewart Is Annoyed

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart accused the news media Monday of creating bad feelings between the public and farmers with recent "sensationalist" reports on the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA).

In an address to the London Rotary Club, Mr. Stewart was particularly critical of reports that the CEMA hedged 28 million eggs from provincial marketing boards last summer and then allowed them to spoil.

The number of eggs spoiled represented fewer than one day's Canadian production, he said.

"But it looked far worse in the news media," he added.

All Metro Mayors Win Easy Victories

TORONTO (CP) — The political lineup of Metropolitan Toronto's six municipalities remained essentially unchanged through Monday's biennial voting that brought only a fraction of the electorate to the polls after generally lethargic campaigns.

All mayors — of Toronto City and the five boroughs—were returned comfortably and newcomers scarce at lower levels as no major issues gripped the 1.3 million eligible voters.

With interest in the tails of foul election day weather—two inches of blustery snow and rain—only 38 per cent of the electorate turned out according to a computer projection early today with several hundred polls still unreported.

"It's a terrible election," commented former city mayor Phil Givens, now Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for York-Forest Hill. "There isn't a decent contest—a horse race—for anything in the city and we're together."

Biggest casualty of the day

Mayor Returned

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Mayor Jane Bigelow won re-election to a second consecutive term Monday, defeating three opponents.

Cold, blustery weather and streets still slippery from an overnight sleet storm held down the voting turnout.

was Kari Mallette, veteran chairman of the Toronto transit Commission (TTC), who lost his $18,000 - a - year job as a Scarborough controller — Metro council member, apparently as a backlash from a battle with the Amalgamated Transit Union that culminated in a three-week strike tieup of the area's public transit last August and September.

Mr. Mallette retains his $14-a-year TTC chairmanship to the end of the year but said he feels the members of Metro council will appoint a non-elected official to the post.

Mayor David Crombie, 34, of Toronto City clobbered a pack of 10 political amateurs. He established politician chose to run against Mayor Crombie, the city's youngest chief executive when first elected two years ago.

The mayor rolled up more than 100,000 votes—compared with 81,000 in 1972—despite the fact that the Metro District Labor Council withdrew its support on the ground that council was creating unemployment in the building trades with a 1974 bylaw limiting downtown construction.

Mayor Mel Lastman in North York, largest of the boroughs, also steamrollered a pair of political amateurs. Despite sporadic acrimony between the controversial mayor and his council members in his first term, none of the borough politicians cared to tangle with the multi-millionaire operator of the Bad Boy appliance chain.

Mayor Willis Blair in East York and Paul Godfrey in Scarborough also romped home against weak opposition—both for second terms.

Mayor Philip White had more difficulty against Ald Fergus Brown in York but finally got his comfortable, and the same went for Dennis Flynn in Etobicoke. Mayor White went in for the third time, while Mr. Flynn got a second term over Ald Gordon of Controller Wilfam Stockwell.

Ontario Transit Body And National May Merge

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-discussed federal-provincial urban transit corporation seems about to get off the ground.

Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie and Ontario Industry Minister Claude Bennett said in a joint statement released Monday that they are close to agreement on merging the Ontario transit corporation with the proposed national company.

A federal industry department source said a settlement is probably only days away with no major obstacles remaining. A proposal would then be sent out to provincial governments for final agreement on the new national firm.

He said the Ontario government's magnetic levitation train system will not be included in the deal bringing the provincial transit corporation into the national firm.

The vaunted magnetic levitation train system has been at least temporarily sidetracked with the Ontario government announcement that the contract with the West German developer has been cancelled.

The two ministers said the federal government has planned from the start to make the Ontario corporation the nucleus of the national firm.

The Ontario company, recently joined by Alberta, has been operating for months and has already designed vehicles such as buses that are already being built under licence.

Ontario Arranges To Buy U.S. Power

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro announced Monday that it has arranged to buy energy reserves from the United States if they are needed during the next few weeks of peak-energy consumption.

The initial contract with the U.S. includes an option to buy up to 150,000 kilowatts of power during first week of December and up to 250,000 kilowatts during the week starting Dec. 8.

But the power will be purchased only if it is needed, a spokesman said.

A Pickering, Ont., unit was closed because of cracks in its pressurized tubes. Four others at Nanticoke, Ont., were closed after fire broke out at each of them.

Power demands were expected to reach an all-time high Monday with the approach of colder weather and fewer hours of daylight.

Orphan Arrives

ROCKWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Terri Hughes spent her first day with her new family smiling and saying hello.

A few days ago, she lived in an orphanage in Dacca, the capital of famine-torn Bangladesh.

She is blind as a result of contracting smallpox at the orphanage where she was taken as a baby after being found in a village near Dacca.

Shulman Reads Tapes

Allmand Got SIU Backing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A senior officer of the Seafarers' International Union was quoted Tuesday as having told police officers last September they could do nothing to him "because he had a senior cabinet minister in his pocket."

The quote, attributed to Roman Gralewicz, SIU president, was read in the Ontario legislature by Morton Shulman, a New Democratic Party member, shortly after Solicitor-General Warren Allmand admitted in Ottawa he had accepted political support from the SIU in both the 1972 and 1974 federal election campaigns.

But the union did so voluntarily and on a no-strings-attached basis, Mr. Allmand told reporters outside the Commons.

His comments followed disclosures that Labor Minister John Munro accepted a $500 donation from the union in June, about a month before the July 8 election. The labor minister returned the contribution in September after having second thoughts about its propriety.

The controversy over SIU donations was raised initially by Dr. Shulman as he pressed in the legislature for a royal commission inquiry into the way which he accused of helping federal Liberal officials and public servants and of running its affairs in a manner that terrorized many of its members.

Tuesday night Dr. Shulman read a partial text in the legislature of a police-taped conversation between Mr. Allmand and Mr. Gralewicz. The text quotes Mr. Munro as saying "thanks a million" after telling Mr. Allmand the SIU is donating $500 to his re-election campaign in Hamilton East.

"Well, no, it's not a million," Mr. Gralewicz is quoted as replying. "That's for the good guys. All you re-and-one get is $500."

Mr. Allmand said five-to-18 SIU members helped put up election posters in his Montreal-Notre-Dame-de-Grace riding in 1972 because they appreciated the support of recommendations contained in a government study on shipping.

The study, which produced the so-called Darling report, said Canadian coastal shipping should be restricted in Canadian vessels.

Mr. Allmand said he had been a member of the Common's transport committee since 1965 and strongly supported the recommendations even before they were released before the 1972 election.

In 1974, he said, the union offered to donate to his campaign and he accepted a contribution of $200 to $500—he couldn't remember the exact figure—after checking on the union and declaring that it would not compromise him to do so.

He said he could understand Mr. Munro returning his contribution, because of his duties as labor minister, but he did not intend to return his donation.

Mr. Shulman said he asked. He said individuals, corporations and unions are encouraged under federal law to make political donations. The contributions from the SIU helped balance other donations from the corporate sector, he said.

Dr. Shulman also said Mr. Gralewicz referred to Martin O'Connell in the taped conversation as "my old friend." Mr. O'Connell, a former labor minister, was defeated in the 1972 election and re-elected July 8. He has not re-entered the cabinet since returning to Parliament.

Mr. Allmand, who spoke before Dr. Shulman's remarks Tuesday night, said he has found no evidence of wrongdoing by the SIU or Mr. Munro.

Dr. Shulman, who has alluded to corruption and violence within the SIU, said the taped conversation between Mr. Munro and Mr. Gralewicz does not indicate bribery or corruption.

"What it does show is that the SIU has the same relationship with Munro as it has with Allmand — sufficiently cozy and friendly that the federal government will not act (to investigate the SIU despite confessed violence."

He said that in his opinion, the significance of the tape "lies in the fact that Munro had not come from negotiations between the seamen's union and the shipping companies, in which he personally sat at the table as a supposedly impartial arbitrator."

Dr. Shulman also charged that other RCMP investigators of the SIU were served with summonses in relation to charges laid against them, "they said to six police officers that nothing would come of it because too many important politicians were involved."

He said that in September, 1974, Mr. Gralewicz was interviewed by police from two forces and boasted that they could do nothing "because he had a senior cabinet minister in his pocket."

Dr. Shulman said the minister was neither Mr. Munro nor Mr. Allmand, but the RCMP has a copy of the statement including the name of the cabinet minister.

In reviewing the evidence he presented to the legislature, Dr. Shulman said it all leaves "the overwhelming impression" of a union that is very afraid of its relationship with the government.

Bangladesh Told to Halt Food Smuggling

OTTAWA (CP) — The government of Bangladesh has received a veiled warning that future Canadian food aid could be reduced if there are not effective measures to cope with food smuggling, Informed sources said Tuesday.

The sources say warnings stopped short of threatening to reduce aid but the implication is clearly contained in expressions of concern over the situation.

They add that Bangladesh, at 566 million the largest recipient of Canadian food aid this fiscal year, is well aware of the situation and is concerned about it.

PM Meets Ford

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau drops in on President Ford in Washington today to talk of many things: oil, beef, trade, inflation, petrodollars, the Middle East, international economics, armaments and other matters.

All this in about 4½ hours.

The prime minister will be meeting the new United States president for the first time and, while there are important things to discuss, the visit is officially described on both sides as a "get-acquainted meeting."

No decisions are expected on major bilateral problems, such as energy and meat quotas, and there is some indication that these will be touched upon only long enough to permit the leaders to report to their respective countries as they dealt with them.

Sources here have indicated that Mr. Trudeau will be as much interested in U.S. economic plans as in those of Ford or its leaders on the economic situation in general as he will be on such things as the new inflation against Canadian beef quotas.

The prime minister is to fly to Washington with External Affairs Minister Allan Macdonald; Ivan Head, his foreign affair adviser; officials from the trade, agriculture, energy, mines and resources and external affairs departments, and 41 members of the media.

He meets briefly with Ford at the White House at about 3 p.m. He, Mr. MacEachen and Mr. Head will chat with Mr. Ford and State Secretary Henry Kissinger until about 5:15 p.m.

The prime minister returns to his hotel and then goes back to the White House at 7:30 p.m.

Kerr Advocates Federal Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Solicitor-General George Kerr said Tuesday the federal government should order an immediate inquiry into the Seafarers' International Union (SIU).

"I feel there is certainly sufficient evidence of violence, assault and intimidation during the past six or eight months to warrant an inquiry," Mr. Kerr said in an interview outside the legislature.

He said Morton Shulman

SIU Member Tells Newsmen He Is Scared

TORONTO (CP) — Donald King of Toronto, an SIU member who listened to Shulman's report in the Ontario legislature, told reporters later Tuesday he is scared of SIU officials.

Asked why he is scared, he said: "If I go to 272 King Street (the SIU office in downtown Toronto) — don't know. I just can't describe it."

Mr. King said he recently saw an SIU official point a shotgun at a union member's head at the Toronto office, and said of has heard of SIU members being beaten.

Mr. King, who said he has been a member of the union since the late 1930s, said he has given information on the union to police.

He said he has not found much work lately as a seaman. The union, he said, has "given me a run-around" and he believed him. "DNS"—a union abbreviation for "do not ship."

Vladivostok Pact Arms Race Safer But More Costly

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Vladivostok nuclear arms agreement will mean bigger missiles, more nuclear warheads and higher defence budgets for both sides—but virtually no chance of a sneak attack, say senior U.S. officials.

Defending the agreement worked out 10 days ago by President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, they said in briefings Tuesday the pact made it all but impossible for either country to wipe out the other's weapons in a surprise first strike.

Judge Defends Wiretapping

LONDON (CP) — The jury in the Peter Demeter murder trial resumed sitting today after retiring for the night Tuesday following two hours of deliberation.

Mr. Justice Campbell Grant had told the jury to begin its deliberations after delivering his four-hour charge to the jury.

After listening to Mr. Greenspan and senior defence partner Joseph Pomerant for 30 minutes, Mr. Justice Grant recalled the jury to clarify some points on which the defence lawyers said he had erred.

Mr. Justice Grant's four-hour charge covered evidence presented over the course of the 11-week trial.

He strongly defended police use of wiretaps—a core point raised time and again by the defence during the proceedings.

"Police placed a tap on Demeter's telephone the day after his 23-year-old wife, Christine, was found bludgeoned to death in the garage of their Mississauga home in July, 1973.

The device was kept in place for about six months.

A month later, Demeter was charged with hiring someone to kill the former Italian model.

The charge is punishable by life imprisonment.

Csaba Szilagyi, long a friend of the accused, played a key role in the electronic surveillance.

Mr. Szilagyi co-operated with police and used a tape recording unit strapped to his body to record private conversations with Demeter.

Mr. Justice Grant defended the electronic monitoring.

"It is the duty of the police to collect all the evidence for presentation in a court of law," he said.

"The police had to take steps to determine the truth."

Words Called Confession

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prosecutor in the Watergate cover-up trial says H. R. Haldeman confessed to a crime while testifying under oath before a grand jury, but Haldeman's attorneys contend the FBI investigation of the Watergate break-in.

During a private courtroom conference Tuesday with Judge John Sirica and defence lawyers, assistant prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste said Haldeman "confesses to a crime, which I believe he has just done, to defrauding the United States through the misuse of the CIA for improper reasons."

Ben-Veniste was referring to Haldeman's dedication might be fore the conference that Deputy CIA Director Vernon Walters' testimony was substantially correct. Walters testified earlier that Haldeman had said the CIA should tell the FBI to curtail its investigation and that Haldeman had expressed concern that the FBI probe might be "embarrassing" and lead to "high people."

Ontario Offers $1,750 Pay Boost

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has made an offer in the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) which would raise the average annual wage of a civil servant by $1,750.

Eric Winkler, chairman of the management board of cabinet, announced the offer in the legislature Tuesday. It would cost Ontario taxpayers $32.7 million in 1975.

The one-year contract would bring the average civil servant's salary to $18,800 from $8,900.

The government has been locked in a contract dispute with the CSAO for several weeks and the union membership has authorized an illegal strike on January 1 if the issue is not resolved.

Mr. Winkler said union negotiators considered the latest government proposal "and they indicated that they wanted to discuss our position on the weekend with other officials of the CSAO."

The management board chairman said the union has not moved from its original 21.5-per-cent demand in a one-year contract.

The government's original offer was for an 18-to 25-per-cent raise over a two-year contract.

In total, approximately 13,000 employees, more than 81 per

Cost of Books Angers Taylor

TORONTO (CP) — The ministry of education ordered 18,000 books on Ontario education written by a professor but only sold 2,500 of them, the legislature's public accounts committee was told Tuesday.

Cost of the eight-volume set, written by Prof. W. G. Fleming of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE), was $155,952. Revenue sales amounted to less than $13,000.

And Prof. Fleming, who was commissioned in 1970 by the then Education Minister William Davis to write the series, was also given the right to negotiate an agreement on behalf of the ministry with the publishers, the University of Toronto Press.

"It just seems a little too easy to suit me," said James Taylor (PC—Prince Edward-Lennox).

Committee members questioned J. S. Stephen, an assistant deputy minister, on the matter, which was revealed in the auditor-general's report for 1973.

"The ministry is left sitting with more than 12,000 books," said Mr. Reid. "Obviously it's not going to be a best seller."

"It wasn't meant to be," replied Mr. Stephen.

He added that the documents were of interest in the field of education and would be referred to from time to time for ... to come.

Final Count Increases Patrick's Victory Margin

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Official election results released by the chief returning officer in Trenton reveal incumbent Mayor Robert Patrick's margin of victory over one-time councillor Paul Tripp is larger than first reported election night.

In the recount Tuesday, Mayor Patrick added 99 votes bringing his total to 1,899. He increased his victory margin to 393 votes in what was termed a close race for the mayoralty in Trenton.

Of the 10,063 people eligible to vote in Trenton, 34.5 per cent turned out to mark their ballots. The turnout, affected by the first major snow storm of the year, marks a decrease from the 40 per cent of 1972.

With the exception of Robert Manchester, who lost five votes in the recount, all other tallies remained the same for the 11 council candidates.

Take 2

The most dramatic increase over election night results was seen in the vote total of Hastings County Board of Education trustee Jean Hutchinson. Mrs. Hutchinson is a charter member of the board and served for three years prior to 1969 on the Trenton board.

She gained 260 votes, finishing almost 1,000 votes ahead of Fraser Rose. Mr. Rose stood second in the three-way race with 1,299, 213 more than being candidate Vera Greer.

In the tightly-contested three-way race for the two seats on the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, all candidates improved their vote totals. However the increases weren't enough to alter the outcome.

Worker Dead After Plant Accident

PICTON — Staff foreman with Manco Homes Systems Ltd., Lock Sky Industrial Park, Robert McFarlane, 35, died in Kingston General Hospital Tuesday following a recent on-the-job accident.

Cause of death was stated as bronchial pneumonia.

John Geary, plant manager, said Mr. McFarlane of Cambridge was injured when struck by a steel beam while working with equipment.

Details of the accident are not being released until an investigation by the ministry of labor has been conducted.

Manco Home Systems Ltd. is a new Prince Edward County industry which located in Picton about a month ago.

Library Employees Honored

Miss Salisbury is completing her 25th year with the library while Mrs. Turney is entering her 26th. Both women received the gifts from members of the library board.

Bureau to Ottawa Over LIP Funding

TRENTON —Citizens Bureau board chairman Allen Baldwin and the consumer help group's staff are in Ottawa today to discover the fate of their Local Initiatives Project grant application and to explore the possibility of funding from other sources.

A $39,000 Local Initiatives Project application was filed with officials earlier this year, but when the grant were announced recently, the bureau was not among the recipients.

The bureau has been scrambling for funds since a LIP grant sponsored by the Quinte District Labor Council expired in mid-summer. Several public appeals for funds have produced little result.

Mr. Baldwin said Tuesday the bureau's delegation will see officials in various federal ministries today.

"We'll be seeing a number of people that are interested in what we're doing," he said. Mr. Baldwin added he hoped a meeting could be arranged with George Rees, MP Prince Edward-Hastings.

He said he will be speaking to officials in the ministries of manpower and immigration, and consumer and corporate affairs and to the secretary of state department, one which earlier this year supplied a $3,000 grant.

As a result of the meetings, said Mr. Baldwin, he hopes the bureau can find some alternate funding source. Any outcome would serve as a guideline for future action by the Trenton bureau.

At present it does not have money to operate its Dundas St West offices here. Staff members have been working on a voluntary basis for the past several months.

An Experienced Council

Belleville has opted for a Council of proven worth and experience. That is the import of Monday's municipal election which, despite inclement weather heaped on a measure of voter apathy, saw eight incumbent members returned.

Along with new councillors Wally Dever and Brian Knudsen, and headed by Mayor Robin Jeffery, who was returned unopposed, they will be responsible for an on-going program of municipal development.

Among priorities in the days ahead are: road programs, new industry and servicing of industrial land, housing, greater use of public transit.

And these, in addition to such major projects as the Cannifton Road underpass, the Pinnacle St. bridge, and the Bay Bridges.

These too, in a time of rampant inflation, and a need to keep taxes down to a reasonable level.

Can all this be accomplished? It will take time if course; we are not going to witness any overnight miracles. There is talk of establishing priorities, and this makes sense in view of the several major projects that have been mentioned. The Bay Bridge is one where Government action has been promised but as yet remains undelivered. Queen's Park is strangely silent on the subject.

Where public transit is concerned, Mayor Jeffrey makes the point that more people using it would bring down the deficit. A statement of the obvious, but one to which council should address itself. How to increase passenger usage, and at the same time run the most economical service? Should the city run smaller vehicles, as one protestant candidate suggested? What about a dial-a-bus, as in some centres?

To deal with these matters, Belleville has elected people of integrity.

From a few of those who lost there were some suggestions for municipal ventures — or should we say, misventures — that are best forgotten. But there were other ideas which merit study. One, outside the city, but of interest to the whole area, would have CFB Trenton used for civilian as well as military aviation. Some 44 bases around the world have this dual use.

Overall, the entry of no fewer than 23 candidates gave the election added significance, and made the return of councillors of proven ability, and two new ones, all the more meritorious. It was democracy in action.

And now to the tasks that lie ahead.

Busy Company

Canadians on the move by air at Montreal are relieved of some of the "ground-work" en route to their plane by moving escalators built by the local plant of Stephens-Adamson.

In fact Belleville is headquarters for the Canadian operations company's Material Systems Division, Standard Products and Marine Divisions.

A brochure put out by the Engineered Systems division, gives an idea of the extent of the company's operations which, essentially, has to do with movement of people (as on those escalators) and, to an even greater extent, handling of bulk materials — everything from ore to wood pulp.

Examples of company work include: engineered systems to help move iron ore from mountains in the Western Sahara into the holds of super carriers on the Mauritanian coast of West Africa; trans-shipment systems in Vancouver; one of the country's longest extractor-conveyor systems at an Athabasca, Alta. mine to help open up a new source of valuable fossil fuel, and a one-and-three-quarter-mile underberthed materials blending system at the new cement plant in Bath.

It is all part of a continuing industrial effort by this firm, with an important segment of the work being done locally.

Some Dark Memories

Churchill: A Man of Greatness As Well As Human Error

By JOHN D. HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Those who are old enough to have many different kinds of memories of the late Sir Winston Churchill and are reminded of these in the month of the 100th anniversary of his birth.

This columnist's recall as a teen-ager in the middle war years are somewhat tame compared to Canadians who might have been overseas in uniform already—namely in the great conflict.

But one thing its best to round through the long-distance tracking of the radios of the early 1940s.

The particular event I remember best is a wartime afternoon our Sunday school superintendent went to the trouble to rustle up and then heavy-load loaded radios into the school so teachers and pupils alike could listen to Winnie, after dinner-hearing with the affairs of the Lord.

The contrast appears more distinct over the passage of better than 30 years than it did at the time when we in the Anglo-Saxon world were sure that Winston Churchill and his cause were none other than the shield of the Lord and his word brought down through Churchill's magnificently simple prose.

Any slight criticism of Mr. Churchill in those years, even while he was scheming up some military adventures doomed to failure, would have been considered close to treason.

He was a super-human leader, the man who set the stage for the essential victory, probably the last great leader we shall know who could afford to put world issues in simple black and white.

"Those who are not with us are against us," he warned.

Today we know and are being told by friends and critics that Winston Churchill was no infallible genius.

The earlier memoirs of the late Field Marshal Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial general staff tells of the number of times he had to dissuade Mr. Churchill from military moves based more on saving the British Empire—for the post-war world, than winning the war with minimum loss.

Fewer Than 200,000 Starts in '75

Housing: Dream and Reality Clash

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A wide gap has opened up between the expectations of private industry and of the government, regarding 1975's housebuilding activity.

The head of the Canadian Real Estate Association has disagreed with Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson's forecast of 210,000 housing starts next year. Georges H. Couillard, new CREA president, says a more realistic prediction would be between 175,000 and 195,000.

This year's housing starts are generally expected to total between 190,000 and 200,000.

The realtor bases his less optimistic forecast on the shortage of serviced land and the difficulty the construction industry faces in trying to build cheaper accommodation while conforming to the requirements of housing authorities.

Nor is Mr. Couillard expecting much change in interest rates on mortgage loans, currently ranging upward from about 11.5 per cent.

"There may be a slight downturn early in the new year, but it will not be of significant proportions—and 10 per cent mortgages certainly won't reappear in 1975."

The recently published annual report of the Economic Council of Canada says that 31 per cent of Canadian households are "excessively crowded."

And the CREA president agrees. He income statistic that indicates that more than 50 Canadian families cannot afford to buy a house.

But, Mr. Couillard complains, attempts is being down the cost of accommodation by means of high-density development are being blocked by "minority activist groups" and by municipal bylaws and planners.

"There is no question that high-density living is the pattern for the future, whether it be on an ownership or a rental basis," he says.

Davis and the Federal Leadership

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The old speculation that Premier Davis will run for the federal PC leadership is on the rounds again.

When the party had a big $125 fund-raising bash here the other night, Mr. Davis was one of the stars, and corridor talk about his running for the leadership was revived when Premier Lougheed of Alberta had some flattering things to say about him.

The Alberta premier, of course, has been one of those most prominently mentioned as successor to Robert Stanfield and some observers were reading into his remarks that perhaps he wasn't interested and might back Mr. Davis instead.

What Mr. Lougheed's intentions may be certainly isn't known in the writer.

It has always been assumed by me that he probably would go after the job, and that if he did he would be a leading candidate.

However, being a bit closer to the scene with Mr. Davis I have further assumed that he probably would go after the job though he probably wouldn't finally make up his mind until much closer to the actual convention.

Certainly he did want the job sure.

You will recall that in addition of the 1967 convention, which Mr. Stanfield won, there was a lot of talk about a Davis candidature.

And this was serious talk.

He finally decided against going after the job, it was assumed at the time, for a variety of reasons.

One was that he hadn't had much national exposure. He was still only minister of education in those days and was little known outside Ontario.

Then he had still only 37, which combined with his lack of experience meant he was pretty young to take over the leadership of the national party.

Now at 45 he has had the exposure and the experience of leading a government for four years.

But then his track record hasn't been all that good.

One would say that to be a party national leader he would first need a dramatic election win and his chances of getting that of course look too good at this moment.

In fact, one would say his chances don't look good at all for either a provincial win either there or in the federal field.

Tradeau Visit to U.S.

Tennessee Republican Senator Wants Tax Edict on Oil to Canada

By PETER SUCKLEY
Prime Minister Trudeau faces a potentially tough job selling Canadian policies on oil exports and other trade matters when he meets this week with a group of United States senators.

The problem stems from his first visit here in more than three years, is due to hold talks Wednesday with President Ford and State Secretary Henry Kissinger, then have breakfast with a group of senators the next morning.

In a confusion that seems typical of the way the senators operate, the list of those attending the Trudeau breakfast was still being drawn up Monday.

Senator Charles Mathias, a 52-year-old liberal Republican from Maryland, is in charge of the guest list. He drafted a tentative list of 20 colleagues from both Democratic and Republicratic parties, but most of those invited were still said to be uncertain whether they could make it.

The Tennessee Republican was the chief instigator of a letter sent last week to Kissinger, proposing that the United States either tax or curtail oil flowing to Canada by pipeline across American territory unless Ottawa agrees to end its export tax on oil.

Brock's staff report they are preparing position papers for the senator, backing up on contention that all exports of oil makes Canadian oil among the highest-priced in the world, that Canada is unfairly soaking U.S. consumers to subsidize Canadian exports, and that proposed cuts in Canada's exports will make it hard for U.S. situation worse.

Such criticisms have not aroused much support at the state department. White House informants say that while Ford is unusually sensitive to congressional opinion and pressures, he is more likely to go along with the Kissinger view.

The state department has tended to accept Ottawa's argument that an export tax is justified, without agreeing that it ought to be as high as the current $2.30 a barrel.

Despite the proposed cuts, state department officials have publicly characterized Canada as a dependable supplier and have understandably praised Canada's domestic energy priorities.

In fact, although neither side feels even remotely satisfied with the development, U.S. imports of Canadian oil have already begun to a level of about 800,000 barrels daily—the level Canada proposed to have effect Jan. 1.

Several of the senators invited to the Trudeau breakfast, such as Republicans Jacob Javits of New York and Democrat Walter Mondale of Minnesota, have come from states which rely on Canada for part of their supplies. Both are regarded as generally friendly to Canada—at least before the export tax.

Another who has invited Democrat Frank Church of Idaho, can be expected to raise the question of Canadian livestock exports if he makes it to the breakfast. Officials of other farm - state congressmen Church has been actively concerned about the effects of foreign restrictions on U.S. livestock sales.

One senator who might have made a lively addition to the breakfast list has apparently not been invited.

Senator Vance Hartke (Dem., Ind.), has clashed occasionally with visiting Canadians over such issues as the Canada-U.S. automotive agreement and his efforts, backed by organized labor in the U.S., to curb foreign imports through strongly protectionist legislation.

Hartke's lack of solid influence in the Senate was illustrated last week when the staff of a Senate committee watered down his call for a free-trade agreement with Canada.

Under the original Hartke proposal, Ford would have been "directed" by Congress to negotiate such an agreement—an idea that Ottawa would probably have rejected out of hand.

But the Hartke proposal was rewritten by committee staff to say that the president should start negotiations with Canada, and the whole idea was dropped to the last paragraph of a 333-page report on trade which, however, is officially ignored by the Senate.

Japanese Getting the Brush-Off

Brockville Recorder and Times

The conglomerate Japanese have been called the "Yankees of the Orient," but they are getting the Yankee - go - home treatment in recent years.

Since 1970, when research economist Misao Sakurai in the Canada Economic Journal, the office of a Japanese enterprise has destroyed or has permitted to fall into disrepair 6 plants in Australia, 5 in Canada. The Honda Motors subsidiary was ordered to withdraw and the affiliates of Mitsui & Co. and Mitsubishi & Co. were nationalized. In Indonesia, the Japanese Toyota Motor Co., Nippon Paint Co. and Honda Motor Co. were burned in anti-Japanese demonstrations.

In Qatar, the Qatar Oil Co. was ordered to liquidate after a demand was raised by local enterprises for participation in its management. In Abu Dhabi, the Abu Dhabi Oil Co. was ordered to sell 60 per cent to local control. In Kuwait, Arabian Oil Co. was compelled to accept 63 per cent local capital participation, and a similar demand has been made by Saudi Arabia.

In Ethiopia, antigovernment guerrillas destroyed the office of Nippon Mining Co., forcing it to suspend operations. In Zaire, the subsidiaries of Nissan Motor Co. and Toyota Motor Co. were taken over. In Thailand, Japanese consumer goods were requested to withdraw their staff members and families back to Japan.

Japanese banks have kept pace with the increasing volume of Japanese investments abroad. Sakurai found these to have exceeded $10 billion. The total is expected to exceed $40 billion by 1980.

As noteworthy fact, says Sakurai, is that private corporations account for about two-thirds of these investments, and is in striking contrast to the United States, where the larger overseas investments are concentrated in the hands of more than 50 per cent and less protected by various treaties.

A number of moves have been made toward multinational agreements to protect overseas investments. The World Bank, for example, is studying a plan to set up an International Investment Insurance Association.

In the meantime, expropriation or nationalization by the burgeoning recipient nations continues to be the trend.

Mixed Reaction to Title of 'Ms.'

That's not so "only" for no less an authority than Gallup found that 39 per cent of single women and 62 per cent of separated or divorced women in a sample preferred "Ms."

Miss or Mrs. are status terms left over from an age when they indicated male property rights in women. "Miss" means hands off, she belongs to her father. "Mrs." "Mistress" in the days meant hands off, she belongs to her husband. "Gentlewomen" and "Lady" were terms to denote the rank of the woman or her husband or both, and were restricted to a chosen few. Man had status terms, too, based on hereditary rank, not marital status, but the double standard on sex made it convenient for men to leave their marital status ambiguous in many situations.

Most of the hereditary status terms have withered on the vine; their old meanings in the United States, though they kept them for genealogists after the new-born nation proclaimed as "self-evident truth" that all men are born equal.

More Girls Involved in Sport

The Christian Science Monitor

In United States and Canadian high school sports, the lion's share of attention and money has long gone into programs for boys.

The tilt is still overwhelmingly in the boys' favor. But girls are now getting into school sports in unprecedented numbers.

In the past two years the number of girls in high school athletic programs has soared 175 percent, compared with a scant 3 per cent increase for boys. Outdoor track and field attracted the largest group of new girl athletes, but the most popular competitive sport remained basketball — with volleyball, softball and tennis following track and field.

Not all American and Canadian girls may turn out to be Billie Jean Kings or Olga Korbuts, just as not all boys turn out to be Joe Namaths or Bobby Orrs. But the trend toward greater sports-participation for girls is welcome in a society moving gradually to recognize women's full talent.

Egg Study Deadlock Foreseen

OTTAWA (CP) — There is increasing evidence that MPs on the special Commons egg committee will be unable to agree on ways to unscramble the country's troubled egg marketing system.

Farmland Conservatives on the committee said in a statement Tuesday that the egg hearings should be reopened before any recommendations in a report is turned in to the Commons.

And they said they could not agree with a suggestion made by provincial agriculture ministers that the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency be run for the next two years by a powerful new five-man committee.

The eight Liberal MPs on the committee are expected to endorse the suggestion.

Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville), author of the statement backed by fellow Conservatives Allan Lawrence (North-umberland — Durham), Jack Murta (Lisgar) and Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte), said the idea of running CEMA by committee is contrary to the spirit of federal legislation which allows farmers to sell their goods through national marketing agencies.

"Such action relegates the egg industry to that of a public utility," he said.

"The control of the egg marketing agency must remain in the hands of the producers, as was intended by the legislation."

LIP Pressure Is Alleged

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Robert Andras changed his mind under political pressure from a cabinet colleague and approved a $162,000 Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant in North Vancouver, Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) said Tuesday.

The project, a senior citizens' activity centre, had been rejected on six counts by Mr. Andras and LIP officials, Mr. Cossitt said.

He released copies of correspondence between Mr. Andras, LIP officials and former Environment Minister Jack Davis which, he said, proved "gross political interference" in LIP operations.

Ottawa Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government rejected suggestions Tuesday that the government of Quebec has the final say on uranium exports to France.

Any uranium export agreement between the province and France will require approval from Ottawa before it goes into effect, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald told reporters.

TORONTO (CP) — Foreign investors have gained quick landed-immigrant status to avoid payment of Ontario's land transfer tax, a committee of the legislature was told Tuesday.

Graham Stoodley, revenue ministry legal director, said the ministry has learned "a number of people—people of considerable means—were able to obtain landed-immigrant status rather more quickly than the ordinary family," to avoid payments.

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday the Canadian penitentiary service is investigating the use and effectiveness of solitary confinement in prisons.

Farmers Union Backs Board For Wheat Sales

WINNIPEG (CP) — The National Farmers Union (NFU) reaffirmed its support for the orderly marketing of grain through the Canadian wheat board Tuesday after being told there is a possibility the board may not be in existence within five years.

Dr. R. L. Kristjanson of Winnipeg, a wheat board commissioner, told delegates at the union's annual meeting that farmers who exercise their option of selling outside the board will weaken it.

"If farmers will support the wheat board, then it will be there in five years," he said.

The NFU opposes the federal government's feed grain policy which allows farmers to sell to the Canadian Livestock Feed Board. The union argues that the move weakens orderly marketing of grain.

Produce Is Plea

TORONTO (CP) — A leading Canadian banker said Tuesday the way to fight inflation is by increasing the supply of goods and services rather than by restrictive monetary policies.

Allen Lambert, chairman of the Toronto Dominion Bank, told the annual meeting of shareholders: "We have as much to fear from the accidental combination of many nations each exercising a policy of severe monetary restraint is an attempt to cure inflation, as we do from the disease of inflation itself."

Movie Roles Reflect Women's Lib Backlash

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Filmmaking is a world without women, possibly as a backlash to women's recent reluctance to take only a supporting role in society, a feminist film conference here agreed.

When women do appear in movies, they are shown as "accidental, innocent, and unreal" and usually as whores or other sex objects, often getting raped and beaten, the panelists said.

The conference, Film-making U.S.A.: A World Without Women, is running concurrently with the Lincoln Centre Film Festival and is co-sponsored by the National Organization of Women (NOW), the women's division of the Screen Actors' Guild and the New York Public Library.

Among the panelists were actress Jean Hackett, star of "The Group and the Broadway production Night Watch; screenwriter Eleanor Perry, who wrote David and Lisa and Diary of a Mad Housewife; and film critic Molly Haskell, who wrote From Reverence to Rape: The Treatment of Women in the Movies.

American films in recent years have been by, for, of and about men—such as Deliverance, Papillon, The Sting, Scarecrow and Serpico—with few roles for women, the panelists said.

This may be a "subconscious" backlash in the wake of the liberation of women," Miss Hackett told the overflow audience of about 300.

"Film has really stimulated women. As an actress, I'm flailing around" (for work).

One of the pioneers of the event, Midge Kovacs of NOW, said: "It's almost like a backlash."

Filmwriter Perry noted that in the Writers' Guild, there are some 2,830 men and less than 198 women; in the Producers' Guild, there are 3,000 men to eight women; and the Directors' Guild has some 2,365 men to about 30 women.

"Producers and directors say they have their fingers on the pulse of the audience, but they have their fingers on their own pulse and their own visions and fantasies," Miss Perry said.

Top film and union executives were invited to the event, but NOW sponsors said none came.

Miss Hackett, in narrating a slide show of sex-biased films, said:

"The time has come for changes in society to be reflected on the screen. Craft unions, film executives, producers, directors, writers and actresses must create meaningful roles for women. In films which speak about real women.

"We must demand our rightful place. Women are a very vocal audience and filmmakers we must show the way," she said.

But one of the panelists ebobgled Dr. Phyllis Chessler, who wrote Women and Madness, said:

"To me a woman be strong is important to womens mental health.

"We have nothing to identify with. We must take she sway our violence, as we have child abuse or spider ladies I wish I had the money back I spent on films that made us all crazy."

The psychologist said the only roles for women were "crazy little girls whose talk cannot be understood and when they get killed anyway— I'm so tired of it."

Doris Clark

Coffee Break Bad News

A restaurant in 1857 advertised "a drink called Coffee which is a very wholesome and physical drink, having many excellent virtues.

"It closes the orifice of the stomach, fortifies the heat within helpeth digestion, quickeneth the spirit, maketh the heart lightsome,' is good against sore coughs or colds, rheumatism, consumption, headache, dropsy, gout, scurvy, and many others."

While today's medics might take a dim view of those extravagant claims, a "cuppa" still means friendly hospitality at home, and a welcome break at office or factory - even if some of us find we must resort to the decaffeinated kind - which is being sold more and more.

Dear Doris: I have a friend who lies to me and everyone else. We all like her but we are getting fed up with her lies. How could we help her to quit lying?

A Helpful Friend.

Dear Friend: You can be a real friend to this person by taking her aside and explaining that everyone is aware that she seldom tells the truth. Tell her you are sorry that people are beginning to distrust a person who is otherwise so nice.

Any change has to come from within your friend. Perhaps she doesn't even realize she is being so untruthful. By telling her tactfully, you may be setting her in the right direction for self-improvement.

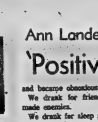
Dear Doris : We have married for about two years now. We were married at the law courts, with only two of our friends there to witness our signatures.

We have had a lot of difficulties with my mother-in-law and were separated once but we have resolved our problems and are getting along well now. Would it be proper to have a church wedding at this late date?

Also I have a son - age two years.



Unchurched.

Dear Unchurched: Better talk it over with your clergyman. If your church does not recognize civic marriage, a religious ceremony is definitely in order - just a quiet affair with family and close friends.

But the minister of a church which does recognize a civil marriage might suggest not a second wedding, but a renewal of some of the vows with the church's blessing - also just a family affair for your own and your husband's personal satisfaction.

Congratulations on working out your difficulties. It is not the size of the wedding but the quality of the marriage that follows that is really important.

(We now have some understanding or why people act as they do. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper about your enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Ann Landers

'Positively Negative' Wisdom

Dear Ann Landers: Our young teen-agers read your column and I am so pleased they do. You tell them the same things their parents do, but somehow it sounds "different" from Ann Landers. They listen to you.

As a token of thanks I send a little bit of wisdom I ran across recently in a small local publication. It was written by a friend. I hope you will print it here it is:

POSITIVELY NEGATIVE

We drank for happiness and became unhappy.

We drank for joy and became talkative.

We drank for sociability and became argumentative.

We drank for sophistication and became obnoxious.

We drank for friendship and made enemies.

We drank for sleep and awakened without rest.

We drank for strength and felt weak.

We drank "medicinally" and acquired health problems.

We drank for relaxation and got the shakes.

We drank for bravery and became afraid.

We drank for confidence and became doubtful.

We drank to make conversation easier and slurred our speech.

We drank to feel heavenly and ended up feeling like hell.

We drank to forget and were forever haunted.

We drank for freedom and became slaves.

We drank to erase problems and saw them multiply.

We drank to cope with life and invited death—Daily Reader

Dear Reader: Your friend sounds like a man who knows what he's talking about. It was good of you to share his wisdom. Thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to comment on your advice to the young bride who took her teen-age sister in to live with her when their parents were killed. It seems the 15-year-was uncontrollable-gave her older sister gray hair and was ruining her marriage.

Your suggestion that "perhaps a foster home would be the best place for Dee" was, in my opinion, not very good. Before resorting to foster placement, why didn't you recommend seeking out other blood grandparents, even Dee's stepfather, despite her sister's allegation that "he doesn't want Dee."

In our family-destructive culture, it seems to me that your powerful influence ought to be used to strengthen blood-related family ties—Dr. R.S.M., Parishment of Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois

Dear Dr. M.: Those "blood relatives" you refer to were certainly aware of the death of the teen-ager's parents. If they were interested in making a home for the girl they would have made their wishes known.

"Blood-related family ties" were often more bloody than related.

I've received many letters from children reared in foster homes, expressing tremendous affection and deep appreciation for their foster parents. I believe my advice was correct, but I thank you for taking the time to express another point of view.

Dog Dash

HIGH WYCOMBE, England (CP) — A flash of lighting sent Jessie the dog fleeing from the Sayer household here. The panic-stricken dog leaped into a nearby car which later was involved in an accident 30 miles away. During a three-week search for the pet, the Sayers finally were told by police that a dog had been seen running from the car. Through shop-window advertising in the area of the accident, Jessie was ultimately recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Barrett

Barrett — Preston

Friendship United Church in Demorestville was the setting for the autumn wedding of Victoria Lynn Preston and Michael Joseph Barrett performed by Rev. James Cullen and Rev. Kenneth Stitt.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Preston of Demorestville and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barrett.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of crepe over sharkskin with an empire waist, scoop neck, long full cuffed sleeves and A-line skirt, trimmed with Alencon lace. A full-length train was also bordered with lace, as was the waistlength veil and crown headpiece. She carried yellow rosebuds and orchids.

Lori Preston, the bride's sister, and Peggy Vermilyea were bridesmaids in gowns identical to the maid of honor's. They carried yellow mums encircled with white lace, and wore wide-brimmed hats.

The bride's cousin Tammy Mowbray was flower girl in a gown of orange sheer matching the bridesmaids' hatbands. She carried a basket of orange and white daisies.

After a trip through New York state, the newly-married couple settled at RR 1, Carrying Place.

DOROTHY ENID HAMILTON received a B.A. degree in English and Psychology at recent convocation ceremonies at the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg. Ms. Hamilton's most recent teaching positions before going to Winnipeg were in King George School in Belleville, and in Shannonville. She is now teaching at Central North Junior High Upgrading in Winnipeg.

MARMORA BAZAAR

Celebrating the 100th anniversary of St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, the United Church Women held a successful Centennial Tea and Bazaar, Friday afternoon, November 29.

Visitors were welcomed at the entrance by president Marie Cook, Nancy Peters, wife of the minister, and Centennial Chairman Helen Meiklejohn.

The last dresses worn by many of the women added a colorful touch to the room which was decorated by red and white gingham tablecloths and coal oil lamps which centred each table.

A Centennial quilt, made by one Unit of the U.C.W. was given a place of honor on the south wall of the hall. Made in two shades of mauve and pink, the quilt contained the names of all the congregation embroidered in the petals of the flowers. A two-tier birthday cake created by Zella Reynolds in honor of St. Andrew's Anniversary, was also on display.

Books on the history of St. Andrew's and packages of hand-dishes bearing a likeness of the church on the cover were available as souvenirs of this historic year. Mrs. Meiklejohn made the original sketch for the hand-dishes. Antiques were arranged in one room for viewing, and a good variety of home baking, knitted and sewn articles, books, gingerbread men and homemade candy were available for shoppers.

General convenor for the event was Marg Gray.

BELLEVILLE ART ASSOCIATION

The Belleville Art Association held its monthly meeting November 27 at Corby Library. Officers for the coming year are: Barbara Whelan, president; Marjory Rinearson, vice-president; Ethel Knight, secretary; Peg Kearney, treasurer.

Two movies about Canadian artists were shown, followed by refreshments and a social hour.

NEWCOMERS' CLUB

Bridge Street United Church provided the location for the Belleville Welcome Wagon's Newcomers' Club November 27.

Margaret Hallam, Betty Gray and Wendy Sutherland represented the Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, presenting a program of film and talk about the treatment of asthma and the cause -- smoking -- of emphysema, an eventually fatal disease.

After the films a question and answer period dealt with the problems of respiratory illness.

The arts and crafts group within the Newcomers' Club have volunteered to teach suitable crafts to patients in the rehabilitation department of Belleville General Hospital.

Holiday Cookies!

Baking holiday goodies: It's a happy time of year for the family cook. It's also the time we most often become mesmerized with the food budget – at least we did in others years. With sugar and nut prices what they are this year, though, many people will be choosing their goody recipes with more care.

Here is a special selection of favorite holiday cookie, and cake recipes chosen with an eye to economy as well as layour.

Sesame Seed Cookies

½ cup flour
one cup margarine three egg yolks
¾ cups sugar
½ tsp. baking powder
¼ cup milk
1 tbsp. vanilla

Brush with egg whites, roll in sesame seeds. Place on lightly greased baking sheet and bake at 350 for 12 to 14 minutes. This recipe, which may be doubled, makes 10 dozen small cookies. Not too sweet, the cookies are best after several days, keep well up to a month. Store in tightly covered container with waxed paper between layers. Cost: less than 15 cent per dozen.

EMPLOYEE/EMPLOYER RIGHTS: LAYMAN'S GUIDE TO ONTARIO LABOUR LAW by Ernest Rowet.

Salmon Found In Thames

LONDON (CP) — A nine-pound female salmon has turned the clock back 141 years

Survival For Some

LONDON (CP) — Wildlife enthusiasts, headed by Prince Philip, were attending the showing of a conservation movie called Survival. Just before the Queen's husband arrived, a 19-gun salute shattered the silence. Rather then risk an embarrassing deposit on the royal person, one of the organizers grabbed an airgun and British wildlife had one fewer pigeon.

in the River Thames. The fish, found in the fresh-water intake of a power station, is the first of its breed caught in the Thames since 1833.
Salmon spawned in the river until the end of the 18th century when pollution began to poison the water. In the last 15 years the pollution trend has been reversed, at a cost of £300 million (£90 million) and today the fact that a salmon has made the 80 miles up river from the sea is seen as a milestone in pollution control.
A special salmon trophy is to be awarded by the Port of London Authority in the Thames Water Authority, the public body now responsible for pollution control in the tidal Thames. The discovery of the fish is of great significance to water authorities all over the world, who look to the Thames as a leader in the field of pollution control and the reclamation of an industrial river.

Sex Offenders Hated Outside and in Jail

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Sexual offenders are hated, both inside and outside prison, in prison, they must be segregated from the rest of the convicts.

"The other prisoners put sexual offenders through all kinds of hassles and many even kill them," said Dr. William Marshall, a Kingston psychologist and director of a 12-week therapy program for sex offenders at Kingston penitentiary.

"They beat them up, knock them down and make them the butt of all sorts of things, and they have no companionship.

Dr. Marshall said society doesn't actually care about the sex offender.

"They don't like them and find them repulsive and non-human." . . . What' the penitentiary service does by and large is a reflection of society's values."

Even the prison staff has contempt and fear of sex offenders.

Psychiatrist Dr. Robert McCaldon, who directs group therapy for the sex offender's program, said he sometimes thinks that staff members are as guilty as other prisoners of harassing sex offenders.

X is a highly intelligent, 42-year-old former engineering technician who said he has had sexual relations with almost 30 children during the last 30 years. The technical term for his illness is paedophilia.

Y is a sexual assault is his early 30s who has never had intercourse with a woman. His frustration and hatred were caused by a sexual desire for younger males. When these feelings built up, he would go out and beat down something.

Z is a rapist, serving a 36-year sentence on charges including rape, indecent assault and armed robbery.

The treatment of sexual offenders is touchy, said Dr. Marshall, because it raises questions in the public mind of behavior modification.

There are about 45 prisoners in the program. Treatments range from simple sex education to shocks to discourage aberrant sexual fantasies.

The most scientific involves a penometer—a metal band that encircles the prisoner's penis to measure the flow of blood during even slight sexual arousal. The penometer is connected to a polygraph (lie detector) machine "with a graph readout.

Using this equipment, the prisoner's sexual preferences can be determined. It is used on about half of the 45 prisoners in the program.

The therapist flashes slides on a screen and the prisoner's sexual response is noted. Subjects range from rape scenes and partly clothed women and children in neutral ones such as trees and houses.

Prisoners listen to tapes of their sexual fantasies. Then, using the case of the rapist, the tape and slides showing rape are played back to the prisoner.

At the beginning of treatment, the therapist allows the tape to run through to the sexual attack, and then says "stop." An electric shock is administered to the prisoner's calf (the strength of the shock is determined earlier by the prisoner).

The rape-scene slide is then removed and one of an alluring woman is substituted.

As treatment progresses, the prisoner will be shocked earlier and earlier in the fantasy until he is shocked just for thinking about rape.

Does the therapy work?

Dr. Marshall said of 19 patients, only two failed to adhere to acceptable behavior after therapy.

Thirty prisoners have graduated from the year-old program financed by the Canadian penitentiary service. Four have been released from prison. One was returned to prison on a property offence.

What about the prisoners themselves? Do they think therapy works?

X, the pedophile, said he doesn't respond well to therapy that uses inappropriate pictures accompanied by shocks to "turn him off" sex with children.

"I don't get aroused by pictures . . . some little street urchin or hardened pin-up babe. I'm supposed to get involved with that?"

The average age of X's bed partners was 11.5, ranging from seven to 16 years old.

"I'm basically heterosexual . . . but at an early age (in boarding school) boys were a substitute for women and then became primary sex objects.

"What decent girl would want a man with my background and reputation?"

Y, the arsonist, said the group therapy helped free him from shame and fear of rejection because of his paedophilia.

"People in the group were up for rape, beating wives or children—things worse than I'd ever think of doing. I heard some of them and I thought I was pretty lucky."

Old Government Building Is Getting a Facelift

OTTAWA CP — The Langevin Block, said to be the first departmental building erected by the federal government off Parliament Hill, is getting a facelift.

The massive 85-year-old sandstone building, across Wellington Street from Parliament's East Block, has been empty since the external affairs department moved out in September, 1972. It is being refurbished for the Privy Council Office, the staff of the federal cabinet, at a cost of $3.4 million.

The project is part of a government program of rehabilitating heritage buildings here and across the country.

Eric Langley, public works architect on the project, says it is one of those buildings that people pass every day but seldom favor with a second look.

It's a thick-walled four-storey structure that has been sitting in a prime piece of downtown real estate since its completion 85 years ago.

Mr. Langley feels it is an important building from an architectural point of view.

It was designed by Thomas Fuller, chief architect of the public works department, who also designed the original Centre Block of the Parliament buildings.

Fuller had a grand design for the building, Mr. Langley says. This is evident as soon as a visitor enters the front door off Wellington Street. A wrought-iron staircase rises grandly through the centre of the building, flanked on each level by polished granite columns.

From the staircase an arched corridor runs in both direction the length of the building.

Mr. Langley and his fellow architects say they are intent on preserving these original design features incorporated into the Italian-Romanesque-style structure in the 1880s.

The building was named for Sir Hector-Louis Langevin, a Father of Confederation and public works minister while the building was under construction.

Working conditions for civil servants in the buildings were not exactly ideal. In line with a government report, the clerks worked in huge rooms 70 feet long, overseen by supervisors sitting in front of high desks.

It is believed coal-burning fireplaces at either end of the rooms were the only source of heat, even in winter.

A few years after the building was completed, somebody in the works department apparently had a change of heart. The large rooms were subdivided and central heating was installed.

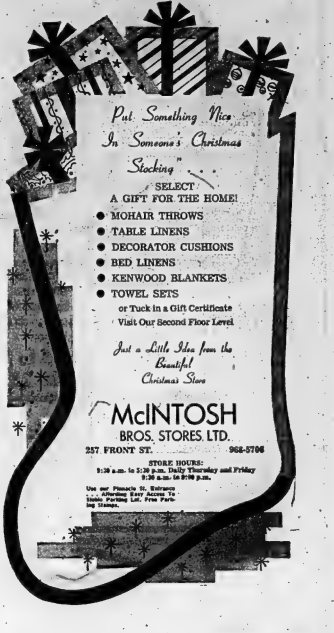
By the time the recent decision was taken to refurbish the building, deterioration had set in. Federal bureaucrats complained of poor lighting and those working in the top floor had to contend with a leaking roof.

When members of the Privy Council staff move in next September, these problems should have disappeared. The building will be air-conditioned and the offices will be re-jiggered. There will also be chandeliers in each office, says Alastair Gale, an architectural consultant on the project.

The roof will be repaired but the green copper on the building's sloping eaves will be retained, Mr. Langley says. Replacements for copper roof ornaments are being specially made.

To make sure these ornaments conform with the oxidized green of this roof and others in the Parliament Hill area, they are being given special chemical treatment.

One can no longer depend on sulphur dioxide in the atmosphere to tarnish the metal, in part because of improved pollution control at the Eddy pulp mill in nearby Hull, Mr. Langley says.



Public works officials hope to stay within their $3.4-million budget, but the precedent is not encouraging.

The original estimate for the Langevin Block in 1883 was $250,000 but by the time it was completed in 1889, the cost had soared to $710,000.

Facelift

The Langevin Block, said to be the first departmental building erected by the federal government off Parliament Hill, is getting a facelift. The 85-year-old sandstone building has been empty since the external affairs department moved out in September, 1972. The project is part of a government program of rehabilitating buildings in Ottawa and across the country. (CP Photo)

Transit Ideas Varied

Put commuters into capsules and shoot them onto passing trains. Cushions on top of the trains would soften the landings.

A strips of electromagnets to propel vehicles.

How do these ideas look as solutions to the mass transit problem?

They are among more than 12,000 responses to a countrywide advertising campaign by Atlantic Richfield Co. of Los Angeles, asking for ideas on public transportation.

Some are fantastic suggestions from children and others are seriously thought-out proposals by business and professional people.

"There is some junk," said Gjergo V. Kristo, an Arco attorney who heads the team handling the mail. "But the percentage who take it seriously is very high—70 per cent to 80 per cent or more. The ideas may be obsolete, or far-fetched, but most are serious."

Arco says it will publicize some ideas and pass others to appropriate government agencies.

A team of readers discards ideas which are obviously impractical or already in use. Ideas that seem to have a glimmer of hope are sent to a second review board composed of graduate students in transportation and urban planning.

The ideas that survive the second screening go to a panel of professors of urban planning, architecture and transportation.

Not all of the ideas are new. Robert E. Spaulding, a retired architect of Mount Prospect, Ill., sent in a drawing he did in 1930 when he was fresh out of college with no job. The drawing depicts rail cars traveling high above city streets, suspended from sideways attached to building facades.

One man suggested that commuters use single-seat, wedge-shaped cars that could be rolled onto railroad flatcars from alternate sides and carried downtown.

Interest Conflict Seen Over Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs are pressing for tighter conflict of interest rules in the wake of disclosures that directors of the Export Development Corporation (EDC) held financial interests in companies benefitting from $194 million in corporation financing.

The MPs say they want to make it less tempting for senior government officials and advisers to make personal profits at public expense.

Their campaign is focussing on two bills now before Parliament to substantially increase EDC financing limits and to establish a new federal business development bank.

Sinclair Stevens, (York-Simcoe) said Tuesday neither bill is stringent enough in controlling potential conflicts of interests among the business and industrial executives represented on both agencies.

Legislation governing the two bodies requires that directors declare any interests and refrain from participating in decisions involving companies in which they are involved.

Mr. Stevens said the Conservatives want an outright ban on loans through the proposed new business bank to companies in which directors or members of their families are involved.

The Commons finance committee was told Nov. 19 of five declarations of interest by two former members of the EDC board of directors involving $194 million.

The EDC helps expand domestic industry by insuring loans and lending money to foreign sources for the purchase of Canadian goods.

The committee was told that between 1970 and 1972, former EDC director P. H. Lemas, declared his interest as president of the American Company of Canada and a director of the parent company of Marion Industries Ltd. in four EDC loans worth $176 million. R. D. Southern, president of Alco Industries Limited, declared his interest in one loan worth $20 million.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie told the committee that Mr. Lemas declared himself as a possible supplier, through Alcan, in a $6 million 1971 loan to Furnas-Centrais Eletricas S.A. of Brazil for the purchase of hydro-electric generating equipment from several exporters, and in a $21 million 1972 loan to Sone-Hemijkal Zombakat "Galenika" Tunda of Yugoslavia for the purchase of a chemical plant from Chemetics International Limited of Vancouver.

Mr. Gillespie said Alcan proved not to be a supplier in both cases.

Top Public Service Posts Are Shuffled

OTTAWA (CP) — Two of Ottawa's most powerful public service posts were affected by changes announced Tuesday — one an appointment, the other a resignation.

Simon Reisman, for years a major figure in economic departments, associated he will resign next year as deputy minister of finance, a post he has held since 1968.

Fred [illegible], a career diplomat who has been deputy minister of Indian affairs and northern development for four years, was appointed undersecretary of state for external affairs. He replaces E. A. (Ed) Ritchie who has suffered a heart attack.

The prime minister's office said it has not been decided who will take over as deputy minister in the finance or the Indian and northern affairs departments.

Bugged — By Beetle

BLETCHLEY, England (CP) — Television repairmen were baffled by Douglas Harne's expensive new color set which kept switching stations all by itself. Finally, Harne trapped the bug-a-a clockwork beetle belonging to his children. When wound up, it emitted a high-pitched noise which jammed the TV's sensitive remote-control unit.

Pensions at 60 Said Too Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals, including Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde, dredged up some familiar arguments Tuesday when they rejected a Social Credit motion to reduce the retirement age to 60.

The motion had the support of the New Democrats and the Progressive Conservatives, the latter with some reservations, but it went nowhere when faced with the majority government's refusal to consider it.

Introduced by Gerard Laprise (Abitibi), the motion also would have made pensioners' spouses eligible for old age pensions, regardless of age. It was this that worried the Conservatives.

"I think we could be accused of being a little bit reckless," said Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough). "If, in 10 years time when I am 65, I should be able to convince a 19-year-old girl to run the risk of living with me, she would become an old age security recipient for God knows how long."

He suggested that spouses 55 and older be allowed pension benefit, but Mr. Lalonde rejected the idea.

Mr. Lalonde used the same argument he used to counter an earlier Social Credit proposal for a guaranteed minimum annual income: It would cost too much.

The government has said it intends to provide pensions for persons between 60 and 65 if their spouse is 65 or older. But there has been no indication when and there will be a provision for an incomes test for younger spouses.

Bicyclists Get Break in Paris

PARIS (CP) — Of all the measures announced by the French Government to conserve on gasoline, the most popular, and the one taken most seriously has been the appropriation of $250,000 in 1975 for the construction in new cities of reserved lanes for bicyclists.

Speed limits on expressways and national highways have incurred the wrath of automobile motorists who have paid little attention to government requests that they use public transportation. Plans asking motorists to leave their cars at home on weekends have all but been ignored.

The construction of cycling lanes has been advocated for years—not only by cyclists, but by physicians and ecologists.

These two groups feel $250,000 zones. We think the building of is totally insufficient in that it these areas would make it easwill not permit France to catch ier to get to school as well as up with other European countries. Others ask if public schoolchildren should not first of all give attention to bicycle traffic in existing cities where bicycle parking and safety measures are lacking.

However, the government has for the first time recognized that architects, urban planners and builders in newly-developed areas must deal not only with the problems of pedestrians and motorists, but with cyclists and motorcyclists.

Last October, at a general conference on cycling, Robert Galley, French roads minister, said: "I believe in using bicycles in the new building work on a bicycle."

France has about 600 miles of reserved cycling lanes already, compared to 19,300 miles in West Germany and 5,000 miles in the Netherlands.

Of France's 53 million inhabitants, at least 15 million are cyclists. One out of every two workers uses a bicycle to get to work while the majority of students use bicycles to get to school, college or university.

The energy crisis has accentuated the popularity of bicycle riding during the last several years. Today, cycling is not only associated with recreation and sports, but also transport.

RCMP Commissioner's Powers Said Terrifying

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP, which gives the force's commissioner powers and to ensure individual members certain basic rights, Crown Attorney John Cassels said Tuesday.

Mr. Cassels, appearing before the inquiry into the RCMP's handling of citizens' complaints and internal procedures, said he was shocked by the RCMP Act in a regular court of law.

Act should be amended to limit men and the right to deal independently of the Criminal Code of Canada.

"It's a terrifying weapon even if it's never used," he said.

Members committing criminal offences should not be tried by the force's disciplinary commission being conducted by Mr. Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Lawyer Doubts Tale of Torture

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto lawyer Alan McMurtry took issue Tuesday with charges by Thomas Henderson that police beat him through "medieval torture" to try to gain information on a drug source.

Mr. Henderson, a Toronto postman, testified Monday at a royal commission into police practices that police used a mechanic's claw on his penis and a pair of vice grips on his testicles while questioning him at a police station.

He added that the police eventually were satisfied when he told them the drugs were supplied by an unknown person at Rochdale College.

"Doesn't it seem strange all these terror tactics were used and when you (Mr. Henderson) tell them you bought the drugs at Rochdale, they are content with that?" Mr. McMurtry asked.

Mr. Henderson also had said he was beaten and had his testicles grabbed by a policeman during the February raid on his apartment when police seized 1½ ounces of hashish, 100 tablets of LSD and a wallet containing $115.

Mr. Henderson is the first witness to testify before the commission being conducted by Mr. Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court. The inquiry was called in October after a series of stories in local newspapers, detailing incidences of alleged police brutality.

Mr. McMurtry had Mr. Henderson demonstrate Tuesday the sharpness and tight grip of a claw by dangling it on his fingers.

"You agree that the claw has a pretty good grip?" Mr. McMurtry asked.

"Yes," said Mr. Henderson.

"If it was first applied to your nose and pulled MT, you would think it would leave a mark," the lawyer said.

"It left a little hole on the left side," Mr. Henderson said, but he said he was not sure whether it drew blood.

Mr. Henderson said the doctor who examined him said he could not be sure a claw caused the mark and that it might have been a pin prick.

Dr. J. G. Pearce, the doctor who examined Mr. Henderson at Toronto Western Hospital's emergency department last Feb. 8, later testified the 18 year-old's injuries were consistent with the use of a mechanic's claw.

He said the puncture wounds and scratches involved "were fresh" and completely compatible with having been caused 18 hours previously.

Dr. Pearce said he clearly recalled examining Mr. Henderson and being told the police was beaten up "and tortured by a circuitlike instrument he has not seen before."

The doctor said he noted two superficial punctures wounds on the left leg and "V-shaped superficial scratches on the skin of the penis."

Earl Cherniak, communal lawyer, asked the doctor why he did not report the examination to police.

Dr. Pearce said complaints resembling were received at [illegible] "all the time" and felt it was sufficient for him to the appropriate medical findings.

U.S. Senator Invites Trudeau to Breakfast

WASHINGTON (CP) — A U.S. senator, who asked Prime Minister Trudeau to breakfast Tuesday as a "simple act of Southern hospitality," said today the existence of problems between Canada and the United States makes such get togethers vital.

Senator Charles Mathias, 52, Republican from Maryland, told reporters the meeting he is arranging between Trudeau and a "representative group of senators" is designed to be informal and personal.

And he firmly said the closed meeting actually begins in a private capitol dining-room given the notorious difficulty of pinning senators down for such appointments.

"But Mathias said he expects some hardee-hard senators along with others who have expressed interest in such bilateral issues as oil and livestock.

The guest list will probably trade.

"There are some very real problems between the United States and Canada," Mathias said, "but because there are problems, it's all the more necessary about them."

Hees Asks PM Not to Annoy Ford

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, who makes an official visit to Washington today, was urged goodnaturedly Tuesday to avoid annoying President Ford, the way he apparently annoyed former President Nixon.

The word was not mentioned but George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) made it clear to everyone he was referring to White House tapes in which Nixon called the prime minister as "asshole."

The prime minister won an early round by telling the Commons Conservative he didn't know "his roommates from a hole in the ground."

Mr. Hees said Tuesday he had checked English and French dictionaries for the precise meaning because Mr. Trudeau had made "a very serious charge."

"The best definition by far of hole in the ground is given in the French dictionary: 'hole in the ground or water hole—un trou d'eau'," he said.

"The word roommates — very important in this case—is not listed in the French dictionary but in the English dictionary the definition reads: 'roommates' what Nixon described Trudeau as',

"It is obvious . . . that there is no difference between the two expressions," he added.

Shift in Election Date Poses Several Problems

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Saving civic elections from the threat of winter weather isn't as simple as it sounds.

For one thing, the financial year — the time frame within which a municipality operates — would also have to be changed, say Belleville-area local government spokesmen.

Otherwise, the political processes of civic administration might cease functioning effectively — a syndrome known as lameduck councils.

A sampling of area municipal representatives Tuesday drew mixed reaction to the idea of Ontario civic campaigns being held earlier than December.

The issue was raised in the legislature Monday after hillcards battered polling in western Ontario. Had weather also was blamed for lowering voter turnout in several Quinte district elections.

Premier Davis said he is not adverse to holding municipal elections in September or October. But he had no "strong feelings" on the issue.

Under present legislation, the fiscal year for local governments begins with the calendar year — Jan. 1. This leaves a month's gap between the December election date stipulated in the Ontario Municipal Act and the date new councils take office. By contrast, the provincial fiscal year starts in April.

One local politician who strongly believes there's need for a change is Alderman Arthur Keegan, dean of Belleville city council.

He said there already is almost a month's wait between an election and a new council taking office. A longer interval wouldn't adversely affect operations of councils.

But, believes Reeve Gordon Wilman of Sidney, councillors who had not been re-elected wouldn't be too concerned about the balance of their administration.

William Nightingale, clerk-treasurer and returning officer for Ameliasburg township's elections, agrees bad weather interferes with voting.

Also he said, it discourages candidates, because of the longer wait between election and taking office, he added.

Asbrey Sharp, Trenton's clerk-treasurer, said any move a change without necessary accompanying legislative amendments could have "more ill effects than benefits."

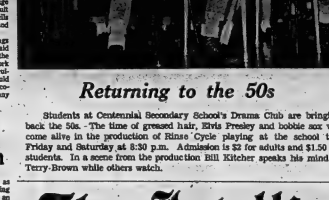
Reeve Horace Casey of Thurlow said without a change in the fiscal year the result could be "lame-duck" councils in October, November and December.

Carl Bateman, Hastings County administrator, said earlier elections within the present operational framework would only compound difficulties. The fiscal year would have to be re-organized to coincide more closely with any new election date.

Strike Limits Meat Supply

A feared beef shortage — the result of striking federal inspectors and graders in Toronto — already has affected Belleville and Quinte area consumers.

The strike action, which began at the first of the week, has choked off Canada's largest fresh meat supplier Canada Packers.



Spokesmen from a number of city butchers and meat wholesalers told The Intelligencer today, providing the strike does not "linger" there will be no affect here.

A spokesman for Clarke and Miles said it is possible ungraded meat might be received locally but all meat would have to bear a federal inspection stamp before the shop would put it on the shelf.

Doc. Allaire, manager of Black's Meat Market said the strikers may be back by Monday and if that is the case there will be no problem.

Glen McCann of Dean and Mc Cannon Abatoir termed the Toronto dispute a "little roustabout."

"It could have quite an affect if it lingers," he said.

Four-letter Word Knocks Out Poem

The situation surrounds a poem written by Information officer Keith Martin, and published in the Grass Roots, the college's literary magazine.

The poem, described by Mr. Martin as a satirization of what he terms "student solicite poems," contained the present participle of a four-letter word, starting with "f" and ending in "ing".

Mr. Martin's poem, which has no name, will not be found in the recent edition of Grass Roots because it was deleted by Ernst Kneisel, director of the school of business and communication, of which the English department and Grass Roots is a part.

And therein lies the problem. Grass Roots' management, miffed by Mr. Kneisel's arbitrary decision, have called a meeting with him Friday at the college, and hope for assurances that this form of censorship will not occur again in the future.

"Basically, I feel that nobody should be free of outside standards," explained Mr. Kneisel this week, "What magazine does not have to report to its readership or hierarchy?"

He said he feels a majority of Grass Roots readers, which include school and college students, and area residents, would be offended by the use of such words.

The word was to be printed in double-size type, he said. "It was used as an expletive of the author . . . " explained Mr. Kneisel. "I think it was used for local shock effect, for a literary effect."

Mr. Martin said the word usage was not intended as shock, but as satire. "I used it because it suited what I wanted to achieve," he said.

"The serious thing is to take the word out of context . . . the pointed out. "It's used in literature and used in books that are found in libraries. We don't have to be afraid of words . . . "

Mr. Martin's argument is supported by the word's inclusion in the fourth edition of the American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, where it is defined as "vulgar slang" meaning "damned" and used as an "intensive". It is also found in the 1974 edition of Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary.

"Essentially, it was a piece of whimsey I wrote in protest to student suicide poems," described Mr. Martin. "I was hoping by satire to prick a few balloons."

He said most student poets express gloom and despair in their work. "Generally, student publications contain that life is a bowl of gallstones."

Rifles Taken

Police said that about 4.30 a.m. today a report came in that a large glass window had been smashed at Canada Sports at Sports Chalet at North Front St.

Investigation revealed that four rifles worth about $800 were taken, a .22-calibre, a 308-calibre, a .25-calibre, all Remingtons and a Husqvarna .270-calibre.

Besides the theft of the rifles, the intruder damaged other rifles in the store as well as the showcase, also housing a knife display and a display of pistols. Police say age including the window was $1,000 for a total loss that night of $1,800.

Gray Faces Four Charges

A 26-year-old man, Orville Gray of Belleville, Ontario has been charged by city police with four charges including theft.

The auto theft charge resulted from a vehicle taken from Harvey Scriver of West St.

Gray was arrested by the Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police Monday and brought to Belleville to face charges.

The other charges he faces are possession of stolen goods, break entry and theft and being unlawfully at large in a dwelling.

Winter Warmer

One way to cut heating bills this winter is to make good use of a fireplace. Well-designed fireplace can augment house heating system and wood cost is about same as oil with similar heating ability.

Firewood a Good Buy --If You Shop Around

Buying firewood by the cord can be confusing for the buyer, particularly if classified advertisements are used as a guideline for price.

Advertisers quote a price by the cord, but there are two kinds of cords. One, the standard cord — describes a pile of wood that measures four feet high, four feet wide by eight feet long. Prices quoted for this quantity are in the $50 area. This wood is usually available cut to lengths the customer specifies. If the buyer is particular about the type of wood and specifies say, all white birch, the price will be higher.

The other type of cord advertised is the storewood cord. It may appear to be a bargain, but in most cases, it isn't. A storewood cord measures 12 inches wide, four feet high and eight feet long. That makes it exactly one quarter the size of a standard cord. Minimum advertised price in the Quinte area is $15 for a storewood cord, which is equivalent to $60 for a standard cord — no bargain. In addition, the buyer has no choice of log length.

Storewood prices in the Quinte area this year are slightly higher than last year and demand is steady, sellers report.

If wood buyers feel prices are too high, they can take comfort — and get comfort — from a recent statement about the heating industry secretive, who said hardwood at $55 a cord is directly comparable in heating power to $25 worth of oil.

Also, storewood cords of fireplace wood advertised in Toronto and Montreal this week were priced at $32 and $32, respectively, compared to about $15 in the Quinte area.

Console Demonstrated

Loyalist Gets CKWS Equipment

CKWS—TV in Kingston has made its second major donation of broadcast equipment to the Loyalist College School of Communications, in the form of an audio control room to the school's radio department.

The presentation was made recently by Allan J. Brooks, CKWS—TV general manager, an active member of the college's radio and television advisory committee, the body which advises on curriculum, programs and equipment.

It was recently turned over to Radio instructor Bryan Olney, and Ernst Kneisel, director of the school of business and communication, who said, "It is this type of generous assistance and cooperation that gives Loyalist's radio students practical experience and prepares them to work in broadcasting."

CKWS Radio and Television, which first donated two complete camera systems to the college's television department in 1971, currently employs four Loyalist graduates in various capacities.

Research Building to House Several Federal Departments

The one-time federal research institute on East Dundas St. is being enhanced to house several Belleville - area government services.

The remodeling will cost $314,500, the total of the contract awarded Ravins Grand Construction, of Weston.

Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, says the project will accommodate Canada Manpower and Belleville-district Unemployment Insurance Commission offices under one roof.

The plan of reconstruction registered with city hall's building inspections department also outlines space for other federal services. These are the consumer and corporate affairs department, and service — now housed in the Station St. federal building — and the Veterans Land Act administration.

The research building became vacant about two years ago. It had housed an entomology unit first started in the 1930s.

Madoc Sewer Costly Plan

MADOC — A report from the ministry of the environment says it will cost over $3-million to install a complete water and sewer system in the village of Madoc.

The estimate represents a higher figure than that given to council in 1971, which was then turned down. It was quoted at 1974 prices at that time to have cost $1.9 million.

The provincial government last year promised to pay 70 percent of the estimated costs, while this year it is willing to foot 75 percent of the bill.

The increase in provincial funding, however, will not cover the increased costs of the recent proposal.

It is estimated that the recent proposal will cost the average homeowner $212 plus a $42.15 disposal charge and three mills on an average assessment of $15,200. All residents in the system will also face an increase of three mills on their tax levy.

Before definite decisions are made by council, Reeve Tom C. Bleeze said he would like to know the opinion of Madoc residents on the matter.

Chief: Corporation Move Raised By Previous Mohawk Council

TYENDINAGA — The intent to form a business corporation involving Mohawks in reserve began with a council headed by his predecessor, Chief William Brant said here Monday.

To support his statement the chief showed a council resolution passed in September 1972 and signed by the then chief, Earl Hill.

Mr. Hill most recently acted as chairman for a group organized for a referendum calling for a new election to replace Chief Brant's present council. The plebiscite is the latest development in the fight centered on a corporation now operating on the reserve.

The corporate proposed in 1972 bore the same name as the company formed this year which touched off the series of often bitter confrontations between the Mohawks — Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd.

But, counters Mr. Hill, the corporation planned during his tenure as chief, was to first operate off the reserve and be dissolved when the operation - shifted onto Mohawk land.

Opponents of the present industry — makers of shoe parts for Bata Footwear — charge the presence of a corporation with unwanted precedent on Indian land. It poses the threat of taxation and provincial and municipal regulations on a reserve administered solely under federal law, they claim.

The resolution passed last year says Chief Brant, above that "the idea of a corporation isn't a new one" among the Mohawks.

Chief Brant was a member of the 1973 council and moved the resolution.

At the time, he says, council was considering buying out a prefabricated home firm. It was being advised in business procedure by CESO, Economic Development Organization — a voluntary consultant group.

The resolution requested the consultants to "incorporate a company called "Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd." for purposes of "manufacturing and operating" the furniture company of Hawley Bros.

Under terms of the resolution council members and the reserve administrator, Elton Brant, would have served as directors of the corporation and then Chief Hill as president.

But the deal fell through and the company was not incorporated.

At the end of the year there was an election and Chief Hill defeated Mr. Hill to become chief.

Mezzime Bata had showed interest in developing business with the Mohawks. The consultants were asked to do, the original plans for incorporation reactivated and Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. became a reality. At one of the council meetings discussing the incorporations consultants presented to the council with the company's corporate seal.

But, said Mr. Hill, an originality conceived, Tyendinaga Mohawk Ltd. would have operated in Deseronto while Bata hawk workers were being trained.

"When you operate outside the reserve you have to incorporate," said Mr. Hill.

Eventually, the operation would have been transferred to the reserve — at which time the corporative structure would have been dissolved.

It would then "have been run as a hand-owned venture," he said. "It is the corporate seal was made at that time (I don't know anything about it," he said. "It would have been nothing for sent before the horse because the coal hadn't been completed."

Mr. Hill served eight years on the elected band council here — six of them as chief.

The current plebiscite now posted on the reserve is piqued for a vote Dec. 28. It asks that Mohawks if they favor an election. The results will be sent to Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan for a final decision.

Presbytery Meets

The 13th annual AOTS (An Old Time Served) Hawk Presbytery Round-up was held recently at Holloway St. United Church with host choir in the Belleville Presbytery represented. Entertainment was provided by the Quinte Sweet Adelaides. A special visitor was Don Smith, national representative from Toronto while guest speaker was Rev. Harry Seely of Elgin, Ont., speaking on Creative Leadership, newsmaker course.

Air Chiller Approved

Belleville General Hospital's board of governors has approved installation of a standby air chiller unit for the hospital's main Quinte Wing.

The move came after the Ontario heath ministry approved the $48,921 project. The auxiliary unit is intended to offset emergencies should the wing's air-conditioning system break down.

Meantime, the ministry has refused funds for a new air-conditioning system for the WCA wing — which includes the hospital's maternity and chronic care areas. Patient rooms now are cooled by individual window units.

From The Record

Chief William Brant shows a resolution of 1973 Mohawk council requesting incorporation of company to take over a Deseronto industry. Corporate structure on reserve has sparked current dispute at Tyendinaga. But an earlier deal to establish an industry fell through. Earl Hill, chief at the time, says intent was to dissolve corporation if industry moved to reserve.

High School Basketball In Spotlight, Saturday

Places of learning at the secondary level in Belleville not only turn out excellent scholars, they make a habit of producing top level athletes as well.

When discussing the abilities of athletes at the city's secondary schools, Nicholson Catholic College and Albert College, basketball usually comes to the fore, especially at this time of year.

Boy of Quinte High School Basketball returns to the teams this week. The boys' league gets another season started just as the girls are completing theirs.

And as if to signal the opening of league play, two city teams are entertaining first rate squads from out of town in a series of exhibition games, Saturday, at Quinte Secondary School.

Ottawa Lisgar, last year's Ontario Federation of Secondary Schools Association AAA champion will be here. Hamilton Cathedral was also scheduled to take part but indications are, a substitution may be made.

At any rate, supplying the opposition for the visitors in what promises to be an entertaining basketball show, will be Jim Murray's, Quinte Saints, and Brian MacKenzie's Belleville Collegiate squad.

Both Murray and MacKenzie are expecting big things from their senior teams this season. Just two years ago, Saints captured the Ontario AA title.

As he considers his chances in the new season, SCI's MacKenzie has reason for optimism from the fact that five of last year's team are back for another go.

MacKenzie regards 6-foot-2 forward Larry Wilson and 5-foot-8 guard Gary Donovan as good college prospects.

"Gary is our quarterback and if he's scouted properly, he could make it," observes the coach while emphasizing Larry's rebounding abilities.

Also returning are Ross Simonds, 5-foot-9 guard Steve Kirby and Richard Burrows, a 6-foot-3 forward. Simonds won't be out with the team until after Christmas since he's recovering from an operation.

The two centres with the team are both graduates of the school's fine junior aggregation which won five tournament championships last season. Ord Wright is 6-foot-5, and Glen Watson, 6-foot-1.

Chris Lachman, 5-9, and Brian Bell a 6-footer, are the others moving up from junior ranks.

Rounding out the team are Larry Savage, Mike Lynch and Bob Thompson.

Lynch and Thompson have had high school basketball experience at the collegiate level while Savage is returning to SCI after a brief absence.

Murray's Quinte representative has only two holdovers from the 1974 team. They are 6-foot-5 forwards Steve Rale and Rick Bradford.

Other big men with the Saints are 6-foot-6 centre Ron Crook and guards Rick Cubbin and Steve McCracken. Also expected to make his presence felt is Sterling Wilson, a transfer from Moira Secondary School.

Coach Murray describes his club as "a hustling group with good size."

"All they need is experience," says Jim.

Quinte and BCI will benefit from Saturday's games with the top notch visitors.

The schedule calls for Quinte to meet Cathedral at 1.30 p.m.; BCI vs. Lisgar at 3; BCI vs. Cathedral, 4.30 and Quinte vs. Lisgar, 8 p.m.

Admission to the games is $1 for the day. Students with identification cards pay only 75 cents. The public is welcome.

The BCI and Quinte teams do it over again December 14 when the visiting teams will be 1974 AA champion Dundas Parkside, and Dresden High School. Coach of the Dresden team is former Moira Secondary teacher Tom Hawkin.

For the second year in a row, Felix Millan of the New York Mets gets the nod. Felix struck out only 14 times in 588 trips.

The National League didn't let 41 postponements keep it from attracting a total of 16,378,151 fans for games in 1974. It's the second highest attendance total in the loop's history. In 1971, the league set a record with an attendance figure of 17,234,857.

JIM RICHARDSON

Richardson Leads Bobcats Past Nats

TORONTO (Special) — Jim Richardson brought his points output to 13 in the last three games as he led the Belleville Bobcats to a 5-3 win over the Toronto Young Nationals in Metro Junior B action Tuesday night.

Richardson scored twice and added two assists bringing his point total to 46 for the year. In 19 games the Bobcat forward has scored 15 times and drawn 29 assists.

In his last three outing Richardson has scored five times and added eight assists.

Despite the fact that the Cats went with a short line-up missing were Steve Keech, Scott Samis, Mike Watt, Paul King and Harold Robertchey held the upper hand in the game outshooting the Nats 40-29.

Belleville held a 1-0 lead at the end of the first period as Richardson scored with just under two minutes remaining. Neil Turner and Eric Powell drew assists; the first of three for night.

The Nats came out flying at the beginning of the second 20 minutes and took advantage of a manpower situation to get on the scoresheet. Just 13 seconds into the period, Toronto's Gary Gordon scored to even things at 1-1.

BelleVFe wasn't long coming back though as Bob Thompson, who had been a doubtful starter before the trip because of a knee injury, scored at the 3:35 mark. Turner and Richardson got the helpers.

Then at 8.28, Grant Goegan scored his fourth goal in his last three games to put the Cats in front 3-1. Richardson got the assist.

Four minutes later Al Jeffrey combined with Powell and Rick Langstaff to put Belleville in front 4-1 and round out the scoring in the second period.

Toronto came back with a goal in the third as Ketz Todd scored, but with 3:07 left in the game, Richardson got his second of the night to put Belleville in front 5-2. Assists went to Powell and Turner.

Belleville was assessed eight of the games 15 penalties. All were minors.

The Cats next game is at home against the Nats on Friday at 9 p.m. After that, they travel to Victoria Park Arena on Monday night for an 8.30 p.m. contest against North York.

Uniroyal Tops Beaver

Novice Division action in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association saw Uniroyal Radials top Beaver Lumber 4-2 with Randy Veen potting a pair of goals for the winners. Jim Wright scored four to lead Manpower over Stephen Liceme 7-3, Greg Davis had three for the losers.

Dirie Lee continued its win streak by topping Whitley Rentals 8-3 as Brian Clarey rattled in eight goals. Jeff Plans scored two for Whitley's.

Shot out goaltending by Tony Nelson and four goals from Brian Christopher sparked Belleville Credit Union over Local 1,000 8-3.

Canucks Finally Down North Stars

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

Victories by Vancouver Canucks over Minnesota North Stars have been something of a rarity since the Canucks joined the National Hockey League in 1970.

Going into this season, the Canucks had four wins, 13 losses and five ties against the North Stars.

In their first meeting this year the teams battled to a 1-1 tie in Minnesota, Oct. 16 and six nights later in Vancouver, the Canucks dropped a 3-2 decision to Minnesota.

Tuesday night, the Canucks, who had a tie in five games against the North Stars last year, won their first game against Minnesota since April 2, 1972, as they took a 6-5 decision.

In other action, Buffalo Sabres downed Washington Capitals 5-3 and St. Louis Blues clipped California Golden Seals 5-1.

The Canucks fell behind 3-0 in the first period but rallied in the second to take a 4-3 lead into the final period.

Gregg Boddy's second goal of the game and fifth of the season at 18:48 of the final period gave the Canucks the win before 15,-000 at the Pacific Coliseum.

Bill Goldsworthy fired his 16th and 18th goals of the year to lead the North Stars.

Vancouver now has a 13-point lead over Chicago Black Hawks in the Smythe Division. However, the Hawks have four games in hand.

Left winger Rick Martin scored four goals—three in the first period—to lead the Sabres past the Capitals.

The Sabres led 3-1 after one period and the Caps came back to narrow the margin to 3-2 before Denny Carr restored Buffalo's two-goal edge.

Buffalo leads the Adams Division with 19 wins, four losses and four ties for 42 points—13 more than Boston Bruins. The Bruins have four games in hand.

The Capitals have managed two wins and three ties in 25 games and are last in the Norris Division.

in another by Ace Bailey as the Bison defeated the Golden Seals. Bob Gassoff and Gerry Ungar got the other St. Louis goals with Joey Johnston replying for California.

Detroit Red Wings have announced they will play Toronto Maple Leafs in Detroit Sunday, Feb. 8. The game is making up for last Sunday's scheduled game which was postponed because of a vicious snowstorm that struck Detroit.

Tonight the Red Wings visit the Rangers in New York while the Leafs travel to Pittsburgh to meet the Penguins. In other games, California is at home to Atlanta Flames, the North Stars visit the Kings in Los Angeles, Kansas City Scouts are in Chicago and Montreal Canadiens play host to Boston.

Aeros Nip Toros

Extend Streaks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Houston Aeros extended their winning record on the road Tuesday night while pushing Toronto Toros closer to a record losing streak at home.

The Aeros beat the Toros 5-4 in Toronto for Houston's eighth consecutive victory on the road and Toronto's fifth consecutive loss at home.

The Aeros had already surpassed the previous World Hockey Association record for the longest road winning streak—six games—set last season by Minnesota Fighting Saints.

The Toros, meanwhile, are tied closing in on the record longest home losing streak—seven games—set last season by Vancouver Blazers.

In other WHA games Tuesday, Michigan Stags upset New England Whalers 3-1 and Phoenix Roadrunners rallied for a 5-4 overtime victory over San Diego Mariners.

The result of the match at Toronto appeared almost inevitable considering the Toros' recent habit of clacking off leads in the games while Houston has been learning to come from behind.

"At the start of the year, we were losing a lot of games in the third period," said Houston's Don Larway who scored two goals, including the winner.

"Lately, we've been going well in the third, coming from behind."

"They started playing steady hockey in the second period and we stopped," said Frank Mahovlich who had scored twice to contribute to a 4-1 Toros lead before the Aeros started their rally.

"They let up after they took a 4-1 lead and were nursing their lead in the third period," said Larwar. "We just chased after the win and got it."

Larry Hughes also scored twice for Houston. The Aeros' leading goal scorer, Hughes has 22 this season.

Larway's second goal of the night and eighth of the season midway in the third period provided the win. The right winger picked up the rebound from his own shot at Toros goalie Gilles Gratton and popped it into an open corner.

Even with their growing losing streak at home, the Toros enjoyed an attendance of 14,453. In contrast, Michigan had only 1,496 fans on hand to witness their rare victory over the Whalers.

Jerry Byrnlak's goal at 8:28 of the third period gave Michigan the win. Steve Richardson got the Stags' other goal in the first period and Jim Dorey scored for the Whalers.

It was only the seventh loss of the season for New England which leads the Eastern Division by nine points over Cleveland while Michigan, last in the Western Division, won its sixth game.

At San Diego, Michel Cormier scored the winning goal for Phoenix with 3:39 left in the 10-minute overtime period.

John Hughes forced the game into overtime when he scored for Phoenix with 35 seconds left in regulation play, capping a comeback that brought the Roadrunners from a 3-1 deficit.

Huskies Trip Birt's Juveniles

TRENTON — One year ago, Curt McLean was wheeling and dealing for Charlie Drake's Birt's Handy Stand Juveniles. And he was part of the team which racked up a second straight Ontario Minor Hockey Association AA title for the town.

One year later, after a brief stay with Belleville Bobcats of the Metro Junior B League, Curt is back plying his trade for Charlie Drake. But this time around, it's for Frankford's Junior C Huskies.

McLean may have had mixed emotions here, Tuesday. He scored three goals as Huskies knocked off Birt's Handy Stand 9-5 in an exhibition encounter.

It was the first loss of the season for Birt's after 17 wins and a tie. "He's not even talking to me," laughed Huskies' coach after the game.

The "Hit" Charlie referred to is Roger Drake. Roger is Charlie's son. In the 1973-74 season, they were combining talents on behalf of the Juvenile team. Tuesday night, they were on the opposite ends of the string.

Before the game was five minutes old, the Junior C team potted four counters with the first two coming in the first minute of play.

To the Trenton skaters' credit, they rebounded to connect for three in a row and make it a 4-3 game heading for the second period. But after the teams traded goals in the second frame's early going, Huskies sailed it away with three consecutive tallies. Each side hit for one in the last five minutes of the second period.

Although they were on the long end of the penalty statistics in the final 20 minutes, Huskies managed to hold Birt's scoreless. And the Junior squad failed to add to its total.

McLean had a pair of assists to go with his three-goal production for Huskies. Pete Crawford had two Frankford goals with singles for Louis Doucette, Al MacIntosh, Rob Arbuckle and Jean Doucette.

Eight School Groups In Tournament Play

The Tournament has been divided into three parts. A Senior Girl's Championship (grades seven and eight) at Marmara Senior School, a Senior Boy's Championship (grades seven and eight) at Stirling Senior School and a Skill Tournament for grades five and six boys and girls at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc.

One representative school from each of the eight associate school groups in the county will participate.

The tournament starts on all fronts at 9:30 in the morning and runs for the entire day.

Thursday, on three different fronts, the senior elementary students of the county will be jumping off against each other. That is, there'll be a jump ball and they'll be trying to win the Hastings County Elementary School Basketball titles.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR
THINK CHRISTMAS POULTRY NOW

The pace of Christmas preparation is quickening. So wise shoppers will be sure that their Christmas poultry is bought by this weekend if they plan a frozen bird for the holiday dinner. Selections of frozen young turkeys, geese, ducks and cornish hens are wide now. And Miracle Food Mart butchers will be glad to help.

If you want to buy turkey merchandise certificates to give to a friend, a family you would like to help, or for prizes at club functions, they're available in $8.00, $12.00, and $16.00 denominations form Miracle Food Mart Information Desks. So also are gift certificates for $1.00, $5.00 and $10.00.

With the year-end holidays cloud, such gift shortcuts can be helpful. And I hope you'll pick up holiday recipe suggestions in your Miracle Food Mart Consumer Corners. Look too for the leaflet, "How to Meet the Sugar Crisis." You will find it timely, holidays or no holidays.

BIRTHS

BROWN — Nell and Susan (nee Whitney) Brown announce the birth of their son, Trevor Whitney Brown, on Nov. 28th, 1974 at Belleville General Hospital, weighing 8 lbs. 2½ ozs. Proud brother, Jeffrey. Proud grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Brown, both of Belleville, Thomas and Mrs. Eileen Whitney of Bloomburg and nurses on maternity ward.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In loving memory of a very dear sister, Ida Agnes, who passed away Dec. 4, 1973.
It's somewhere back of the sunset,
Somewhere beyond the blue,
Where all is the land of sorrow,
Midst the blue and the gold of the noon,
Where joy unspeakable dwells,
Where parting brought sad wars.
I will cherish her memory forever.
Throughout the passing of the years.
Everybody loved and sadly missed by Pearl.

HARRISON — In loving memory of our friend Gladys who passed away Dec. 4, 1965.
Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memories linger on for ever.
—Ever remembered by Pearl.

ANDERSON — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather, Norman Arnett Anderson who passed away Dec. 4, 1971.
Sadly and deeply we miss you,
Dear Norm.
Since our great sorrow fell.
The gold that we received that day
No one could ever sell.
God gave us a wonderful gift to meet,
And courage to bear the blow;
He took back the gift He gave,
But we have your memory.
You made no one a last farewell,
You were your dear self
You were good before we knew it,
And only God knows why.
—Sadly missed by Mom, Dad, Gary, Wayne and family.

ANDERSON — In loving memory of our dear brother-in-law Arnold, who passed away 4 years today, Dec. 4, 1970.
Time has nothing weary,
Time has not dimmed the years,
He came and stood beside you,
And whispered, "Come with me."
You wished you could have refused,
Nor even said goodbye,
But God knew best and took you home.
And only God knows why.
—Sadly missed by his family remembered by Mom and Harold.

LAZER — In loving memory of a dear wife Lizzie Lazer, who passed away 2 years ago today, Dec. 4, 1972.
The days pass and memories linger on,
All the loss of one we loved so well,
—Sadly missed by her sister, Mrs. Jean and Larry.

Church-going Kit Proposed in England

ST. ALBANS, England (AP) — A churchgoing kit of specially warm clothing for men and women has been suggested to a Church of England synod considering how congregations might be kept warm in winter.

Another proposal was reintroducing spats for men, once a fashionable adornment but nowadays unseen.

Panel chairman J. R. Keil, who has advised on heating Canterbury, Durham and St. Paul's cathedrals, said that rising fuel costs are straining church finances, while the warm air rises to the high rafters leaving worshippers cold in the pews.

Another suggestion is to subdivide churches with a "winter tent" of transparent material erected in the nave. This would be comparatively simple to heat, leaving the rest of the building at a lower temperature.

A letter to the weekly Church Times suggested men might be permitted to wear "some decent and discreet head-covering" in church as one way of keeping warm. The correspondent added:

"I even wondered whether to leave the Church of England and join one of those religious bodies where the men remain covered. However, I decided to remain where I was and be a Christian martyr in cold winters . . . but churchmen must beware and must realize that a church which is unbearably cold will lose much of its congregation, and cannot function as an effective agent of Christian mission."

Oil Drilling School Planned In Scotland

LONDON (CP) — A $1.5-million training centre for drilling technology is planned in Scotland by the petroleum industry, backed by the manpower services commission, a British government agency.

The project was announced by Bruce Millan, minister of state, Scottish office, who also announced a new training centre for deep-sea diving.

The minister said the drilling technology centre would have its own drilling rig and would provide special courses for drilling technologists and offshore job training for crews, something he described as "an important advance for reasons both of training and safety."

Millan did not give the location of either training centre, but the diving school, for technical reasons, will be on one of

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

THURS DEC. 5

Aries (March 21-April 19) Don't be as lax about habits. Eat sensibly. Try to get your self on a trim, but regular, exercise program.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The next couple of days you are not to bank more heavily on what others can do for you rather than what you can do for yourself.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) If you solicit advice from too many people regarding a personal problem, you will get so many conflicting it will only confuse you.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Force yourself to pay attention to details today or you will make some silly mistakes that could have been avoided.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You must exercise self-discipline the next few days in handling your resources, or extravagance will gain the upper hand.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Decisions you make today are apt to be faulty. You will base them upon the way you'd like things to be, rather than on the way they are.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It would be a mistake if you relied more heavily on intuition than logic and reasoning today. Your hunches will mislead you.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The next few days, keep your friends out of your matters. Allies or secretive complicated and distasteful will result.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're rather lazy about your duties at this time. Because of this you will let some opportunities slip past you unnoticed.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Move cautiously with your plans for personal. There are some obstacles you are unaware of that could suddenly block your path.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something that will be offered you looks good on the surface. There are strings tied to it that you are better off without.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You lack the confidence to further an ambitious interest. Stop thinking the other guy holds all the aces.

To Your Good Health

Some Doctoring Just Plain Sense

By G.C. THORTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I guess you might say my daughter was the opposite of Mrs. K.H.'s. She had plenty of sleep, lots of outside play with just three naps before meals, naps and bed. But her appetite was poor and she had troublesome mealtime habits.

On top of that she was the overjoyed, exuberant person a child at six could be.

"Where did I go wrong?" I would cry to myself, until I realized that I had tried everything I could think of to help the child.

Finally I had the problem of her behavior right on the source—her, not me. After a long talk during which I pointed up things she could do to make her more appealing to everyone, she began to see the light.

It was not an overnight miracle, but it has made her aware that the responsibility for her self.—M.L.

A most interesting letter—and you've put your finger on what is one of the most difficult tasks a doctor has to meet. That's the need to find the right answer to a problem, not just an answer that more or less fits a case.

For example, sometimes I have very careful observation, or a high degree of suspicion, and some special tests to tell me that a patient has diabetes, a cranky gall bladder, hepatitis, or gastritis from some other ailment. You have no idea, I'm sure, how some of these conditions can mimic each other.

Well, you can join the same sort of quandary with your daughter. Her symptoms could be those a child to misbehave, or can emotional or psychiatric problems. But you have the reason that we are bound to find some such thing when we essay misbehaving youngster.

Your account reminds me of a teenage boy who was causing his blowout a thorough nuisance, shooting out street lights, yelling, and the rest.

His father finally asked for help from a psychiatrist.

After a searching examination the psychiatrist called the father in and told him bluntly, "There's nothing psychiatrically wrong with your boy—except that he's being a spoiled brat."

The happy part is that the boy, when he had to admit that he had no "psychiatric" excuse being a stinker, straightened up and became a fine young human.

I'm certainly not selling short the idea of having to be aware of the need for the diagnosis of trouble—but there's nothing like being able to make straightforward solution when it is right.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: My problem is bleeding hemorrhoids. Is there any remedy I could take or do all bases to bring relief?—M.L.K.

Bleeding ducts often can be successfully opened by an eye specialist, but I don't know of any do-it-yourself methods.

he studied took his ace of spades; had one trump to pull his opponents' tools and threw West on lead with the queen of spades.

West led the three of diamonds and dummy's jack was covered by East's queen.

The student was back on lead with the king. After long thought he played ace and 10 of clubs; finessed unsuccessfully for that queen and was one down.

He turned to the Professor with the East and said, "Your partner made a good guess about which minor suit to lead when I put him in.

The Professor replied: "It wasn't a guess. I told him to play a diamond. At trick one I played with the deuce of spades. Then at trick three I played the eight of spades. He knew that I still held the six. With 6-3, I would have played the eight first, and he would played a high-suit preference signal to ask for a diamond shift.

"Was I right to play him for the queen of clubs?" the student asked.

"Never guess in clubs was unsuccessful and your partner," the professor replied. "It was highly probably that I would be long in clubs. Four spades, but he might have been right."

13 Players Traded As Major League Meetings Continue

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One of the big questions remaining after a round of trades at the winter baseball meetings is whether Dick Allen will report to Atlanta Braves.

Another question still to be answered is what the major leagues plan to do about expansion, if anything.

Allen, Tug McGraw and Leo May were among 13 players traded Tuesday in four deals.

The question remains whether Allen, the game's highest paid player at $256,000 a year, will report to the Braves, who obtained the controversial first baseman from Chicago White Sox for a reported $5,000 and a player to be named later.

Allen, 32, left the White Sox Sept. 16, saying he was retiring from baseball. However, he never made it official by putting it in writing, and recently he said he wanted to continue playing.

He was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

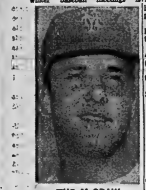
Meanwhile, no report on the expansion issue was exacted until today or Thursday. Only the National league had the issue on its agenda although groups from Toronto, Seattle, Denver, Honolulu and new Orleans are lobbying for support among the major league owners. Both leagues have indicated they plan to add two new franchises in 1976.

Among the groups seeking a Toronto franchise are Maple Leaf Gardens; Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd.; Montreal industrialist R. Howard Webster; and a group calling itself Canadian baseball Company, headed by Sydney C. Cooper.

As part of the Allen deal, the White Sox will keep the $5,000 even if Allen doesn't report.

Chicago receives a player only if Allen shows up.

McGraw, one-time relief ace of New York Mets, moved to Philadelphia Phillies in a six-player trade.



Outfielders Don Hahn and Dave Schneck also went to Philadelphia. In return, the Phils sent outfielder Del Unser, left-handed pitcher Mac Scarce and rookie catcher John Stearns to New York.

Unser, who will be 30 on Monday, is expected to provide the Mets with their first solid centre fielder in years.

Baltimore Orioles obtained May, a power-hitting first baseman, and minor league outfielder Jay Schlueter from Houston Astros for second baseman Rob Andrews, who has had an outstanding minor league career, and infielder - outfielder Enos Cabell.

May, 31, who batted .268 with 26 homers and 85 RBI last season, will play first base, making Orioles veteran Boog powell expendable.

In the other transactions, New York Yankees sent first baseman-outfielder Bill Sudakis to California Angels for right-handed pitcher Skip Lockwood.

Lottery A Hit

MONTREAL (CP) — Julien Cote, vice-president of Olympic Lottery Canada, said Tuesday that with only three of eight scheduled draws completed, the lottery has contributed $22.1 million toward financing the 1976 games.

This is almost $20 million more than the $2.5-million goal set by the organizing committee as part of its overall $110-million budget proposed for the Games.

"I received a mandate to raise a minimum of $22.5 million," Cote said. "That was the money needed from the lottery."

He said response to the project has been excellent.

Profit from the third draw was $24.4 million, more than double the amount realized from the initial series. The first draw netted the organizing committee $10.8 million, while profit from the second was $18.2 million. The first two draws featured $1 million tax free as first prize; the third draw, held in Hamilton Nov. 18 had two $1-million first prizes, also tax free. Ticket prices have remained constant at $10.

The fourth draw in the series is scheduled for Quebec City, Feb. 18, and will also feature two $1 million tax-free first prizes.

To date, only three provand British Columbia—have not agreed to the sale of tickets through banks and other outlets in their areas.

Veeck Makes Offer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bill Veeck, one-time American league owner, was named Tuesday as a member of a group seeking to purchase Baltimore Orioles of the American League. Veeck was reported by the Baltimore Sun as trying to raise $12 million in cash to meet the price set by Jerold Hoffberger, the Orioles' board chairman. Another group has already announced plans to raise half the purchase price in cash and the remainder through the sale of city revenue bonds.

Two Tie Games Turning Point Says Als' Levy

MONTREAL (CP) — Marv Levy was asked Tuesday if he had felt his Montreal Alouettes had a chance of winning it all before the 1974 Canadian Football League season got underway.

"Winning it all is always a longshot," said Levy, who coached Montreal to a Grey Cup championship in his second year as head coach.

"I thought we were as good as anybody else and better than a few others. I knew we were not going to finish last but after that it would be a dogfight."

Levy said if there was a turning point in the season it was the "two tie games we hung in there against Edmonton and Toronto."

The Alouettes came from behind in tie Edmonton 28-28 Oct. 5 and battled to a 12-12 draw against the Argonauts five days later.

There was one point where Montreal went winless in four games—losing the two out west and tying Edmonton and Toronto.

"Everybody has slumps. Edmonton did too. Nobody waltzed through the season. I keep saying that if you ever get a feeling, even if it's only subconscious, that it doesn't take 100-per-cent effort all the time to win, then you're in trouble."

Levy said his linebacking trio of Carl Crennel, Chuck Zapiec and Mike Widger was the best in the country and also praised his front four.

Levy also lauded his three assistant coaches—Rod Rust, Dan Sekanovich and Gene Gaines.

"A good head coach can't be afraid of hiring assistants who know more than he does. I have three great ones right here."

Levy said the Alouettes have the Canadian negotiation rights to Archie Griffin of Ohio State, this year's Heisman Trophy winner as the top player in U.S. college football. Griffin grades also in 1976.

Montreal also has the rights to Anthony Davis of University of Southern California, the runner up in this year's Heisman voting.

CATFISH INDUCTED

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Jim (Catfish) Hunter of Oakland A's, the Cy Young Award winner as the best pitcher in the American League last season, was among five inducted Monday into the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame.

Griffin Heisman Trophy Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — Unlil he became the fifth underclassman to win the Heisman Trophy, Ohio State running ace Archie Griffin wasn't aware that none of the four previous players who was it as juniors had been able to repeat as seniors.

Now he knows.

"Everyone's scaring it into me now," Griffin said Tuesday when he was named to the 1974 winner of the Heisman Trophy, which annually goes to the outstanding college football player in the country.

Griffin, a 5-foot-8, 185-pounder who holds the Big Ten and Ohio career rushing records, but intends to give it his best shot in 1975 in an attempt to become the first two-time Heisman winner.

"I'm gonna put my best foot forward," he said, "and if the voters think I'm good enough to win it again, then I'll win it."

Griffin has felt the pressure in rushing for more than 100 yards in every game during the last two years—an NCAA record 22 consecutive regular-season games, plus the 1973 Rose Bowl — and he expects to be even more of a target now that he stands above the crowd as the 40th Heisman winner. His next outing is against Southern California and the Heisman runner-up in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1.

"I'm sure they'll probably come and shoot at me more, but I'll just go out and do my best in every game. Coach (Woody) Hayes says you either get better or you get worse and I'll just try to improve next year."

That will take some doing since Griffin has 4,064 yards rushing in his college career and gained 1,620 yards this season—most among the nation's major collegians.

Griffin captured the Heisman in a runaway over Southern California senior tailback Anthony Davis. The two will meet in the Rose Bowl for the third year in a row.

Griffin received 683 first-place votes — each worth three points — and 1,850 of a possible 2,587 points from a nation-wide panel of 840 electors. He was named second on 198 ballots and third on 75 others. The votes were tabulated on a 3-2-1 point basis.

Davis received 130 first-place votes, 148 seconds and 103 thirds for 819 points.

Joe Washington, a junior halfback from Oklahoma, finished third with 87 first-place votes and 661 points. The cane Notre Dame quarterback Tom Clements and Nebraska quarterback Dave Humm.

Nothing Stops Kareem

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, N'waukee's over-sized centre, is wearing aviator goggles to protect a severely lacerated left eye which—along with a fractured right hand—kept him sidelined for the first five weeks of the National Basketball Association season. The goggles, he claims, do not give him perfect sight, but opposing NBA teams would not agree with him.

The 7-foot-2 giant continued his magnificent comeback Tuesday night, scoring 36 points—including 24 in the first half—grabbing 13 rebounds and hanging out seven assists to lead the resurgent Bucks to a 110-101 victory over Buffalo Braves.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, Golden State Warriors defeated New Orleans Jazz 122-104, New York Knicks defeated Los Angeles Lakers 100-95, Chicago Bulls beat Portland Trail Blazers 98-91, Atlanta Hawks beat Phoenix Suns 91-85 and Cleveland Cavaliers defeated Houston Rockets 97-91.

Canadian Decision Unchangeable

Tradeau Unmoved by Ford's Pleas for Canadian Oil for U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and U.S. President Ford discussed each other's oil concerns Wednesday but came away with no apparent change in each other's point of view.

The discussions were part of their first meeting ever and included the announced Canadian intention to phase out exports to the U.S.

The two national leaders held a two-hour meeting in the president's White house oval office, the first of two sessions of wide ranging discussions.

If there was one clear message that came out of the discussions, described variously as warm, frank and friendly, it was this: Canada's decision to phase out exports is unchangeable although there will be discussions with Americans during the eight-year phaseout period on how it will be done.

Trudeau explained Canada's diminishing oil reserve position; Ford expressed support for the position of 17 congressmen who expressed fear for the future of border state refineries.

Oil was only one of a variety of subjects discussed by the two leaders who devoted half their time to international matters.

Another issue, barely touched upon, was that of beef and pork quotas imposed by the United States in response to beef quotas established by Canada.

In this case, both men expressed confidence that officials who met here last week and will meet again in Ottawa in January can find a solution to the situation.

The prime minister, who arrived here Wednesday morning, also attended a working dinner along with 27 other U.S. and Canadian officials, including External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen.

Both said their meetings were successful.

Ford talked of differences between these two countries and added: "I feel that our meeting today was one of the most constructive, one of the most friendly, and with each of us expressing where we had differences."

The prime minister made something less than a splash here. Local newspapers barely mentioned the visit Wednesday. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who started a formal visit today, was getting more news coverage.

Cabinet-level U.S.-Canadian Conferences Thing of Past

WASHINGTON (CP) — The once-weighty occasions when the cream of Canadian and United States cabinet ministers gathered to discuss high finances were described Wednesday as a thing of the past.

A state department official said reporters he doubts that the regular cabinet-level discussions will be revived.

Neither country would regard such meetings now as efficient mechanism for resolving their problem, the official said.

Instead, he foresaw a continuation of the current pattern, with discussions first among bureaucrats as a problem arose, followed if necessary by a meeting of the ministers directly concerned.

It has been four years since the last meeting of the Joint Canada-United States Committee on Trade and Economic Affairs, to give it its formal name.

The semi-official death notice for the committee was delivered almost casually, during a briefing on the current visit to Washington by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Asian Mishaps Take 300 Lives

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Parachutists were dropped on a rocky hill today where a chartered Dutch airliner loaded with Moslem pilgrims crashed and burned, the airline reported. Police said apparently none of the 191 persons reported aboard survived.

The parachutists were dropped after helicopters were unable to land at the crash site because of continuing bad weather. A spokesman said persons in the helicopters saw no survivors.

The DC4 of the Dutch charter line Martinair was carrying Indonesian Moslems on a pilgrimage to Mecca, Islam's holy city in Saudi Arabia. It crashed in a rainstorm Wednesday night about 70 miles southeast of Colombo in an area known locally as the Seven Virgins for the seven rugged peaks dotting the landscape.

The pilot was preparing to land at Colombo's Ratmalana airport, and police said he gave no indication of any trouble.

TEHRAN (AP) — The roof over the main passenger hall at Tehran's Mehrabad airport collapsed today and between 50 and 100 persons were believed killed, airport officials said.

There was about eight inches of snow on the roof, and some airport workers said this caused the collapse of the ceiling. But others on the scene expressed doubt that the steel and concrete construction could have collapsed under the weight of the snow.

The roof fell into the crowded main hall with a roar, burying the victims under tons of wreckage.

"It happened so quickly that the victims scarcely had time to scream," said Associated Press correspondent Parvi Razin, who had just left the hall.

Razin said airport officials and members of the public tried without success to move the twisted steel girders with their bare hands but could not reach the victims.

The $34 Question

Belleville school crossing guard Albert Barker says he and other pensioners assigned safety duties in the city now need more than they're paid — $34 a week. He has written city council for recourse. While awaiting response he continues at his post — shepherding youngsters across Pine St to Queen Victoria School. For details, see front page, second section.

Grain Moves Again

OTTAWA (CP) — A tentative contract settlement that could start grain moving again was reached Wednesday, but an angry union official said a premature announcement by Treasury Board President Jean Chretien has threatened the pact.

The settlement between treasury board and food inspectors came only about a week to 10 days left in the Great Lakes shipping season and an estimated 30 per cent of domestic supplies for eastern Canada locked up in Thunder Bay or points west.

Mr. Chretien announced the agreement—which must be ratified by union members—in the Commons. When he released the information, a memorandum of understanding was not signed.

The minister said the agreement provided for an 18-per-cent pay raise in a 15-month contract. But the agreement provides for a lump-sum payment of $675, a 15-per-cent pay increase back to July 29 and a further pay raise of three per cent April 1, 1975. When proposed contract would end Nov. 8, 1975.

That would provide the employees who now average $10,628 annually with a substantially larger increase.

DETROIT (AP) — Americans bought 378,000 fewer cars from the major auto makers during November of this year than they did during the same month of 1973, a 35-per-cent drop in domestic car sales by the four big U.S. auto firms.

Sugar Price Cut Again

Sam Crystal, vice-president public affairs for Food City Ltd. and IGA, said a five pound bag of sugar now will cost $2.39.

Clamor Over SIU Swells

OTTAWA (CP) — The clamor over Seafarers' International Union political donations spread rapidly on several fronts Wednesday.

Among the developments that took place were:

—Disclosure by two Progressive Conservative MPs that they, as well as Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, Labor Minister John Munro and former labor minister Martin O'Connell, had received electors campaign contributions from the union.

—Acknowledgement outside the Commons by Manpower Minister Robert Andras, in answer to a question from a CTV reporter, that he too had received a donation of $250 from the union for his 1974 election campaign expenses. He did not amplify the reply except to say no strings were attached to the donation.

—Attacks by both Mr. Allmand and Justice Minister Otto Lang on the integrity of Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic member of the Ontario legislature, who last week first suggested impropriety in federal ministers accepting such donations.

—A report in The Globe and Mail quoting an unnamed Ottawa police spokesman as alleging he had a tape recording which showed that Mr. Munro had solicited a campaign donation from the union—exactly the opposite of what Mr. Munro says happened.

Police sources questioned on Wednesday have denied any knowledge of such a tape recording.

In interviews outside the Commons Wednesday, Michael Forrestal (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) and Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) both maintained that their receiving donations for the July 8 election campaign from the SIU was a far different thing that Mr. Munro accepting such a donation.

Canadians Won't Pay For Mistakes by U.S.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan used National Farmers Union (NFU) annual meeting Wednesday to take another verbal swing at United States trade practices.

Mr. Whelan told Canada's cattle producers there is no way they would have to pay for mistakes made on the border that resulted in over-production.

He chastised U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz for saying the United States was only playing Canada's trade game.

"I've played a lot of hockey, with a referee and without, but you don't play many games if all the players stick to the rules," Mr. Whelan told the 600 delegates.

He said the "common sense" quotas imposed by Canada were designed only to stop abnormal imports and that trade between the two nations is important.

"In 1973 agricultural exports to the U.S. were worth $548 million, while Canadians in that year spent twice as much on imports of agricultural product's from the U.S.

Over production in the U.S. last year in cattle harmed Canadian beef producers and "we are not going to do it again."

Mr. Whelan called for all-out production of grain next year, saying it would take at least two world bumper crops to increase grain stocks to reasonable levels.

Sirica Rules Trial Will End Without Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge John Sirica, ruled today that the Watergate coverup trial will be concluded without the testimony of former president Richard Nixon.

Ruling on requests that Nixon's testimony be taken by deposition, Sirica said: "The motions are denied and the trial will proceed."

Sirica announced his ruling last hours after Nixon's lawyers said that the former president would not be available to give a deposition until long after the date set by a team of court-appointed doctors.

The doctors had informed Sirica that they carried they felt Nixon would be well enough to be questioned would be Jan. 6. Nixon's lawyers argued that Jan. 6 was the earliest date the former president could begin preparing for his testimony.

Authority to Explain Sharp Budget Increase

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — A set of three special meetings have been called by the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority in an effort to forestall excessive opposition to a possible 100-per-cent increase in its 1975 budget.

The meetings, tentatively set for Stirling, Colborne and Campbellford, will take place in January and February prior to the budget's official presentation at the authority's annual meeting in late February.

Authority officials said they fear the budget increase, from $223,000 this year to a possible $500,000 in 1975, may force resistance from the 17 municipalities that participate in the authority.

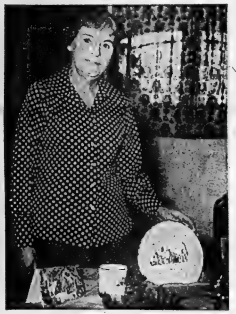
Any increase in the budget is met by increased levies against each municipality.

In an interview Wednesday, Cy Macdonald, information board chairman, said the meetings are a new approach to the budget question.

"We've cut our budget and it was large enough to shock us," Mr. Macdonald said. "Even though it has been cut back, "we're going to have to do a selling job before the annual meeting."

All 17 councils will be invited to the meetings.

"We'll explain to the councils, what we're going to do and why we need the money," he said.



The authority has curtailed its property acquisition program and now is engaged in the more expensive development of its conservation areas. It has also enlarged its permanent staff and bought needed equipment.

"We're going to have to spend money to develop" said Mr. Macdonald. He added that he did not know what the final budget figure will be.

When the budget was brought down in previous years, no major objections have been forced by the authority. Through these meetings, it is hoped it will be explained before the official presentation.

"We have not yet had a ballot and we don't want to start one now," he said. "They'll (councils) drop their objections on us and we'll sort it out before the annual meeting."

The idea for the special meetings, similar to those held annually by the Catarqui Conservation Authority, was brought back by authority officials who attended a bi-annual conference in Ottawa in September.

Anniversary Plate

With the centenial of the Presbyterian Church in Canada now being celebrated, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton, is offering commemorative plates and mugs for sale. Mrs. Lea Nourse, chairman of the centenial committee of St. Andrew's displays the attractive centenial china.

Madoc Scraps Parade

MADOC — The Chamber of Commerce here has decided not to hold a Santa Claus parade this year because of lack of interest.

Although his entrance will be less glamorous, Santa Claus will still be coming to village before Christmas to see the children. Several local businessmen are planning to hire a Santa Claus to distribute candy on Madoc's main street Dec. 14.

Only 12 people showed up for the chamber's organizational meeting although over 70 people were informed that it was being held. The chamber agreed that there is a definite need for new members, ideas and leadership.

One member suggested a dinner meeting be held in January or February to recruit new members to the organization.

The Chamber is presently accepting donations from all businessmen who would like to donate toward this project.

Christmas Cheer

Christmas is now less than three weeks away and as if to bring that point home to town shoppers, Trenton PUC workers hung Christmas decorations from lamp poles downtown Wednesday. Jim Jones puts up a scroll on Dundas St. W., work the men started last week but couldn't complete because of poor weather.

St. Andrew's Marks 100th Birthday

PICTON — The centenial of the Presbyterian Church in Canada is being marked by St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton, through the sale of commemorative plates and mugs.

Chairman of St. Andrew's Centenial committee, Mrs. Lea Nourse, says the plate is cenerified making it a collector's item.

She notes the plates and mugs should be of special interest to persons married or baptized at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Picton. The momentoes also are suggested as appropriate Christmas gifts for those who may have enjoyed regular services or special occasions at the church.

To promote sales of the commemorative plates, a display table will be set up in the Armory Mall this Saturday following the Santa Claus parade.

Plates sell for $2.50 while mugs are priced at $1.50. Members of the plate and cup committee are Lee Nourse, Jack Jones and Marie Jones.

The mementoes are now on display at Simpsons Sears Picton order office, Vic Lord's Camera Shop, Falconer's Jewellery, Nourse Radio and Electric and at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Since centenial activities began in June, 1974, St. Andrew's has initiated several fund-raising projects and renovated the interior of the church. Re-decoration of the church was a major centenial project with approximately $5,000 spent on improvements.

Among the projects to raise money for the church this year were a walk-a-thon, a smorbasbord supper, a candy sale, a bottle drive and the sale of the anniversary mugs and plates.

Minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church is Rev. Robert Jones. Chairman of the centenial committee is Mrs. Lee Nourse. Secretary is Andrew McIntosh and treasurer, Barton Reid.

St. Nick Early?

PICTON — Picton residents roused early today by a loud clatter may have attributed the noise to a trial run by St. Nick.

The Picton police department and the local detachment of the provincial police reported numerous inquiries from residents awakened about 5 a.m. by an explosive sound.

A police call to CFB Trenton confirmed a classified exercise is being held but its location was not specified.

Election Confusing

SOPHIASBURG — Sophiasburg reeve George Foster, re-elected this week, says students should be instructed in contemporary municipal government as well as ancient history.

He observed prior to the recent election he spoke with several young persons who seemed confused regarding election procedures and were unaware of how to get their names on the voters' lists in some cases.

Reeve Foster suggested it is beneficial to learn about "Columbus and 1492" but students also should be instructed in modern municipal government.

437 Squadron Replacing Cyprus Troops

CFB Trenton are currently engaged in operation Snowgoose, the rotation of Canada's peace-keeping contingent of approximately 1,000 men on Cyprus.

Seeing 707s from 437 Squadron here will have made five flights by the time the operation is completed within the next two weeks.

Aircraft will return the Canadian Airborne Regiment Regiment from London, Ontario to their home base in Edmonton. The Royal Canadian Regiment from London, Ontario will be replacing them for a six-month tour of duty.

Peacekeeping forces in Cyprus are routinely rotated every six months.

$5,000 For Madoc Winner

MADOC — Mrs. Art Bird of Madoc was the winner of $5,000 in the Nov. 18 Olympic Lottery draw.

Barbara and Arlene Bateman, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bateman, Madoc, shared a winning ticket for a $1,000 prize.

Dr. Raymond Kurys, a Madoc dentist, is a three-time winner. He won $1,000 in the first Olympic draw and held a one-fifth share on $100 winning tickets in the second and third draws.

Personality Cult

The powers that be in the Soviet Union have always looked askance at what they term "cult of personality." Men such as Georgi Malenkov and Nikita Khrushchev fell from grace because in effect it was deemed that the job was going to their heads.

Malenkov was banished to a job as boss of some remote power station, and Khrushchev dropped out of sight, to reappear only occasionally, to vote for some pre-selected party candidate.

While democracy as we know it in Canada and the western world cannot be compared with the politics of Communism, it may be asked if sometimes this "personality" cult does not intrude here too and detract from the overall needs of the country.

Remember in the late fifties and early sixties when then Finance Minister Fleming was warring with Bank of Canada governor James Coyne?

Coyne, in a memorable statement, said that Canadians were "living grandly beyond their means."

This of course is what is happening today, only nobody seems able to do anything about it.

But there was this clash of personalities, which was resolved only when Coyne resigned.

Then came the loss of confidence among Conservatives in the leadership of John Diefenbaker, the maneuvering by party luminaries such as Dalton Camp, and what Peter Newman in a book called "The Night of the Knives." It was indeed a Bonnassque scenario in which Diefenbaker lost the leadership, but today of course he is still very much around as the member for Prince Albert.

Something of the same is now happening with his successor Robert Stanfield, a three-time election loser who has made it clear he plans to step down before long. And this, oddly enough, when reports from Ottawa say Stanfield currently is more forceful and effective in Opposition than at any time in the past.

Today other personalities fill the spotlight and there is confrontation between the federal government and the provinces over oil; between Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Turner on the one hand, and Premiers Blakeney and Lougheed on the other.

We hear much about these men and their jousting, but is enough attention being paid to the overall problems of Canada and to the security of the nation, not only militarily, but where essential supplies of fuel, food and so on are concerned?

A Fine Effort

Belleville's Christmas parade was another fine effort. The sun shone, there was a wealth of artistic, creative, and mechanical presentations, and a representative entry of citizens of all ages to give the whole event colour and momentum.

Every year there is something new, and this combined with familiar faces, bands, men, majorettes, clowns, trick cyclists and all, makes the parade an always fresh and enjoyable experience. Full marks to all those who work so hard to make this December event such an enjoyable one.

Santa was there of course, with his pretty helpers, and there was lots of excitement among the young people in the crowd. And, as previously, Belleville's mailmen took letters from the youngsters to send on to Santa. It was a good day all round.

Education Board

Women candidates showed strength in the local vote for membership on Hastings county board of education.

Eloise Burr joins incumbent Miriam Graham among the Belleville representation that also includes Don Thrush, Bob Ord, and Clark Williams.

Mr. Thrush lost last time around, then was appointed to the board to replace the late Everett Fairman. He just made it in Monday's vote. But close call or not, Belleville voters have chosen well in Mr. Thrush and the other members for this county board.

So Why Must He Quit?

Rejuvenated Robert Stanfield Socks It To The Grits

by RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — What, suddenly, ask Conservatives and Liberals alike, has come over Robert Stanfield?

The Liberals who, for seven years, have rewarded him with tolerant indifference, now are looking at him with new respect and just a touch of nervousness.

They are wondering and perhaps worrying just a little, what next he might be saying about them that will wound their sensibilities and maybe even start the taxpayers asking questions.

Strangely, he has been outraging their self-esteem and that is not exactly easy to do. His own Conservatives are contemplating him through different eyes, too.

They are the eyes of unconcealed admiration for his new parliamentary style.

Even his detractors among the Tories — and they have been active and vocal ever since he displaced Dief the Chief as leader — are falling silent.

They are even going so far as to admit "Hey, the guy's good."

And it is not just the charitable remark of defeated candidates who can be generous in their appraisal because he is leaving.

For the guy is good.

He has been good all along in his own quiet way.

But now the quality of his excellence has changed.

He is no longer quiet, nor is he playing the part of the ineffective parliamentarian who hesitates to use the nasty word for fear that feelings — even of Liberals — might be hurt.

Now no more.

Listen to him lace it to the Liberals:

Watch them squirm as he skewers them with the sharp rapier he seldom before would shaft across the floor of the cruel but seldom defended.

Even jolly Gene Whelan, the self-styled world's greatest agriculturist, minister and wit, giggles in embarrassment as Stanfield spears his ego.

Then Minister after Minister is pinned by Stanfield as "Mr. Clean," "great overachiever in inflation who has swallowed his words so many times he now speaks from the stomach."

And John Turner rather than a serious financial thinker, Robert Stanfield tells him to his face, is Parliament's prim practitioner of "brinkmanship."

And what about Gene Whelan? "He has acquired some delusions of grandeur," Stanfield tells the increasingly lumpish modest Agriculture Minister, "because he now refers to himself in the third person."

"He keeps claiming he won the election — I would have thought he might have given some credit to the Prime Minister — and I wonder whether he really would have won that election without my help."

This self-deprecating crack brings down the House, as both Liberals and Conservatives break up in laughter and Gene Whelan breaks down in blushes.

Now for Defence Minister Richardson.

"A pleasant man," murmurs Stanfield of the cabinet's rabbit millionaire. "who has demoralized the Armed Forces without even trying.

He has just opened a cookery school in Ottawa, Near East — and there's no question of his proven ability when it comes to making a mess."

Now it is Prime Minister Trudeau's turn for Stanfield shafting.

How can the PM have the nerve to rebuke Health Minister Lalonde for saying Prime Minister Trudeau would visit Israel, asks Stanfield, while remaining silent about his wife Margaret accepting a fancier "freebie" to Japan from a Hong Kong shipping magnate?

"If it is good for the PM's wife," snaps Stanfield, "it has to be OK for ministers and the whole federal public service!"

And think about that.

Change in Date Possible

Winter Elections Pose Problems

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's University's Campus TV

TORONTO — Windsor had a very severe storm on election day, and because of this we may see some changes in our election, both in the municipal and provincial fields, and particularly in the matter of their timing.

As you know the Municipal Act now provides that all local elections be held on the first Monday in December, and further that the polls must be open from 11 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Well in the border city conditions were so bad that some polls couldn't open at all.

This meant they couldn't be open the required time for Municipal Act requires.

The act says that the polls must be open for a full, continuous nine hours. And it provides that when this is impossible because of an emergency they then must be open the following day and it still can't fulfil the requirement on subsequent days until it is possible for them to do so.

The Windsor experience showed two things.

First was how clumsy the Municipal Act is on this requirement. For instance if the polls complete the full nine hours and others don't, how is the voter to know which polls will be open the following day and which won't be.

Then there is the second factor that I was referring to. And in most parts of Ontario December can be a hazardous time to hold an election.

Insofar as storms go it can be the most hazardous month.

The reason for setting the December date originally was that this would mean that incoming councils wouldn't have too long a time standing by while waiting to take over Jan. 1.

But in practical terms another month's waiting time shouldn't be too much of a handicap. In fact it would give a further period to familiarize themselves with their upcoming work and be better prepared from the start.

The second point should mean that we will give more thought to holding any elections in winter in Ontario, unless they are absolutely essential.

At one time no political leader would have thought of calling a winter election.

This was largely because of the difficulties of campaigning. In recent years with improved roads and transportation services we have tended to veer away from this thought.

But now that we have seen an election itself pretty well stormed out there will be rethinking and it is doubtful if we will ever see a winter general election.

Consumer Spending Is Healthy As Christmas Rush Gathers Steam

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

For Canadian retailers, December is the make-or-break month.

So far, business appears to be good in most areas. Consumer spending figures are one of the few relatively bright spots in the economy.

However, retailers may well need the cushion of a fat pre-Christmas shopping spree to help them over the November period that some economists foresee.

Latest figures from Statistics Canada cover only the first nine months of this year. They show retail sales of $21,419-million, an increase of 15.4 per cent over the January-September period last year.

Two factors lead to cautious shadow over that substantial increase. One is that consumer prices rose by 10.9 per cent in the 12 months ended in September. Thus the real increase in average sales value was only 4.5 per cent.

The other factor is that September retail sales, when adjusted to remove seasonal factors, were 2.6 per cent lower than August sales.

Despite these qualifiers, retail sales have maintained a remarkably good pace in 1974, in the face of gloomy economic developments.

The Canadian economy has shown no real growth for two consecutive three-month periods. It's unusual for retail trade to keep on growing if those circumstances continue.

Part of the explanation may be that the impact of recession on consumers has been softened by wage settlements for organized labor, increases in unemployment-insurance benefits and other transfer payments, and personal cuts in income-tax rates.

And part of the explanation, almost certainly, has been a perceptible loss of public confidence in the value of money. Instead of saving for tomorrow, more and more consumers are hurrying to spend their money today—before the price goes up again.

Even corporate appeals to consumers to stop buying high-priced sugar are being largely ignored.

Money is not much of a problem for shoppers, despite constant increases in price-tags. They can always borrow.

Consumer credit outstanding on the books of selected credit bureaus amounted to $15,570 million at the end of September, up 18.4 per cent from a year earlier. Personal cash loans by chartered banks rose 20.8 per cent during the 12 months ended in September, to a record $10,410-million.

That suggests an image of a typical Canadian shopper with plenty of cash, in debt more than ever, determined to spend.

Between now and Christmas, a clear pattern will emerge.

If a consumer is feeling the pinch of inflation or recession, the Christmas shopping list is a relatively easy place to start economizing.

But such consumer resistance is far showing up in clear-cut way, according to reports from the retail front.

Economically-weak Pakistan Has Difficulties On Many Fronts

By JOHN HAY
The Canadian Press

Suffering two years of economic recession, Pakistan appears to be collapsing into a political shambles as it continues to fight off the after-effects of the Bangladesh independence war.

Amid the turmoil is the threat that Prime Minister Ali Bhutto would use a Canadian-built nuclear reactor to produce a nuclear device to match India's test blast of last May.

Bhutto has vowed suspended normal governments in Baluchistan and North West Frontier provinces, installing his own governors in their place.

The national parliament in Islamabad faces a walkout by opposition members in protest of Bhutto's stories — sometimes violent — of corruption, nepotism and anti-government influences.

Since the Bangladesh war of 1971, which dismembered Pakistan's Eastern wing, the country has experienced widening gaps between the central government and separatist-minded provinces.

Thousands have been imprisoned during the conflicts, which have been marked by riots and terrorism.

The bloody Bangladesh war reduced Pakistan of its most unhappy and poorest territory.

Freed of the drag of supporting poverty-ridden Bangladesh (East Pakistan), the Pakistani economy showed a real recovery after the war and Pakistan became a prize exporter.

But with 1973 came disastrous floods, followed by equally damaging drought in 1974.

The economy, which Bhutto had hoped would recover in the wounds of the war, is in dire straits.

India's nuclear test—aided by Canadian technology and materials—added to the pressure Pakistan has always seen in its neighbor.

But Bhutto's real military problem is that the United States has cut off all arms shipments as Pakistan, Bangladesh and India have signed a peace agreement.

If Pakistan cannot get enough conventional arms, Bhutto has said, "we can't do anything but explode some sort of nuclear device."

Now the Canadian reactor at Karachi to supply plutonium for such a device. Pakistan would have to violate an agreement with Ottawa providing for inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

That agreement is stricter than the one covering India's CIRUS reactor which apparently provided India's explosive material.

There's no evidence that Bhutto will resort to a costly nuclear confrontation with his international commitments, although Pakistan has not joined the nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

His references to the possibility seem aimed at prompting Canada to send additional arms.

But observers are suggesting that his most serious threat, if he cannot get more arms, if Pakistan's economy fails and Pakistan continues to be threatened by India, is to pursue a renewed danger from India.

Cutbacks in Defence

Peterborough Examiner.

Four Canadian destroyers are being taken out of service this year because the Armed Forces lacks the crew and money to keep them operating.

At least one of the destroyers will be sold for scrap. Two others may be scrapped. The fourth is being decommissioned for conversion to an alongside — the - wharf training ship.

The four destroyers, which represent a Canadian taxpayer investment of about $100 million, have an estimated "combined total of about 12 years' useful life left in them. They won't get the chance to prove or disprove the estimates.

The destroyers will join a growing list of mothballed military equipment. Other ships and aircraft have been cut of service for up to a year because of the lack of men and funds to run them. Some pieces of equipment - like the hydrofoil Bras d'Or - have never seen active service, either because of technical flaws or financial restraints.

The Wardline Command now has a "fleet" of 23 destroyers to fulfil its defence and support tasks. It has been waiting for over a year to hear the government's plans for procuring replacement - ships, but, to date, has been disappointed.

Queen's Study Of Disraeli Letters

From Queen's University's Campus TV

Transporting on a million dollars' worth of letters written in the hand of Benjamin Disraeli himself was not one of the adventures of Dr. John Matthews of the English Department in his most recent trip to England.

Ever since he began searching for the missing correspondence and papers of Disraeli, one of Britain's most colourful Prime Ministers, Dr. Matthews has passed from one coincidence to another.

The search began over a year ago when Dr. Matthews unearthed several Disraeli letters during a sabbatical year in England, written by Disraeli and forgotten in trunks and castles over the years.

Back now with even more material from his second trip to England, Matthews has set up a home work schedule from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m. every night, finally calendaring copies of the letters.

"Every night there's a new discovery," he says. "You never know what you're going to turn up." Findings range from an obscure fact to information which alters fundamentally the standard biography of the man he affectionately calls "Dizzy."

At the end of his stay in England, Dr. Matthews and his wife had decided to take a three day break from their heavy research schedule, in the Lake District, an area Dr. Matthews knew had no connection to Disraeli.

But, on a tour of Muncaster Castle on the coast, he couldn't resist asking the curator if there were any Disraeli materials in the library. As a result, the Matthews' "break" was spent in the castle sifting through 14 trunks of papers owned by the daughter of the 11th Duke of Somerset, who had had an affair with Disraeli in 1864.

"Her interest didn't go as far as sorting out the paper," Dr. Matthews says, "so in addition to some 200 letters from Disraeli, the trunks held letters from Gladstone, Byron and "everyone you could think of," he adds.

As with most of the other Disraeli papers he has found, he was able to borrow them long enough to get them photostat copied. One owner, Lord Bradford, had no qualms when his private collection was carried off in the car trunk. In fact he invited Matthews to. Dr. Matthews spoke of renting a security van for the short trip to the microfilming firm.

The professor found during his search that every owner was a known collection of Disraeli papers — the larger than estimated at first.

"The main hunting for the papers began at the turn of the century, when many of the people Disraeli wrote about were still alive," he explained. Many of these writings were suppressed, because Disraeli "spoke very frankly," Dr. Matthews said.

Dr. Matthews' two partners in the research project are Prof. Donald Schurman of the History Department and Prof. J.A.W. Gunn in Political Studies. In addition to the study of English at Queen's, who are taking a keen interest in the hands of a New York psychiatrist who is analyzing them to discover personality traits.

"It's pretty hectic," Dr. Matthews admitted. Transcriptions of the pre-1837 letters must be done to meet the publishing date, set for 1978, when Disraeli's letters now to fill 30 volumes, and if two volumes a year are put out it will take until 1993.

Policemen Cannot Be Excluded

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Donald Morand ruled Wednesday that he had no power to exclude police witnesses from the courtroom during testimony by fellow policemen at public hearings of the royal commission on Metropolitan Toronto police practices.

"I can't exclude them," the Ontario Supreme Court judge said. "I just don't have that authority."

The inquiry was called by the provincial government after instances of alleged police brutality appeared in local newspapers.

Sitting as sole commission member, he was replying to lawyer Kevin Jones who said failure to exclude other policemen who participated in a Feb. 9 drug raid during testimony by their colleagues would mean that "the whole royal commission investigation will be substantially upset."

Mr. Jones is representing Thomas Henderson, his wife Jill, both 19, and his brother-in-law Samuel Winman, 15, who were in the Toronto apartment when it was raided.

The lawyer told the commissioner that because the primary purpose of the inquiry was to examine police practices, it was essential that each officer involved in the raid give his own version of what happened and not have his testimony colored by that of his fellow officers.

"I say, with respect, that such an order would make an awful lot of sense," he said.

Mr. Jones made his request as Robert Rusk, 3s 30-year old probationary sergeant on the force, took the stand. Sgt. Rusk is the first of five policemen who participated in the raid to testify.

Commission lawyer Earl Cherniak said that while there was "much force" in Mr. Jones's argument, the commission's concern went beyond simply examining police practices.

He said there was also the matter of dealing with specific allegations against police officers and these officers had a right under law to attend the hearings.

Mr. Justice Morand concurred with Mr. Cherniak and ruled that no one would be required to leave the courtroom.

Stable Income Plan Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — An income stabilization plan for western grain farmers which "could cost taxpayers as much as $100 million a year three very years" was from the opposition after it was introduced in the Commons Wednesday.

The Western Grain Stabilization Act is designed to ease financial pressure on producers during times of poor crops or sagging markets. It would set up a fund into which Ottawa would double every dollar contributed by farmers whose primary product is wheat, oats, barley, flax, rye or rapeseed. The maximum farmer contribution would be $1,500.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, told a news conference that whenever a producer's net income dropped below the Prairie average of the previous five years, the government would be made in proportion to farmers' contributions.

Farmers would voluntarily pay up to $500 a year into the fund—equal to two per cent of their gross cash receipts to a maximum of $25,000.

Mr. Lang could not give a precise figure, but expected that after a lucrative year like 1974, the government might pay out $100 million if the bottom fell out of the grain business next year.

Cigarette Ads Seduce Women

"I'm pretty intolerant of anybody smoking, but women who smoke really burn me up.

Here we are in this area where we can prove we're smarter than men, and we're blowing it.

Men started smoking long before us. We're still behind them in the long cancer percentages — but we're catching up fast.

The basic reason is envy to see: An even more drug cigarettes, more women are taking them up, with a vengeance that seems to be aimed directly at themselves.

According to latest statistics, one third of all Canadian women smoke. The figure, for men's one half.

There it good news about male statistics, there are. Surveys taken up to the end of 1973 show that there are nearly half a million fewer smokers in Canada today than was predicted in a 1965 forecast — and the reduction is due to male withpower.

The figures show that the number of Canadian men who smoking has increased in that time by eight per cent. But the number of women NOT smoking has gone down by one per cent.

Why? ?

Why are more girls and women, replacing husbands, fathers and brothers in a habit that yellows fingers, stains teeth, destroys lungs and pollutes air?

Because they're being seduced by some of the most clever advertising campaigns ever devised by man.

Playing on the current "women's lib" trend, colorful magazine ads suggest women have come a long way in their climb toward equality. No longer are women caught in the cringe-weakness of domestic life, flattened by domineering men who squashed their attempts in vote, think ... and smoke.

Nowadays, emancipated women are sleek, confident, free — wheeling chandeliers, equipped with equal opportunity and a long, slim, sexy cigarette — symbol of their new freedom.

Women who smoke today do so in the face of absolute knowledge that cigarettes are injurious to health. Yet still they persist, caught by habit, become addicted and the belief that they are "deciding for themselves."

Tobacco advertisements making process They feature, smoke-shirted Bunny girls' insensitive with pack of filter-tips in their pockets.

Or they show cigarettes in a fragile "feminine" setting, surrounded by wispy, pastel flowers, mantras to prove that smoking really is a lady's game.

Breath-taking, isn't it?

A major con-job is being pulled before our very eyes.

Advertisements appealing to women's "need for identity" are increasing cigarette sales even in the 15-to-18 age bracket.

Yet we don't have to put up with it.

We can demonstrate our real 20th-century freedom in a positive way by refusing to chase sly selling techniques.

We can write to cigarette manufacturers, magazine editors and member of parliament, to voice our distaste for this kind of sordid trickery.

We can work on our family and friends, to educate them to the health dangers of this insidious habit.

And we can come a long way and liberate ourselves ... we can stop smoking.

Education: A Joy Not a Drag

Do you believe that education should be a joy, not a drag? Ask Ezra Thompson of Vineland, Ontario. Mrs. Thompson knows that children can be inspired with enthusiasm for learning, and she is spreading her philosophy to children, parents and teachers.

A social worker for 19 years, Mrs. Thompson turned to teaching about 13 years ago. For six years she was principal at Maple Grove School in Vineland. In this small rural school, parent involvement and the teachers' concern for the child, not the curriculum, has proved that education can be a wonderful sharing experience.

Dear Doris: My father is clinging to me like something terrible. I simply can't get off anywhere without him begging and, even if I try to the corner store. He has a heart condition and should stop smoking but makes no effort to; but he continually complains about feeling ill.

I want to work in a city 20 miles away because my friends are there. My father insists I remain home — only I have realized, to keep him company and to be his chauffeur.

Doris, I am 23 years old. This sick existence is making me ill. I feel like a prisoner. After all, my father has got my mother but it seems he wants me around too.

Feeling Guilty

Dear Feeling: I could understand it better if your mother had passed on. Your father is leaning on you too heavily and should be helped to realize this.

There are times when a young person, with her life before her, has to take the bull by the horns and simply move out. I think this is one of them. Do it as kindly as you can, and see that you get back home often.

Dear Doris: I am looking for an enlightened husband for a group of women, where one person reads a question and a number answer by standing up.

Example: How many had a cooked cereal for breakfast this morning?

Can You Help?

Dear Can You Help: Well, perhaps I can, though I couldn't believe it if I knew just what the occasion was and what relate questions to it.

But here are some samples which might get you started:

Did you kiss your husband before you left the house? -Did you remember to take the dog out or put the cat out? Would you answer the door in curlers and housecoat? Would you return excess change given to you by a store clerk? Would you run to catch a bus? Would you pick flowers in a public park?

You'll need about 15 or 20 questions; and you'll need to make it clear that one stand up to indicate the answer "yes", but stay seated if the answer is "no." (If she is already standing, those who has stood up and sat down, she remains seated, or you won't be eliminating anybody.

You've got me dizzy figuring this out, but you can get a good games book from your library, with all types of elimination and other ideas.

(Doris reserves the right to ignore anonymous letters. If you have a legitimate beef, sign your name to it. Whether about it, sent to her in care of this newspaper, all names are kept confidential.)

Can Smoking Pot Cause Sterility?

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Is it true that guys who smoke grass when they are teenagers may not be able to have children later in life? Also, I've heard that 17-and 18-year-old girls mess around with grass they may not develop to be "mamby."

This sounds like a crock but I'd feel better if someone who was in touch with the experts could answer these questions. And while you are at it, Ann, how about pregnant women who smoke pot? Can this damage an unborn child?—Facts Wanted

Dear Facts: The jury is still out, but research at a Biology Centre in St. Louis produces some interesting findings. Here they are:

Heavy marijuana users had a lower level of male sex hormones and sperm. (Some were sterile.) This is not yet known whether fertility will return after the person has stopped smoking.

There is solid evidence that smoking ordinary cigarettes may harm an unborn child. Expectant mothers who smoke pot certainly run a greater risk.

As for pre-teens who smoke pot, this could upset the hormonal balance which does, indeed, affect physical development.

For years I have been warning young people to stay away from pot because we don't know the long-term side effects. At time goes by we keep finding evidence that marijuana is not harmless. Within five years we'll have the whole story, but for some of you it might be too darned late.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope this subject isn't too delicate to appear in your column. I can't bring myself to discuss it with a doctor and need an answer. I've never seen any reference to this problem anywhere, yet I can't be the only woman in the world who has it.

My husband has been a heavy drinker for years. It has caused me a great deal of suffering and I am not young anymore I still have an occasional urge for a sexual experience. So, I masturbate instead of going out and finding a willing partner, as some women do.

Is this physically harmful? Do clergymen consider it a sin? It isn't adultery but I feel guilty just the same. I hope you won't tell me to "keep busy." I'm so busy now I can't see straight. Please take this load off my mind, Ann.—Burdened

Dear B.: Masturbation, if it becomes obsessive and compulsive, can border on the pathological and, therefore, be harmful. But in the overwhelming majority of instances it is the only harmful thing about masturbation is the guilt. Is it a sin? It depends on whom you ask. Every enlightened clergyman I have questioned on this subject has said "no." And I have queried clergymen of every faith.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 13-year-old girl with a 10-year-old problem. She is my sister. When I have friends over, Jessie hangs around and makes a pest of herself. I have to bribe her to leave us alone and I think this is awful.

My mother tells me I must include Jessie because she is a member of the family. She is ruining my friendships. No 13-year-old wants to have a 10-year-old brat hanging around listening to every word. What can I do? If you'd be on my side it would help.—Stuck

Dear Stuck: Your mother should not permit your little sister to hang around when you have company. This is what makes siblings hate each other.

Jessie should be cultivating friends of her own and your mother ought to encourage it. Perhaps if you show your mom this column it will help.

A Cabinet To Match

The Quinte Sewing Centre is the mail can order you a quality cabinet to fit most sewing machines. And what a good idea, turning a useful piece of furniture into a beautiful piece of furniture too. But here's what really sells me on the idea of getting a machine cabinet from the Quinte Sewing Centre: Mr. Oudrim, who owns the centre goes and picks up machines and cabinets himself, not entrusting them to anyone else. To me that says more than all the well-written ads in the world. Here's a place where sewing machines matter almost as much as they do.

Me And The Snowstorm

Well, we finally had one of those unmentionables this week ish — the snowstorm. But you will also be aware no doubt, that Prince Edward County was very well prepared to the weather and this storm was no exception. What was freezing rain at the Bay Bridge became a blizzard at Mountain View. And there I was, alone in my new Datsun, on her virgin voyage through snow. Could she do it? Would I make it? Yes, she could and yes I did. If you'd like to have the comfort and reliability of a '74 Datsun at the best of prices and best tire, Vickery Car Sales, 143 North Front St. still have a few 74s around at 74 prices. And at this time of year, that exit will make Sidney Ian a Christmas shopping centre, since it has many gift ideas — clothing toys, cut glass, lamps and novelties, bar supplies — and cards and gift wrap. And a post office too. Now it that isn't a real gift centre, I don't know what is.

Strikes a Hazard

Three-fourths Of Italians Idle

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

About 14 million Italians, three-fourths of the labor force, refused to work Wednesday in press demands for raises to match the country's inflation rate of nearly 25 per cent.

In Britain, hordes of bread-hungry shoppers cleared grocers' shelves of crackers, flour and yeast on the second day of a strike by 33,000 employees of Isargo bakeries. Police said a 75-year-old pensioner collapsed and died in a bread line in Manchester.

Most workers in Italian industry, commerce and public offices were on strike for the day, including stock brokers in Milan. Thousands demonstrated in Turin, Bologna and Naples, but the unions decided not to rally in Rome to avoid hurting the new government of Premier Aldo Moro.

It was Italy's third nationwide strike in two months in a conflict over adjusting the cost-of-living allowance. Workers, now averaging $280 a month, want the scale realigned to give them immediate monthly increases of $20 to $45.

Despite warnings by British supermarkets that "crazy public buying" would lead to new shortages on top of already-acute supplies of sugar and salt, shoppers unable to find bread opted for any sort of bread substitute. Fashionable Harrods department store put two security guards in the bread line to keep order as wealthy dowagers jostled for the remaining loaves.

The strike forced people to wait hours in line to buy scarce loaves from small, independent bakeries. The bakery workers now make $52.21 a week and want that raised by almost 70 per cent to $92.80, which employers say would add 4% cents to the cost of a 33-cent loaf.

To try to deal with another English shortage, the European Common Market put out a call for sugar-producing countries to name their price for the supply of 200,000 tons of the expensive commodity, most of it to be resold to Britain.

And India announced that nearly 80 per cent of its export earnings this year will have to go to pay for food, fertilizer and oil.

Leaders of the nine Common Market countries prepared to meet in Paris next week to consider measures to deal with the energy crisis that brought on many of their economic difficulties.

Fear Auto Industry Slump Crossing Border

By GORDON LEGGE
The Canadian Press

The severe recession in the United States auto industry may be drifting into Canada.

Although it's too soon to tell, three of Canada's four major automotive manufacturers reported Wednesday sharp drops in their car and truck sales for November.

Only Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd., which had the brightest ever-all picture, reported higher total car and truck sales than November of last year.

Although total sales for the year remain exceptionally good, the disappointing November figures could mean trouble in the Canadian auto industry.

The Canadian automobile and auto parts industry has been forced recently to cut production and lay off hundreds of workers because of the severe drop in sales in the United States.

The drop in the Canadian market could mean more layoffs if it continues into 1975.

The most seriously affected was American Motors (Canada) Ltd. which reported a drop of about 33 per cent in car sales in November.

It was closely followed by General Motors of Canada Ltd., which had a 29.3 per cent drop in car sales and a 19.4 decline in truck sales.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. said passenger car sales dropped 16.2 while truck deliveries were off 9.9 per cent compared with last November.

Ford of Canada had a decrease of about two per cent in passenger car sales while truck sales increased about nine per cent.

British Researchers Say World Outlook Darkens

LONDON (CP) — One of Britain's most elite research agencies says today the outlook for the world economy has darkened notably during the last three months with no immediate improvement in sight.

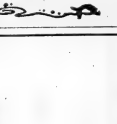
The National Institute of Economic and Social Research, in its final quarterly report for 1974, also adds a warning not present in previous studies:

"It is increasingly hard to see," it says, "many developing countries avoiding (the imposition of) severe import restrictions," with serious repercussions for world trade.

The report, nearly always markedly optimistic about Canada's economic prospects, this time expresses some reservations about the Canadian performance.

"The slowdown in economic activity (in Canada) now appears to be more severe than we foresaw in August," the institute says. "There may have been some decline in gross national product (GNP) in the third quarter."

Nevertheless, the private, non-profit organization foresees favorably with a two-per-cent growth in Canada's real GNP—the value of all goods and services produced by a country after adjustments to take account of inflation—of four per cent this year and up to 2.5 per cent in 1975.



However, that still compares drop this year in Britain's real GNP and a predicted increase of only .5 per cent next year.

In West Germany, which has one of the strongest economies in Europe, GNP rose by 1.5 per cent through most of 1974 and predictions show 2.5 per cent is the most likely gain which can be achieved next year.

Students Fear Loss Of Pubs

TORONTO (CP) — University and college student leaders objected Wednesday to what they said was discrimination against student groups by the Ontario government in removing student union control over on-campus pubs.

Chris Harries, spokesman for the Ontario Federation of Students, told a news conference that student unions have received information which contradicts statements by Jean Clement, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations, on the impact of Bill 146, to take effect next January.

The students fear that by allowing only university and college administrators to hold liquor licences, many smaller campuses will loose their pubs, he said.

Many of the pubs now are operated by incorporated student unions and students want the right to maintain control.

They also are seeking the rights for student governments to enter into legally-binding agreements with administrations to act as agents for liquor outlets on campus as well as an explanation of costs involved in bringing existing pubs up to liquor board standards.

Mr. Harries said the students have estimated suggested renovations to all pubs might run $1 million—money which students and administration feel would be better put to educational uses.

Jury Hears Transcripts Of Tapes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The jury in the Peter Demeter murder trial listened to a series of transcribed tape recordings Wednesday the second time they have heard that evidence.

The reading of the transcripts, which promised a lengthy delay in the jury's deliberations, came after the jurors asked to see copies of the evidence.

The jury asked Mr. Justice Campbell Grant for the transcripts as part of a request for a review of various parts of the evidence, but the Ontario Supreme Court Justice, after talking with counsel, decided not to give them the documents themselves.

Instead, he began to read the thick sheaf of single - spaced transcripts to the jury. He had court officials pass out pens and pads so its ejurors could take notes.

Once the transcripts have been read, the jury is to retire once again to ponder the verdict.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Finance Firm Spokesman Opposes Sales Curbs

TORONTO (CP) — W. L. McAuley, a representative of the Federal Council of Sales Finance Companies, said Wednesday that Ontario residents do not need Bill 85, an act to protect consumers from unfair sales practices.

Speaking to the legislature's justice committee, Mr. McAuley said definitions of unfair practices are vague and the proposed legislation "falls far short" of regulating unfair practices.

Trevor Morgan, general counsel for the Canadian Life Insurance Association, said activities of association members fall under the jurisdiction of the superintendent of finurance.

Mr. Morgan said life insurance compallies have the expertises to supervise their product and any new legislation would not be necessary.

Bob Snelgrove, spokesman for the Canadian Manufacturing Association, said the act is vague in its definitions of unfair practices.

Tom Blakeley, president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, asked on behalf of the Institute of Canadian Advertising that advertising asticles be exempted from the act.

He said agencies would not be able to function if they were required to research every advertisement.

Land Tenure Issue
Farmers' Union Leaders Resign

WINNIPEG (CP) — The presidents of three National Farmers' Union locals in Ontario have resigned their positions in protest over the union's adopting a land tenure policy.

The union policy recommends the placing of land under public ownership be considered with tenure for farmers being secured through leases.

The acceptance of the policy at the NFU annual convention prompted the immediate resignation of Leon Meerseman of Leamington; Hector Bastien of Essex; and Lyle Dawson of Tilbury.

They said they strongly opposed the tenure policy; although they resigned their official positions, they have not resigned their membership in the NFU.

Mrs. Meerseman said he had to opt for freedom for the farmer on the question of land ownership.

Strong feelings were expressed on both sides of the issue before the policy was approved. The policy said the NFU should "take the lead in introducing new concepts of land tenure, including a revaluation of the principle of private land ownership compared to public ownership with tenure secured by leasing arrangements that would provide long-term security of tenure and transfer of tenure from one generation to the next within the family."

Mr. Meerseeman tried unsuccessfully to tone down the statement through removal of the phrases "including a revaluation of the principle of private land ownership compared to public ownership."

Restless Bush Pilot Tackles Pole on Cycle

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Jim Taylor is a 39-year-old soft-spoken man of slight build; he stands 5½-feet and weighs 125 pounds. He also is an intense man, a loner who has spent a good deal of his life as a bush and commercial pilot in the North.

His restlessness has led him to Newfoundland where he was for a time the private pilot for federal cabinet minister, Allan Jamieson, in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon. In the process his travelling has cost him his marriage.

Now in pursuit of a seven-year dream he will lose his farm and his semi-detached home. It may even cost him his life.

In March of 1975 Jim Taylor is going to try to ride across the pack ice to the North Pole on a motorcycle.

Seven years ago while he was working in the North he acquired "polar passion."

He read everything about previous attempts for the pole, starting with Admiral Robert Peary and Frederick Cook in the early 1900s to the Wally Herbert expedition in 1969, and came away with three conclusions.

—Neither Peary nor Cook made it to the pole.

—Expeditions which made it in 1967 and 1969 were attempts which relied heavily on outside support such as aircraft that flew ahead to spot breaks in the ice and warn the expedition.

—Neither dogsled nor snowmobile were fit for such a venture.

Mr. Taylor's answer is a motorcycle—no heavy load for dogs to carry, no heavy machine to drag out of the snow, but a vehicle balanced by the rider which can ride over pressure ridges of ice and be pushed if it runs into trouble.

For seven years Mr. Taylor, now a Mississauga real estate agent, nurtured his dream, perfected the idea and searched for backers. After spending more than 1,000 letters to Canadian companies asking for financial assistance, a Japanese motorcycle manufacturer donated a modified all-terrain motorcycle and suddenly his dream became a reality.

"It's patriotic in a way, I guess," he said. "No Canadian has done it. No one has done it this way. I'm not trying to look down on the Americans but their attempt with snowmobiles was only a publicity stunt."

He is determined his attempt will be the hard way. He plans to fly to Ellesmere Island in the Northwest Territories Feb. 27, 1975, and leave for the pole early in March.

He will have only one motorcycle with a few spare parts; if it breaks down, the attempt is over. He expects it will take from 15 days to 1½ months to reach the pole, depending on ice and weather conditions.

If and when he gets there, a plane he has hired will fly overhead to verify his position.

Suzuki Canada Ltd. will provide the motorcycle, modified for Arctic travel. The eight-inch rear tire will be filled with foam, the chassis will be lifted, the front wheel will be replaced with a ski and various changes will be made to allow him to carry food, clothes, a tent and other items. Suzuki also will pay his fare to Ellesmere Island and that of a radio operator, who will be in touch with Mr. Taylor via a portable transmitter.

The motorcycle his idea, he said, because it uses less gas than a snowmobile and weighs less—an important factor in case he gets stuck.

Increasing his mobility will be a specially-designed sled for pulling gear and gas. As he empties sections, he will throw them away. The sled is cylindrically shaped as if he gets stuck he won't have to push it—it will roll.

The Canadian government contributed a former defence department but at Cape Columbia on Ellesmere Island which will be his base, plus technical information on ice, polar bears and survival.

To raise money he formed a company called Canadian North Pole Letters to sell special letters at $1.50 each which he will take with him to the pole. They will be cancelled by the post office on his return.

He has had to sell his farm, his house, his furniture and his snowmobile to pay for things such as the printing of letters and chartering an airplane which will be stationed at Cape Columbia should he get into trouble.

Attempts for the pole involved special strategy: It is impossible to race along the ice at 40 miles an hour. Mr. Taylor is five miles an hour to cover the estimated 500-600 miles.

Polar Passion

Seven years ago while working in the North Jim Taylor of Brampton, Ont., acquired "polar passion" and is now determined to reach the North Pole on a motorcycle. He plans to leave from Ellesmere Island in the Northwest Territories in early March, 1975. Preparations for the trip include stuffing the handlebars with rainbas in case he loses his food supply, a pistol for any polar bears that may cross his path and a special gadget on the exhaust pipe to melt snow to make a hot drink. Mr. Taylor is shown with a practice bike. (CP Photo).

W.O. Mitchell Confesses: Writer Has to Be Liar

WINNIPEG (CP) — "A writer has to be a liar and a magician. He takes the actual truth and then he' starts to lie."

This "confession" from Canadian author W. O. Mitchell produces a few gasps and a lot of giggles from the 225 children sitting on the floor around him in the hall of Lord Nelson school.

Lying and writing, he continues, is simply taking a true story you remember and asking "what if . . ."

To illustrate his point, he reconjures up a few home-spun examples and exaggerates them to the obvious delight of his young audience.

"Every single thing that's ever happened to you since you were born is still in there," he says. "You'll find things inside yourself, and that's what you make stories and plays out of."

Who better to talk to youngsters about writing than the author of Jake and The Kid and Who Has Seen the Wind? The white-haired writer, his lined face shining expression every other second, his hands moving constantly, seems to identify with children almost immediately.

The students crowd in closer and ask him about his age, about two novels that never made it into print and about the royalties he receives as a professional writer. No question is too personal.

The session ends, and Mr. Mitchell heads for the staff-room for some hot tea for his hoarse throat. Other sessions aimed at kindling literary fires in the minds of students will be held later.

The 60-year-old author is writer-in-residence in the Winnipeg school division this fall, a position believed to be the first of its kind in any Canadian public school system. His stay here was arranged as part of the city's centennial celebrations.

In addition to urging students to look within for inspiration for creative writing, Mr. Mitchell is promoting a system he describes as Mitchell-a- Monty Methods—getting the ideas that come into your head on paper and worrying about grammar, punctuation, spelling and form later.

A real writer's notebook, he says, is something that would have driven Miss Oddtart in Grade 6 composition class right up the wall."

Early indications are that Winnipeg teachers are not so easily perturbed. Even the response to his appearance at local schools and to the seminars for teachers he conducts at night, it is obvious that Mr. Mitchell has won a few converts to his ideas about writing.

Prices Rise

There was a significant change in increase in sugar prices, in the cost of the monthly foodbasket, according to a Canadian Press Cross-Canada Survey. The foodbasket — 17 basic food items in the survey — cost $18.33 in November, compared with $16.85 a month earlier. Graph shows national average prices for each item in November and the average total for each month since August, 1973. (CP Newsmap)

Gas Such a Bargain Higher Prices Needed

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia natural gas is such a heating bargain that experts say it will probably take price increases to cut demand for gas and avoid some forecast shortages.

On the basis of heat content and efficiency natural gas for residential use in B.C. is about 30 per cent cheaper than heating oil or electricity.

Unless the price of oil decreases—considered a remote possibility—higher natural gas prices would be required to eliminate or reduce the price differential that studies predict will accelerate demand for gas. Current B.C. gas supplies are already insufficient to meet both domestic and export needs.

Although the shortages are expected to be overcome in the next three or four years a gas-loping demand would soon outstrip the maximum available supply and bring them back.

And while B.C. might continue to fulfill its own demands for a time by reducing exports the day may come when the shortage exceeds the total amount of the export contract.

"In a nutshell if the price of natural gas remains so cheap we will rapidly gobble up for our own needs everything now going to export" said Dr. Anthony Hepworth acting director of resource management for the B.C. energy commission.

The hope is that an increase to $1 from 61 cents in the price of gas exports will reduce the demand from the U.S. Pacific Northwest.

As long as the provincial government insists on meeting domestic needs first B.C. will continue to be unable to meet the present export contract good until 1989 to buy up to 800 million cubic feet a day.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. which operates B.C.'s wholesale gas distribution network predicts that if the oil-gas price differential remains the demand for gas will continue to rise resulting in annual shortages until 1978 between 1981 1989 and permanently after 1993.

Solzhenitsyns Live Simple Swiss Life

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — On Sunday mornings the Stapfer-Sprasse has the quiet, good order of a Swiss watch.

No one strolls its clean side, walks. In spotless repose the playground of the elementary school is empty. A church bell tolls its way up the hill from the direction of the river where even the swans seem to move like metronomes.

Inside No. 48, Alexander Solzhenitsyn is well into another day in the life of Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Seated at a blot of picnic table in the front room, he is going over a manuscript with Nikita Struve, his Paris publisher. Both men rise, shake hands with the visitor and then return to work.

The furniture in the front room is simple. Besides the unpainted table are several steel and leather chairs of modern design. Two icons are propped on top of a bookcase. The floor is covered with a mustard-colored carpet.

Natasha, Solzhenitsyn's wife, leads the visitor into an adjoining room. Shelves on one wall are filled with books Solzhenitsyn had in Moscow, before he was forcibly exiled by the Soviet government.

Natasha looks slimmer than when she left Moscow last spring to join her banished husband. She has given up smoking. She appears happy but is concerned about her child.

Her gregarious 11-year-old son, mitry — Solzhenitsyn's stepson—is adjusting well to the change. The next-door neighbor gives the boy black marks for his progress in learning the Swiss dialect of German.

Dmitry is old enough to maintain his Russian. But what about the Solzhenitsyns' three young sons? Should they go to a German school? Will they stop thinking in Russian? What to do?

To answer the questions is to say whether you believe Solzhenitsyn will ever return home. It is the question Natasha doesn't really want to look at head on. Solzhenitsyn thinks of nothing else, and at a news conference in his home on Nov. 17 he outlined a program which if it works will allow him to return home and resume his life as consciences-in-residence of his country.

The plan is aimed at no less than a bloodless revolution in the Soviet Union that will overthrow the present—for him—corrupt Communist system.

As for Solzhenitsyn, he lengthily explained during the four-hour news conference-lecture, the Communist system in Russia is equivalent to a national sin demanding repentance on a wide scale.

The sin of Marxism socialism, which he said has found its perfect expression in Russia, is "the destruction of the individual relations between people . . . these aspects of life of man represent the finest essence of man."

"Sooner or later," he said, "we have to break the vicious circle."

"If we wait for history to bestow freedom on us it will be too long. History is us. It is up to us to take up the burden.

Brass Beds Big Business In World's Honeymoon Capital

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Honeymoon and brass beds may soon go together like the proverbial horse and carriage here in the honeymoon capital of the world.

That's if construction worker Jerry Pletsohen and millwright Fred Elwood have anything to say about the matter.

The two men have opened Canada's second brass-bed factory here. They both do "odds their spare time after their regular jobs to the operation.

Jerry and Fred believe the nostalgia kick and the growing demand for antiques and artifacts of yesteryear have presented them with an opportunity of a lifetime.

"We've both been searching for years for something more creative to do," Fred said. "When we got the chance to get into the business Jerry and I both knew this was it."

"Brass beds really have become a popular item in the last few years for collectors and people who want something different and stylish in the way of furnishings." But there are so few brass beds around in good shape that the prices have really skyrocketed. We believe there is a market for our products."

Jerry and Fred, along with a third partner, Al Vandegrae of Hamilton, Ont., bought the business last March under the name of Baggot's Brass Beds. It came up for sale after the former owner was injured in a car accident and was unable to continue.

In the last seven months they have done exhaustive research of new design ideas. They hope to expand the operation into brass coffee tables, coat racks and room dividers.

"One of the biggest problems we faced was trying to find a craftsman who could do the work needed to make new brass fittings," Fred said. "We finally found an old company with a lot of older employees. They didn't have anyone who could spin brass, but they knew of a retired craftsman who could. We got in touch with him immediately and he now is producing special fittings for us."

"Trades like that have almost completely died out," Jerry said. "But I believe we soon will see an increasing interest in the crafts. People no longer are satisfied with production quality. More and more people are involving themselves in crafts like woodcarving, pottery, leatherwork and even blacksmithing.

The company produces four basic designs but will have seven more styles when new tooling and jigs are provided. The first designs were copies of original antique beds but many variations are possible.

About 120 pounds of brass goes into the average bed. The alloy which Fred describes as "almost a semi-precious metal" costs $360 a hundredweight.

The firm buys brass in tube form and sheet. The tubes are pure brass, 64 one-thousandths of an inch thick. The lower part of the bed legs are reinforced with extra steel tubing inside, but the rest of the bed is brass tubing and fittings.

Sheets of brass are used in the production of some of the fittings which are stamped out in a 70-ton press. Large balls for the tops of the bed are spun on a lathe. At present the firm must job out three of its production operations.

Assembly and buffing are completed in the plant.

"Few of the older beds were pure brass," Jerry said. "most of them were plated or wrapped in brass sheet. That's why it's so difficult to restore an old tarnished antique.

"Our beds have heavier metal than any of the originals and they will always hold or increase their value."

Copy of brass furniture is simple, Fred and Jerry said. It needs to be polished every two weeks.

Brass can be lacquered to slow the tarnish action but they don't recommend this treatment since a suitable lacquer has never been found.

"The lacquer breaks down in a few years and the bed has to be refinished," Fred said. "It also reduces the depth of the shine. I definitely think it is better to keep them up by polishing."

The part-time operation at the plant produces a maximum of 10 beds a week. The $360 to $700.

"The business is more like a hobby to us at the moment," Fred said. "We have only four partners, workers and our wives are helping us."

Mary Lou Pletsohen and Isabel Elwood favor the venture.

"We know!" said Jerry. "If the business is a smashing success we may have to quit our jobs and work full-time."

They know of only two other operations which manufacture brass beds. One is located in Ottawa and the other in England.

New Winston Churchill Finishes Apprenticeship

LONDON (AP) — The speechmaking is over and a new Winston Churchill is aiming for the heights.

This one is the grandson and namesake of Britain's wartime leader, now ready to push ahead in what he calls "the family business"—politics.

After four quiet years in Parliament learning his trade, he intends to make himself heard both on the floor of the House of Commons, the forum which his grandfather dominated for a half century and more immediately inside the inner circles of the Conservative party.

The Tories are in considerable disarray after losing two elections this year to Harold Wilson's Labor party. Much of the blame for defeat has attached to Conservative Leader Edward Heath, whose policies and personality are both under criticism in backroom Tory conclaves.

Churchill, interviewed at his London apartment, insisted that the leadership issue is secondary.

The real task confronting the Conservatives, he said, is to reassert themselves as a national party proclaiming national interests and individual liberties.

"First, he said, the Conservative party must realize that as a national party with real prospect for power it needs a large share, probably 45 per cent, of the working-class vote.

Without working-class support, he said, the Conservatives risk becoming a party of the countryside and southern suburbs.

"The further north you go the truer this is," he said.

He is one of the minority of Conservatives representing mainly industrial districts and in three successive elections has topped the poll in the Manchester district of Stretford.

So the aim must be to win back the working-class vote, he said.

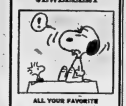
He cited three ways he felt this would be achieved.

"The party must assert itself as the upholder of the liberties of the individual. We must be the champion of the would-be home-owner who can't get a mortgage, the parent who wants to choose his kids' school, the employee being kicked around by bosses or trades-union militants. That's basic."

"People see the law flouted by powerful interests—and by a wave of terrorism. They want tougher measures against terrorists here and in Northern Ireland. The platforms of all three major parties reject capital punishment, and people are not happy with any of them. They should be able to look to us as the upholder of the law, the party of...stability."

"People are looking for something to aim at, some coherent patriotic theme. Our role in Europe too often has been debated in terms of bread and butter, the price of sugar. People want some sort of national goal, a sense of purpose, and for the last 18 years they have looked to the Tory party to define it."

Churchill is 34 and has a son and two daughters by his marriage to Minnie d'Erlanger, daughter of a former state airline chief.



Physically, he is the image of his father, Randolph Churchill, son and biographer of Sir Winston.

Politically, he already is more assertive than his father, who fought a string of losing elections. Young Winston won through at his second attempt.

Before then he had made a name in journalism, seeking excitement in Vietnam, the Middle East and other trouble spots, in this he was following the path set by his father and grandfather. Both wrote for a living in times of political adversity.

For three years he worked as a Fleet parliamentary private secretary—fetching and carrying for government ministers. The job gives a good insight into the workings of Parliament and governament at the price of keeping quiet on major issues.

World in Mess, Papers Failing To Tell Story -- Publisher

TORONTO (CP) — The world is in a mess and too many newspapers are not telling the story well, Ross Munro, publisher of Edmonton Journal, said Wednesday.

However, he said there is no reason why the media should give up trying.

"There are many publishers and editors in Canada who recognize that one of the great shortcomings of the daily press, not only here but elsewhere, is the lack of real expertise in many fields. There is too much cliche thinking and reporting . . . get the basic facts, grab the phone and call rewrite. . . .

"But there is no need to wear a hair-shirt . . . We have come a long way in the last 10 years in developing new forms of reporting and breaking away from what an American editor called the bland coverage of establishment orthodoxy—the kind of complacent coverage that puts a community's newspaper or only an AP franchise ahead of a well-printed shopper's guide."

Mr. Munro was speaking at the first Atkinson Journalism Lecture, funded by a $50,000 grant from the Atkinson Foundation. The lecture will provide speakers to Ryerson Polytechnical Institute—he journalism students in particular. Joseph Atkinson was the founder of Toronto Star.

Some larger, better-heeled papers in Canada are showing greater determination to dig into stories for their meaning and are not blindly accepting the official or a politician's statement, Mr. Munro said.

"In the social area . . . it seems to me that our major job is explanatory and depth reporting on problems of the poor and the disadvantaged, on our native people and their many problems, on pollution and environment issues and on developments in the welfare state, on human rights, on women's rights and the law and its application in today's world. . . ."

Mr. Munro, who is also president of The Canadian Press, Canada's national news gathering co-operative, said that in the development of expertise that is missing "it is going to come down to people. . . ."

"There is no lack of young people with talent, ambition and inquisitive minds who want to go into journalism."

Mr. Munro said he sometimes gets wistful and despondent about the enormity of the job that newspapers must and should do in today's climate — and frustrated at the slowness of progress.

"A newspaper's efforts cannot be working on this high, almost philosophical level all the time reaching for the ultimate in its coverage of society.

"Our Canadian newspapers are community institutions. . . . We are a provincial press in Canada, with all respect to The Star and Globe and Mail. We have no national press.

"All of us must cover police, the courts and city hall, municipal councils and all the rest, and present a great deal of so-called trivia to our readers every day . . . but frankly the vast majority want and love it. You just cannot get too high-brow in our kind of journalism in Canada or you simply lose your audience.

Battle Plan Given Supermarket Shopper

By ED SIMON
The Canadian Press

By paying close attention, a shopper can knock a few pennies off his grocery bill after reading Hard to Swallow, Walter Stewart provides a 13-point battle plan to help the customer win a few rounds over his friendly neighborhood supermarket.

The reader is cautioned not to expect miracles. Even if he acquires impeccable buying habits, scorning impulse purchases and coupon-hoots, taking advantage of specials and buying house brands, the odds are still against him.

Some of the factors pushing up his food costs are beyond human control such as drought, excessive rain and the disappearance of a small fish off the coast of Peru which was a major world source of protein. And the individual can do only so much to cope with global overpopulation.

These and other inflationary influences, national and international, are enough to ensure the permanent end of the era of cheap food. But Stewart suggests that improvements can be achieved by dealing with a few problems closer to home.

In prose that is anything but hard to swallow the author guides the layman through the intricacies of vertical integration, production quotas, marketing boards from butt-and-switch selling.

He absolves the farmers from the major share of the blame, conceding that they receive a barely adequate return for their labor, but is critical of producer-controlled marketing boards that push up prices by limiting production.

PCs to Stall Oil Bill Unless Changes Made

OTTAWA (CP) — One bill with a year-end deadline for final passage got Commons approval in principle Wednesday, but it and another priority item still face possible Progressive Conservative stalling tactics.

Second reading of the bill to increase the number of federal ridings, which the Conservatives have vowed to kill if it is not amended, was approved 122 to 89 despite a split in Liberal ranks. Two Quebec Liberals voted against the plan. Meanwhile, Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain) said his party will stall the petroleum administration bill if Conservative amendments are not accepted. If the bill does not pass by Dec. 31, the public subsidy to eastern consumers of expensive imported oil will lapse.

"If we want to, we can debate all 95 clauses," he said when asked in an interview about a filibuster—lengthy speeches to delay legislative progress.

"I don't like that word, but when principles are at stake we have to make sure people know what they are."

The redistribution bill came up for a vote only after the Conservatives promised not to prolong second-reading debate, a pledge the government said it wanted before bringing the bill back into the House.

However, some Conservatives have said they will block it at committee study if changes are not made. If the bill, which would add 15 MPs to the Commons for the next election, does not pass by Dec. 31, the current redistribution system will continue.

Conservatives say the bill, providing for Commons expansion after each 10-year census, would make the House unwieldy. Some from Alberta and British Columbia say their provinces would not get enough seats.

John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta), has promised a filibuster if necessary, and says the Liberals "are going to have to go into committee with an open mind" if they want it to pass.

The government says all suggestions will be considered, but Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp has said he doubts the bill can be improved.

If the bill passes, no province will lose seats and all but the four Atlantic provinces will have increased representation. Under the present system, only Ontario and British Columbia would gain in the next redistribution, and some provinces would lose seats.

Ian Watson (Lapraire), who with Jacques Trudel (Montreal-Bourassa) split from the party line, said rural MPs are being "fed a bill of goods." The bill would give more seats to Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, leaving the rest of the country to pick up the remnant.

The petroleum administration bill got a rough reception from Mr. Hamilton when it returned to the Commons after an absence of four weeks.

He repeated his belief that its provisions impinge on provincial resources rights and said it should be withdrawn to await further discussions with the provinces.

The Conservatives intend to propose continuation of the subsidy to eastern Canadians who use imported oil, but also a more thorough study of the bill as a whole, Mr. Hamilton said.

Mr. Hamilton said the resource tax provisions of the recent federal budget and a National Energy Board report on the country's oil reserves have outdated the bill, drafted last spring.

Port Hope Bank Robbed

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Terry James Hoover, 25, of Port Hope, was charged with armed robbery after a man with a shotgun took about $4,800 from the Bank of Nova Scotia Wednesday.

A man entered the bank about 11:25 a.m. and demanded money from tellers Elisabeth Bailey and Shirley Yarema.

It was the second bank robbery in the town's history. The first was 1½ years ago.

Guard Unhappy With $34 Salary

For his part-time, all-weather assignment, he's paid $34 a week.

Now, he wonders if it's worth it — for himself and the others who secure city school crossings.

Wednesday, his ponderings came up before city council — in a letter in which Mr. Barker reminded city hall how inflation was hitting people like him.

So much so, he said he feels sure, "many more" elderly guards will decide it's no longer a "profitable occupation."

Among problems: Many guard must drive to their duty points. Car costs are up. So are clothing prices. Although winter coats provided by city hall are "excellent" its rain-coats are a "poor buy."

He said he felt sure the guards "have a just cause" when seeking help in regard to increased costs of carrying out their duties.

City council didn't take immediate action. Alderman Paul Russell suggested the city manager's office first view the situation before a decision.

"We should look at the surrounding circumstances — especially in a period of inflation," he said.

Earlier in the day, at his crossing outside Queen Victoria school on Pine St., Mr. Barker said he had not figured how much $34 wage should be increased. But it had "to be something to meet the extra cost of living."

A retired paint sales manager he lives on a company and old-age pensions. He has been a guard three years.

"You get a pension — and you sit down at home and watch it disappearing," he said.

But he likes the crossing job and believes he's performing a service.

He didn't discuss his letter with other guards before writing city hall," said Mr. Barker.

"I've never contacted them. But, if we don't get anything I might see ... how they feel," he said.

Mayor Queries Intent

City hall already is eyeing the provincial government's new Ontario Land Corp. (OLC) as a possible aid in industrial development.

Ontario Treasurer John White's outline of OLC functions was distributed to city council Wednesday night.

Mayor Dale Jeffrey drew attention to one reference: OLC may lend money to develop provincial-municipal industrial parks.

Hence, the said funds could be available to for servicing city industrial parks by acquiring more such land.

The city's industrial commission already is investigating the possibilities, said the mayor.

Meeks Urges Change In Civic Election Date

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A city councillor wants Ontario's local governments to seek earlier civic elections.

Alderman Stu Meeks will ask fellow councillors to officially endorse his request and forward it to the Association of Ontario Municipalities.

He formally served notice of his intentions to city council Wednesday — in the wake of this week's storm-ridden municipal voting arena in province.

Ald. Meeks said he will have a resolution before the next council meeting calling on Premier William Davis to set back Ontario elections two months to October.

Outside the council chamber, the city councillor said he hopes the provincial government "would see the wisdom" of moving civic elections back from the now-decreed December date, — particularly following Monday's poor showing at the polls in many municipalities.

Candidates in some centres blamed the poor turnout for losing their campaigns. In one Windsor area, where blizzards snowed-out some elections polling had been a "fiasco," said Ald Meeks.

In Belleville, it was estimated only 29 per cent of the city's 25,000 eligible voters shunned dismal weather to make the polls.

The elderly — traditionally a determined bloc of voters — were particularly lost to candidates, said the alderman.

"Senior citizens didn't have their minds made up. The December date isn't fair to them and they're very, very conscious about their right to vote," he added.

"Many dollars are spent" urging voters to exercise their franchise, yet December, with uncertain weather can affect polling, he said.

Ald. Meeks said he doesn't think earlier elections — with longer waiting periods before administrations change — would necessarily create lame-duck councils reluctant to act decisively while serving their terms.

"I realize there would be problems. But they're not problems that couldn't be surmounted," he said. "It's more of a problem to get people out to the polls and get the feeling of the people."

Time to Reminisce

More than 150 life members of the Mohawk-Loyalist Council of the Telephone Pioneers of America gathered at the Four Seasons Wednesday for their annual tea and to be entertained by the Moira Secondary School Band, under Ron Mason. Prominent among the guests were oldest oldtimers Wally Bell, seated, former Northern Electric employee, and Grant Proctor, for many years Bell Canada manager in Belleville. Both are 82. With them are Jean Graham, president of the Belleville Pioneers, and Bill McCormick, president of the Pioneers' Maple Leaf Chapter, which covers all Ontario.

City Unable to Police Home-repair Industry

City hall could not effectively legislate against shoddy — even unscrupulous — home-repair operations.

It probably doesn't have the authority, either.

That's the advice of city manager Wilbur Purcell.

Mr. Purcell told city council Wednesday the only effective measures to protect consumers are correctly-drawn contracts between householders and repairmen.

The city manager's report followed his scrutiny of a request for action last Septem-

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance in the 24-hour period ending 8 a.m. Thursday:

ber by Citizens Bureau representative William Hockley.

Mr. Hockley said the bureau had complaints the unscrupulous and under-qualified workers doing shoddy home repair work then disappearing. City regulations do not call for such tradesmen to be licensed, he said.

But, said Mr. Purcell, to be tradesmen would have to meet certain minimum qualifications. Yet, to require this would not assure satisfactory workmanship to all or that a high class of material would be used in a project, he said.

Setting of performance fees would require proper contracts — a procedure that "would obviously require a large staff to administer."

But, said the city manager, he has reviewed legislation, and can't find authority for the city to so regulate contractors and tradesmen involved in the work which drew Mr. Hockley's criticism.

The one secure solution in the official's summation appears to restate a timeless legal dictum: Let the buyer beware.

Mr. Purcell's advice to homeowners: (1) Be cautious of a bargain. (2) Request a detailed, written contract" with cash holdback until satisfied with the work.

Vote Final

An official recount of Monday night's Belleville civic election votes shows no change in the standings of city council candidates.

Results of the double check, announced today by city clerk Earl Dafoe, revealed few discrepancies, with the election-night totals.

Biggest loser in the recount was the unsuccessful mayoral candidate, Phil Bowerman. He dropped 174 votes, down 776 to 665, but retained his 28th place on the 32-candidate ballot.

Ray M. Michel, another losing candidate, had his election night return of 1,750 cut back to 1,665. It also left his poll standing unchanged in 12th place.

Roy Nethercott, who ran last with 661, received an extra 10 votes in the recount — but not enough to change his standing.

The four reelected aldermen had minor changes in their election-night balloting. Alderman Arthur Keegan polled two more votes than the 2,547 announced election night. Alderman George Zegouras had a single vote added to his 2,502 ballots.

There was only one minor change in the city school trustees' election.

John Granville, elected in third place to the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board dropped three votes from his election-night standing of 687.

Mr. Dafoe said his department was "pretty well satisfied" the recount reflected the true election results.

It involved a double-check of election-night statements from poll officials and a re-counting of city hall's own totals, he said.

Big Business Attracts Students

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

It must feel good to be president of a manufacturing interests of 100 shareholders and still be studying high school mathematics.

Granted — corporation shares sell for a dollar apiece with a maximum of one to a customer and the company will be liquidated before the year is out, but that's alright.

The corporation — starting with more than 2,000 similar enterprises throughout the world — is the product of Junior Achievement.

Junior Achievement gives young people the opportunity to choose a simple product or service, sell shares to capitalize the venture and then nurture a fullfledged business. The package comes complete with a board of directors, industrial advisors and the challenge to show a dividend to shareholders when the firm has completed its eight-month lifespan.

Internationally, Junior Achievement was introduced in 1919. Belleville was introduced to the program last year with the emergence of five firms which showed year-end dividends ranging from $1.40 a share (including the original purchase price) to a high of $3.

Garth Stephanson, executive director of Junior Achievement said Wednesday, Junior Achievement is the urban counterpart to 4H- clubs.

The emphasis is not on showing a profit but profiting from the experience of running a real-life business — learning self confidence, meeting new people and interests," he said.

The aim of Junior Achievement is taking hold of Belleville school students with participation spreading from approximately 60 last year to 150 students slated for fall scheme.

Mr. Stephanson said if this year's eight companies incorporate for $5 to $6 per share, for a two-year, a full-time executive director will be retained to administer operations.

In this year's program, the companies will produce and market a variety of consumer items ranging from desk, pen and pencil caddies to water filtration units and fur automobiles.

All products will be sold on a door-to-door basis and will be identified as an authentic Junior Achievement product by a sticker.

Average price is $3 said Mr. Stephanson.

One of the secrets that keeps the program viable is the support from the city's industrial community. Each "JA" company is sponsored by a parent company which volunteers a management officer to act as advisor to the student company.

He doesn't enter into decisions, he just advises," said Mr. Stephanson.

About 25 Belleville firms are co-operating in the program which receives major financial support from the Rotary Club.

Developer Must Pay

City council Wednesday refused to pay a developer an addition $2,000 on the increased cost of storm sewer work in a Belleville subdivision. City hall's original share of the work in the North Park St. subdivision project of Mansfield Heights Construction was set at $3,800. Actual construction costs exceeded estimates and the developer a year ago requested a further $2,000 as th city's additional cost share.

Digging in

Those walking down Bridge St. Wednesday might have noticed some work being done on the vacant property next to The Intelligencer building. This is the site of the downtown redevelopment project called Century Square. But the digging by this back hoe doesn't mean the actual work has started. Workers are testing soil holes to determine the rock evaluation used for designing the foundation.

Maracle Says Protest Not Communist-backed

OTTAWA — A Mohawk from the Tyendinaga Reserve Wednesday dissociated militant Native People's Caravan from the Communist movement.

Brant Maracle was among Caravan spokesmen who held a press conference here to reject Communist influence on the group.

Mr. Maracle also is a spokesman for the dissenting Mohawks in dispute with the Tyendinaga band council over an industrial corporation on the reserve.

BRANT MARACLE

He also has been associated with the Caravan which occupied a federal building in Ottawa after a cross-Canada trek in September. The press conference was the Caravan leaders first appearance on Parliament Hill since their violent demonstration Sept. 20 which brought out the RCMP riot squad.

Mr. Maracle said he "totally denies" printed reports that members of the Communist Leninist — Marxist party was behind the violent confrontation.

He said the Canadian and American native people are seeking the support of all non-natives in their fight to have aboriginal rights recognized. Anti-treaty protests kept.

It is evident, said Mr. Maracle, that the alleged ties between the caravan members and the Communists were harming the efforts for non-native support.

Ken Dennis of British Columbia however, rejected statements made by Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan and George Manuel, National Indian Brotherhood president, that the American Indian Movement (AIM) has no place in Canadian affairs.

The AIM leaders are relevant and their help and support is welcome, said Mr Dennis.

Hastings Teacher Gets Study Grant

A Centre Hastings Secondary School teacher has received an Ontario Educational Research Council grant of $400 for classroom research.

Karran Raghubir, a biology teacher, is believed to be the first in the county to receive such a grant.

He will use it for a year-long study of the value of a laboratory approach to science teaching, using about 70 students at his Grade 12 level.

The laboratory approach to science is a discovery method, designed by Mr. Raghubir to be student-centred.

The research council funds were granted for evaluation of students' performances when they know in advance the objectives of the experiments they are undertaking. One group of Mr. Raghubir's students at Marlbrough school they should know and be able to do at the conclusion of a unit of work — for instance, write the over-all chemical reaction for photosynthesis. The second group is not told the objectives.

Several standard tests will be given the students to determine which group achieved the most during the year. The results will be published in a paper issued by the research council.

Junior Achievement Organized

Garth Stephanson, principal of Stegg Electric and executive director of Belleville's Junior Achievement program, goes over performance records of student companies with JA board member and general manager of Deloro Stellite Len Shacklock. Approximately 85 Belleville high school students will be involved in this year's program of building a full-scale manufacturing company from scratch.

Study Proves Worth of Fluoridation

Proponents of fluoridation had their arguments upheld, and over-all dental treatment needs are still overwhelming and massive in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

These are two conclusions reached from a statistical summary of the kindergarten to Grade 3 dental examination program carried out during the 1973-74 school year by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit which was released this week.

Dr. Dennis A. Warrick, director of dental services, stated in a memorandum, "the benefits of fluoridation are plainly evident in comparing the percentage of students who have 'no decay' in Picton and Belleville, which have fluoridation, with that of Trenton, which does not have fluoridation."

The report shows in Belleville, fluoridated since 1964, 60 per cent of 2,121 students examined had no evidence of decay. There were only 14 per cent with poor oral hygiene and just seven per cent requiring urgent treatment.

Belleville's results were the best of the five places tested, including the three municipalities and two counties.

Trenton had the fewest student with "no decay," 41 per cent of 1,116 students. There were 12 per cent labbed 'urgent',8second best over-all, and 23 per cent with poor oral hygiene, third best.

Picton, fluoridated since 1965, came second with 53 per cent showing 'no decay,' but was second-worst with 18 per cent needing urgent treatment, and 41 -per cent with poor oral hygiene. There were only 256 students examined.

Although Prince Edward County had fewer students examined than Hastings, 1,171 to 6,238, its figures were the worst. Only 45 per cent, just one per cent better than Trenton, had 'no decay', 31 per cent required urgent treatment, and 44 per cent had poor oral hygiene, the latter two figures being the highest in the report.

Hastings showed up well at 48 per cent with 'no decay', just 14 per cent needing urgent treatment, and 22 per cent with poor oral hygiene.

Dr. Warrick remarked, "the percentage of 'no decay' students for the two counties is higher than we would expect to find in the first year of a dental health program."

Expos Get Their Lefty But Surrender Singleton

But McNally, signed by Orioles in 1960, brought a steep price.

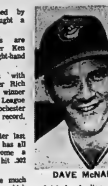
Coming to Expos with McNally, are outfielder Rich Coggins, and the top winner in the International League last season with Rochester where he posted a 15-7 record, Bill Kirkpatrick.

Singleton a .276 hitter last season, is only 27 and has all the potential to become a superstar. In 1973, he hit .302 and drove in 103 runs.

He was part of the much discussed 1972 trade in which

RICH COGGINS



Expos gave up Rusty Staub to the New York Mets for Singleton, Tim Foli and Mike Jorgensen.

Torrez began his major league career with St. Louis Cardinals. With Expos last season, he had a 15-8 record with a 3.59 ERA.

McNally is 31.

In his first major league start, September 26, 1962, he tossed a three-hit shutout at Kansas City A's. But it wasn't until 1965 that he began to show his true worth. He was 20-10 that season and followed up with three more 20-game or more winning efforts in succession.

McNally's most dominating year was 1967 when he was bothered by a sore elbow and finished with a mark of 7-7.

DAVE McNALLY

Orioles' leading all-time winner with 181, he has impressive winning streaks to his credit. In 1968 (September 22) he started a string of wins which didn't end until 1969 (August 31 after 17 straight. He put together 13 in a row in the 1971 season.

And he likes to add his own cause at the plate with the home run ball.

He's the first pitcher to hit a grand slam homer in World Series play, connecting off Cincinnati's Wayne Granger in the 1970 series.

The book on McNally: A control pitcher with fastball, curve and slider. He's adept at moving the ball around.

It would appear the key to this deal is Coggins. Rumored to team-mate Al Bumbry in batting for The Sporting News Rookie of the Year honors in 1973, he was used primarily as a right fielder by Orioles but did see some action in centre.

A .319 hitter in his rookie season, he slipped to .241 during the 1974 campaign. The youngster will be 24, December 7.

If the 5-foot-8 speedster, a proven big league belter (35 extra-base hits in 1973) can come through, it would appear Expos may do quite well for themselves as a result of their latest game player trade.

Time will tell.

Fire Isn't Only Fighting Firemen Have on Minds

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

Local wrestling enthusiasts should keep Saturday, December 14 open on their calendars.

The Belleville Firefighters will be sponsoring their first High School Wrestling Tournament on that date.

The meet will be one of the larger ones ever held in the area with 13 teams entered in the event to date. Approximately 220 wrestlers will be on hand to compete.

Larry Fritz, a former Moira wrestler, is co-ordinating the meet, which he hopes will turn into an annual event.

Larry cited the need for such an event, "outside of Bay of Quinte and COSSA (Central Ontario Secondary School Association) matches, the wrestlers just don't get the competition they need to improve unless they need to improve their skills."

To insure top quality wrestling for the tournament, besides the seven local high schools entered in the meet, there will also be teams from Cobourg Kegi High School along with two teams from Kingston.

Cobourg East will be sporting the same team that, last year, won the COSSA crown.

Larry, looking back on his days as a high school competitor can sympathise with the coaches who "work hard" in preparing for the meets and go, for the most part, unrecognized for their efforts.

"There's a lot of good wrestlers in this area that nobody ever hears about" explained Larry. "And we feel that a meet such as this one will encourage more people to take part."

Anyone new to the sport and not familiar with the rules and point scoring will find the program available at the door very beneficial.

Proceeds from this years meet will go into a fund to assure further tournaments. Individual wrestlers may also be able to profit from the fund for things such as out of town meets.

The tournament will be held at Quinte Secondary School, will commence at 10 a.m. and continue through the day.

Weigh-ins for wrestlers competing in the event will be at 7 a.m. Admission is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

The firemen are hoping for a good turnout for the meet. Proof to Sports Desk

No Ground Gained in Gas House

Belleville Generals and Stanley Structures continued their fight for first place in the Gas House Hockey League Wednesday night, but neither gained any ground.

Both clubs won their respective games, Stanley dumped Rollins Lumber 8-2 and the Generals thumped Canadian Durabla 7-1.

The win kept Stanley three points up on the Generals. The first place structuremen now have 30 points. The Generals however, have a game in hand. They have only played 14 to Stanley's 15.

Stanley was led by Ray Summers. He fired three goals and added an assist. Russ Harrington and Mike Keegan also scored each and Bob Wladyka got the other. Ron Pollier picked up three assists.

Both Rollins' markers came from John Masterson.

Hyalie Bryant paved the path to victory for the Generals as he scored twice and added a pair of helpers. Jack Elliott also scored twice and Bob Dolan, Dave Skelton, and Bill Van Soelen got one each. Ken Bertrand drew three assists.

Durabla's only goal was scored by Doug Thompson.

Bruins Bucyk Is Better Late Than Ever

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

With just over six minutes to go in the third period, it appeared Montreal Canadiens were well on their way Wednesday night to their second win of the 1974-75 National Hockey League season over Boston Bruins.

Then Doug Risebrough was called for face-off interference and five seconds after he went off, John Bucyk scored his first of two goals to reduce Montreal's lead to 4-3 with 5:38 remaining.

With less than two minutes remaining, Carol Vadnais and goaltender Gilles Gilbert lifted for an extra forward.

At New York, rookie Rick Middleton celebrated his 21st birthday by scoring his 13th goal of the year to start a three-goal rally in the second period that carried the Rangers past the Red Wings.

Jean Ratelle, Peter Stemkowski and Derek Sanderson got the other Rangers goal with Rick Libett and Marcel Dionne replying for Detroit.

Third-period goals by Nels Debenedet Chuck Arnason and Vic Hadfield gave the Penguins their comeback win over the Maple Leafs.

Debenedet tied the game with 18 seconds gone in the final session and Arnason got what proved to be the game winner 11 minutes later.

Two goals by Jim Pappin keyed a six-goal outburst in the first period that carried Chicago past Kansas City, Darcy Rota also scored twice for the Black Hawks.

Mike Murphy, Bob Murdoch and Bob Nevin scored in the third period for the Kings to break up a tight defensive battle against the North Stars.

The victory left Los Angeles in sole possession of first place in the Norris Division with 35 points, one more than second-place Montreal. The Kings have three games in hand.

Bucyk scored in an 18-second span and the Bruins had a 4-4 tie instead of their seventh loss of the year.

In other action, New York Rangers downed Detroit Red Wings 6-3, Pittsburgh Penguins came from behind to defeat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks outscored Kansas City Scouts 7-3, Los Angeles Kings downed Minnesota North Stars 4-1 and California Seals defeated Atlanta Flames 3-1.

Bruins coach Don Cherry was jubilant with the Boston comeback. Bucyk's tying goal at 12:36 marked the third time this season the Bruins had scored with goaltender Gilles Gilbert.

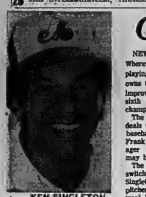
Orioles Looking Like Condors

NEW ORLEANS, (AP) — Wherever Baltimore Orioles are playing next year, or whoever owns them, they appear to have improved their chances for a sixth American League East championship in seven seasons.

The Orioles completed two deals this week at major league baseball's winter meeting and Frank Cashen, general manager of the club, says there may be four other trades.

The acquisition Wednesday of switch-hitting outfielder Ken Singleton and right-handed pitcher Mike Torrez from Montreal Expos after landing slugging first baseman Lee May and minor league pitcher Bill Kirkpatrick also moved to Montreal.

"There's no doubt the orioles added punch," said Yankee manager Bill Virdon, whose club finished second in the A.L. East this year, two games behind Baltimore. "But it doesn't necessarily make them a better team."

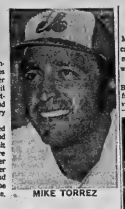


That was a hint that the Orioles may miss McNally, 33, who had a 16-12 record with a 3.39 earned-run average.

The Orioles picked up a hard-throwing starter in Torrez, 28, who was 15-8 with a 3.58 ERA in 1974. Singleton, 27, will move to the right field job at Baltimore. He hit .276 with nine homers and 71 RBIs for the Expos last season after batting .302 with 103 RBI and 13 homers in 1973.

Atlanta Braves, meantime, received a telegram from slugger Dick Allen who said he would not join their club. However, they were hopeful that the controversial first baseman can't talked from the Chicago White Sox, would change his mind.

Two other deals were completed Wednesday. The Expos picked up veteran left-hander Woodie Fryman from Detroit Tigers in exchange for right-handed pitcher Tom Walker and [illegible]-eased catcher Terry Humphrey.



California Angels acquired three players from Cleveland Indians for the Angels' Salt Lake City farm club. They are outfielder Rusty Torres, pitcher Charlie Hudson and catcher Ken Suarez. In turn, Cleveland sent pitcher Bill Gilbreth to the Angels' Oklahoma City affiliate.

Drexel Is Surprise Winner of First Snow

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Wilfrid Drexel, Austria's Olympic bronze medallist, won the season's first major international downhill ski race Wednesday, more than a fourth of a second ahead of Bernadette Zurbriggen of Switzerland. Gabrielle Debernard of France was third.

Cindy Nelson of the United States wound up fourth in the the 1974-75 World Cup competition.

The big surprise of the race was the defeat of Austria's champion, Anne Marie Proell-Moser, who finished 6th, more than 1¼ seconds behind the winner and just ahead of the top-placed Canadian, 17-year-old Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., who toured the course, which had a total drop of 1,023 feet, in one minute 27.49 seconds.

It was only the second downhill race since 1972 that the 21-year-old Mrs. Proell-Moser has not won. She was beaten by Miss Nelson last January.

Miss Drexel, a 24-year-old racing veteran, completed the 1,650-foot course in 1:25.98. She was favored with an early start—No. 5—on the perfect course in ideal, cloudless weather.

Miss Zurbriggen, who was first down the course, finished in 1:26.16 while Miss Debernard clocked 1:26.74.

Barbara Clifford, 21, of Old Chelsea, Que., placed 17th with a time of 1:28.44. Other Canadian finishers in the starting field of 61 were Laurie Kreiner, Kathy's 20-year-old sister, in 20th place in 1:28.54, and Betsy's sister, Susan, 17, in 1:28.84.

Karen Cloutier, 18, of Ste. Agathe, Que., did not finish her run.

McMAHON DIES

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A former defenceman for Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, Michael Clarence McMahon, 58, died Tuesday. Born in Brockville, Ont., McMahon moved to Fort Erie 57 years ago while playing with Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League after his career with the Canadiens ended. He was on the Montreal team that won the Stanley Cup in 1944. During the 1943-1944 season, McMahon compiled 34 points, then a record for a defencemen in 42 regular games.

Instructional Caravan To Travel Province

ALVINSTON, Ont. (CP) — A caravan containing an instruction program in sports coaching, training, management and administration will begin visiting small Ontario communities next year, the provincial government announced Wednesday.

Rene Brunelle, minister of community and social services, made the announcement at a fund raising dinner for a new sports centre in this community about 30 miles west of London.

"Next year, a small community which normally could not on its own bring such expertise into the area will have the opportunity to be as fully informed on any area of sport as possible," Brunelle said.

The 6-foot van will be equipped with projectors, slides, films, tapes, micro-film scanners and printers and a full collection of reference material on facilities, instruction and all aspects of sports.

Sample Copy Wins Eighth

The three-year-old son of Rye Byrd finished a neck in front of McGrouther for his first victory since being purchased last month by John Hayes. Sample Copy covered the mile in 2.:0" and paid $2.20, $2.80 and $3.00.

The daily double of Pomita in the first and Shadow Cause in the second returned $154.

The crowd of 7,351 wagered $640,304.

Lions' Nettles Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ray Nettles, 25, middle linebacker of British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, was fined $100 Wednesday and had his driver's licence suspended for six months for having care and control of a motor vehicle while impaired by alcohol or a drug.

A second charge of driving with a blood alcohol level of more than .08 per cent on Nov. 28 against Nettles was dismissed in another court Wednesday because of insufficient evidence.

Whalers and Mariners Have Octopus in Nets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When your team faces a 15 or 17-shot disadvantage, it's not easy to win a hockey game. But goalies Joe Junkin of San Diego Mariners and Chris Abel-Lamanon of New England Whalers didn't let that bother them Wednesday night.

The Mariners were outshot 37-12 by Phoenix Roadrunners but Junkin scored his first shutout of the season to help San Diego to a 3-0 World Hockey Association win.

The Whalers, hampered by a number of recent injuries, were outshot 44-27 by Cleveland Crusaders and Abrahamsson made 42 saves to set up a 3-2 Whalers victory.

Elsewhere in the WHA Wednesday, Indianapolis Racers acquired a new owner while Minnesota Fighting Saints beat Quebec Nordiques 6-2, Houston Aeros edged Winnipeg Jets 3-2 and Edmonton Oilers defeated Vancouver Blazers 6-3.

"This is a game we didn't figure to win," said Whalers coach Ron Ryan. "Tomorrow night we play our 13th straight road game, and we're missing most of our starting players.

"We've got half a club here and half a club back home."

The Whalers have played the last several games without starting goaltender Al Smith, leading goal scorer Tom Webster and leading point scorer John French.

At Phoenix, Ken Block and Bill Addesso scored for the Mariners in the first period and Junkin preserved the win for San Diego with his first shutout of the season.

At Winnipeg, Gordie Howe's 8th goal of the season midway in the third period gave Houston the victory after a close-checking match.

Andre Hinse scored the other two goals for Houston which extended its league record winning streak on the road to nine games.

Chris Bordeleau, the Jets' second-highest goal-scorer with 21 and leading play-maker with 111 assists, was not dressed for the game and said he wants to be traded. He said there was a personality clash with coach Rudy Pilous.

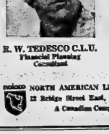
Eddie Joyal scored two goals, including one on a penalty shot, to lead the Oilers over Vancouver.

Joyal was hooked by Blazers defenceman Jim Cardiff on a breakaway in the second period. He was awarded a penalty shot and beat goalie Don McLeod with a 15-foot shot.

Mike Walton's 18th goal of the season started Minnesota off to its win over the Nordiques at Quebec where the Fighting Saints outshot Quebec 35-25.

Meanwhile, the WHA took over the expansion Indianapolis franchise and has almost completed turning it over Wednesday to its new owner, Paul Deneau of Dayton, Ohio.

Indianapolis Professional Sports, the former ownership group, left Deneau to pay about $626,000 in club debts plus $1.5 million yet to be paid on the franchise fee.



Deneau said he plans to keep the club in Indianapolis.

At the same time, president Walter Kaiser of Chicago Cougars denied recent rumors that the club would be moved to Baltimore under new ownership. He also denied that other interests had moved in to pay the team's salary bills.

MONTREAL (CP) — There may be one player from Quebec goaltender Jim Coral of Loyola Warriors—on the Canadian student national hockey team that will tour Europe later this month and there is some feeling Quebec players attending the student nationals camp earlier this year were shafted.

"It was a raw deal," said Randy Mohns of Loyola Warriors, one of 11 Quebec players invited to the camp. Only six players from Quebec showed up and they lasted 3½ days before being cut.

"We got there and half the guys had been practising for a week," Mohns added. "There seemed to be a lot of politics involved. The coaches more or less concentrated on their own players and I was surprised they sent us home like that after such a short time."

Chris Drake of University of Alberta is coach of the team while Bob Doucher of St. Mary's University Huskies is his assistant. Tom Watt of University of Toronto Varsity Blues coached Alberta, Toronto and St. Mary's each had four players named to the team, announced Tuesday night.

"The writing was on the wall when I saw that Toronto had two full five-man units and St. Mary's had one unit," said Loyola captain Mike Culleton.

"It was pretty much a political thing having us there—kind of a tokenism."

Watt said in a telephone interview he would have loved to have more players from Quebec on the team but " from what we saw, none could make it."

"There are 10 universities represented on this team and we picked the best. Just the best."

Montreal and Ottawa Monopolize East Division All-star Polls

TORONTO (CP) — Thousand-yard rusher Steve Ferrughelli of Montreal Alouettes and teammate Johnny Rodgers, who netted more than a mile on the ground and through the air, are the only unanimous choices in the Eastern Football Conference all-star offensive team announced today.

Ferrughelli, who led the East with 1,134 yards, is among 11 members of the Grey Cup champions picked by the football reporters of Canada for the 1974 team. Five Als were chosen on offence and five on defence.

The big fullback was chosen as a running back along with Andy Hopkins of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, back for a second straight year, and Art Green of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Rodgers, who gained 1,004 yards on 80 passes, 493 rushing and 291 on kickoff returns for a total of 1,867, was picked as one of two receivers. The other went to Ottawa's Rhome Nixon who caught 54 passes for 820 yards, second best pensing total in the East.

Quarterback is Jimmy Jones, 25, a former University of Southern California star who came within two ballots of being a unanimous choice. Jones was first-string for the Grey Cup All-Star squad last season and started both the Eastern final and Grey Cup game against Edmonton Eskimos but was relieved by Sonny Wade in the two key games.

All three running backs combined more than 1,800 yards each to their team totals. Ferrughelli caught 28 passes for 228 yards to go with his rushing yardage. Green rushed for 686 yards on 98 rushes, caught 44 passes for 364 and ran back kickoffs for 423. Hopkins rushed for 540, second to Ferrughelli, and caught 42 passes for 325 yards.

Other members of the offensive team are Tony Gabriel of Hamilton at tight end for the third successive year, Noah Jackson of Toronto Argonauts and Dan Yochem of Montreal at tackle, Ed George of Montreal and Ed Chalupka of Hamilton at guard and Bob McKown of Ottawa at centre.

George, picked as the outstanding offensive lineman in the CFL this season, now has been named to the all-star team five years in a row. Yochem is a repeater from 1973 and Chalupka is back for the third straight year.

The only unanimous choice on the defensive team is Ottawa's Wayne Smith, previously picked in 1972, at one end position.

Junior Ah You, the Samoan reverd-dancer from Montreal, is named to the other defensive end spot.

Picked on all but one ballot's Mike Widger of Montreal at corner linebacker. He previously made the Eastern team in 1970, 1972 and 1973. Chuck Zapiec, also of Montreal, is at the other corner linebacking position.

Middle linebacker is Jerry Campbell of Ottawa, who has been named to the all-stars in six of the last seven years.

Tackles are Rudy Sims of Ottawa, named for the fourth successive year, and Jim Stillwagon of Toronto who made it in doubles as Ottawa punter, back for the third straight year, and Phil Price of Montreal.

Tied for the final defensive back position are Al Brenner of Montreal, a repeater from 1973, Dick Adams, who picked in 1970 and 1972, Dickie Harris of Montreal, a repeater from 1971, Dick Adams, who doubles as Ottawa punter, back Al Marcelin of Ottawa, previously picked in 1969

Toronto Still in Big League Running

NEW ORLEANS (CP) — Canadian interests are making a strong pitch for a major league franchise at baseball's annual meetings here but all the signs say they will not get any firm action out of these sessions.

Corridor talk is that the established owners are reluctant to go in for another round of expansion—in which Toronto would probably have a high priority — though the politics of baseball probably will dictate this by the start of 1976 season.

This would appear to be Canada's best bet for a second major league franchise to match Montreal Expos of the National League, even though Canadian pleaders say they could, under pressure, have a refurbished Canadian National Exhibition stadium ready to go in the coming season.

Representatives of four different groups looking for a Toronto franchise, reinforced by spokesmen for the Ontario and Metropolitan Toronto governments, have been buttonholing the big league clubs delegates all week and say they get the impression Toronto ranks around the top in any future plans.

"I haven't heard one of them say that Toronto is not a desirable location," Metropolitan Chairman Paul Godfrey said in an interview Wednesday. "They all look on it as an untapped treasure chest."

Godfrey said he has heard that one of the leagues made a still unpublished survey of the potential of the remaining big cities without major league ball and Toronto came out so far ahead that all the others were lumped into a second category.

However, baseball owners' moves (or "aren't" always dictated by surface economics and there cities may have prior claims in players' contracts.

Washington probably is a must because it has been deserted twice by major ball and the owners fear what the politicians could do to the reserve clause

To the Citizens Of Belleville

I take this opportunity to extend my thanks to each and every one for their help and support given me on Dec. 2nd — election day. I also wish to extend my best wishes to the new City Council and wish them well in the months ahead.

Rockets Couldn't Soar Even If They Wanted To

You can get by in the National Basketball Association with a minimum of scoring as long as you play good defence. Take away both and what do you have?

The Houston Rockets.

The Rockets have been doing neither very well of late and as a result, lost their sixth straight game Wednesday night, an 86-66 decision to the Detroit Pistons.

Houston's point total was the lowest scored in an NBA game this year and set a defensive record for the Pistons. Detroit's previous low was 78 points given up Jan. 4, 1958, to Philadelphia 76ers.

In other NBA games, Boston Celtics beat Los Angeles Lakers 101-90, Washington Bullets defeated Portland Trail Blazers 114-97, Philadelphia beat Kansas City-Omaha Kings 109-105, and Seattle SuperSonics defeated Milwaukee Bucks 113-102.

In the American Basketball Association, St. Louis defeated Kentucky 126-122, Indiana defeated Utah 104-100, San Antonio whipped Memphis 125-104 and Denver beat San Diego 114-106.

World Football League—Just Color It Red

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A maiden season that began with great expectations to help ends deep in red ink here tonight when the World Football League plays its World Bowl with two of the teams which are among its casualties for bankruptcy.

The swallowing downhill slide the WFL has been on since late summer will be examined tonight by the fact that Birmingham Americans and Florida Blazers players haven't been paid in so long they probably qualify for welfare.

As late as Tuesday there was doubt this game would be played, and there was no guarantees even today that all the Birmingham players, who say they haven't been paid in two months, will honor their team's vote of two days ago to call off a boycott and participate.

The league insists it is here to stay, but there is little doubt it can endure many more seasons like the one which ends tonight.

Losses since July total about $20 million. One team declared bankruptcy and one folded. Another was dropped at midseason. A third quit with one week to play. Two others moved. Only two teams met all scheduled payrolls, and several are desperately seeking investors in order to stay afloat financially.

Most of those concerns may be put aside tonight when Birmingham, which has won 14 and lost 5, and Florida, 16-4, meet at Legion Field.

However, the attendance at tonight's game will be of prime concern to the players because their pay will come out of the gate receipts. Attendance at Birmingham games has shrunk from about 40,000 during the summer to a low of 15,000.

After game expenses, 75 per cent of the gate receipts is to be divided among the teams, with winners getting 40 per cent of that chunk and losers 40 per cent. A playoff game in Memphis last week drew about 19,000 and produced $335 for each winning player and $225 for each loser.

Whatever happens, tonight's results will not solve the problems of these two teams, or those of the league.

The Internal Revenue Service has filed a $227,000 lien against the Americans. The team owes $100,000 in state, county and city taxes, and a bank is seeking payment of a $750,000 loan. Players haven't been paid in eight weeks, and owner Bill Putnam has yet to find help in the form of new investors.

As for the Blazers, their debts could run as high as $2 million. Players haven't been paid since mid-September. Several proposed sales of the team have fallen through, including a recent one in which a syndicate actually delivered a $1 million cheque and then withdrew when the league raised questions about a violation of its by-laws. The Blazers have adopted the attitude that they're never going to be paid, they're mad about it and so they'll join the World Bowl out of spite.

"We're so angry that we want to win the World Bowl even if we have to eat crackers," said backup quarterback Buddy Palazzo, the Blazers' only player who has received his pay.

BIRTHS

HANEMAN — Mr. and Mrs. Roy Haneman (Patti Wolf) announce the birth of their son, Lee, on Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital. Thanks to Doctor Hoffman and nurses on 3rd floor.

IN MEMORIAM

CLAPPER — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother Ida May Clapper who left us two years ago today, Dec. 5, 1972.
The love was great, the shock severe,
The pain we hide,
But those who have lost can tell,
The sorrow of parting without farewell.
—Dearly remembered and missed by daughter June and grandchildren.

CLAPPER — In loving memory of my dear mother, Ida May Clapper, who left us two years ago today, Dec. 5, 1972.
Though your image is your treasure,
And your hand I cannot touch,
Still you are the sweetest memory,
Of the one I loved so much.
Your memory is my keepsake,
With which I will never part,
God has you in His keeping,
I have you in my heart.
—Sadly missed and forgotten by daughter Shirley.

CLAPPER — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother who left us two years ago today, Dec. 5, 1972.
Just a year in your country,
Just a year in your home,
Just a year to be missed by,
Just a year to mourn.
Memories remain I shall keep dear,
Because she was one of the best,
—Daughter Elwyn, son-in-law Howard and grandchildren.

MALDON — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Ethel May Alice Maldon, who passed away December 5, 1973.
Sadly missed by all the family.
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we think of you,
Are many.
You were hard to find.
If all the world were ours to give,
We'd give it, you, and more,
To see you smile and hear you laugh,
Just as you did before.
—Ever loved by sister and James, daughter Shirley, Kenneth, Brenda, Jim, Debby and Bruce.

CLAPPER — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ida May Clapper, who passed away two years ago today, December 5, 1972.
Her death is a silent grief,
Her memory a peaceful gift.
A thimble of perfect peace,
We miss her so, how well,
But realize God knew best,
So we must bear the pain,
Years untold may pass on,
But you'll loved ever to be fondly remembered, Donna, son-in-law Garnet, grandson Gary.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, December 6

Aries (March 21-April 19) It isn't likely you will do what others expect of you today. You will feel imposed upon. You will resent being hoaxed around.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) If you are fond of will do something thoughtlessly that will hurt your feelings. Don't know so that it won't happen again.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Items you acquire like decorative or beautify your home will look better in the store than they do in your home. Be wisely.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will get some good ideas today but you will be looking for others to carry them out, instead of implementing them yourself.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23) You are still much too keen with your purse strings, especially when it comes to spending on self-gratifying whims.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will not enjoy as much personal freedom as you planned on today due to the demands on your time by others.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be able to say "no" if unreasonable requests are made of you now by a friend, especially if money is the issue.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you are overly aggressive today it will tarnish your image in the eyes of others. Be your old, sweet self.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't try to be coy or beat about the bush if you want to make a point with another. Lay your cards on the table.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be sure alert than usual in your business dealings. Don't let others be rushed into something that needs more study.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Agreements today are likely to be too one-sided in the other fellow's favor unless you are very firm regarding your demands.

Instant Noodle Plant Proposed

MOOSEJAWE, Sask. (CP) — Since David Lange graduated from high school in 1961, this southern Saskatchewan town has lost a bakery, two hardware stores, a pool hall, a barber shop, a machine repair shop and an 11-bed hospital.

With the businesses have gone people — as the population dropped a qtr from 900.

But Mr. Lange, who found employment as an NDP member of the legislature, has a proposal he says will reverse the trend of economic decay. The idea is an instant-noodle factory.

The proposed $60,000,000 plant, which he says would be only the second of its kind in North America, is finding local backers despite some initial skepticism based on Mr. Lange's reputation for semi-socialist proposals.

"David's come to me with a lot of things," says town clerk Sam Zigerion. "To be honest, I thought it was another pipe dream."

But Mr. Lange's plan, which calls for 150,000 one-dollar shares to be bought by area residents, seems to be getting off the ground. More than half the shares have been sold—1,500 to Mr. Lange—and a meeting of 32 shareholders has chosen a board of directors for what will probably be called the Moosebank Development Corp. Ltd.

With $125,000 in local investment, the backers of the project hope to obtain more than $400,000 in loans from the Saskatchewan Economic Development Corp.

There is discussion, however, of some form of joint venture with the Japanese owners of the only existing instant-noodle plant on the continent, in Los Angeles.

The plant proposed for Moosebank would produce up to 2,400 tons a year of the instant noodles, made from ordinary spring wheat instead of durum wheat, which is more expensive and takes longer to cook, about nine minutes to the instant-noodle time of three minutes.

The provincial industry department, which originally came up with the idea after Mr. Lange asked them for suggestions, has done a study indicating a good domestic market for instant noodles and a strong chance of success for the plant.

When that assessment proves accurate, says Mr. Lange, "the name Moosebank will refer to a model of community industry, a model we can take to other communities."

Once Prison Guards Got No Training

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP) — "You were handed a set of keys and given an area to supervise and that was the end of it."

This is Ken McManus' first memory as a corrections officer at the Haney, B.C., jail 14 years ago. He now is director of the branch staff training academy.

"Now the policy is that an officer is not permitted to have any responsibility whatsoever until he's successfully completed his training," said Mr. McManus in an interview.

The recent completion of a four-week course by 13 recruits signalled the end of a makeshift, hire-now, train-later approach to staffing the provincial prison system, and with it the introduction of a realm of new attitudes and concepts in prison reform.

Academy instructor Bill Stelmaschuk said that the academy is training people for the role they will play once the provincial government replaces the large prisons with smaller community - oriented facilities. The plan was announced last May as part of a five-year program.

Mr. Stelmaschuk explained that the course any individual recruit takes at the academy is tailored to the area he is destined to work in.

For example, a correctional officer working in the remand wing of one prison might need a particular knowledge of "stress situations" that occur when persons in custody face an uncertain future that might range from freedom to a long penitentiary term.

Mr. Stelmaschuk said that now a would-be correctional officer spends two weeks in orientation at the institution where he is hired. He then spends four weeks taking courses at the training centre, followed by another two weeks back at the institution under the guidance of an experienced officer.

Only then is he allowed to assume the responsibilities that go with the job.

Mr. McManus said the initial two weeks a man or a woman spends in an institution itself allows both the employer and the employee to decide whether the career choice was the right one.

"We felt, ok, let's give people a chance to look at the thing for a week or two and make some initial decision about whether this looks like their bag.

"If it doesn't seem to be their thing, give the guy credit for having the sincerity for saying 'No, this isn't for me.'

"Let's not force a person into staying by putting him into an expensive training program on day No. 1. But let's put him into a training program early enough that he hasn't started to form some incorrect opinions or being put in the position of having to ask the inmates what he should be doing."

The academy must provide trained officers for an expanded network of correctional centres across B.C and has 36 recruits enrolled in its current course.

Of 36 recruits taking courses at the academy, Mr. Stelmaschuk said seven have a bachelor of arts degree or better and one or two have masters degrees. They are all being trained for work as security personnel.

"These are the kinds of people we're attracting and our training course is just trying to keep pace with this," he said.

Gregory Clark Offers Packsack

By JACK TRACY
The Canadian Press

Gregory Clark, one of the country's great storytellers, has turned out another collection of his short pieces identified as The Packsack, which appeared in many Canadian daily newspapers over 14 years.

The book is entitled Grandma Preferred Steak, also the title of the first story in the collection of 125 little yarns which Greg calls "shorter dicta things jotted in passing."

It is a homey piece about Greg's grandmother who preferred sirloin steak to all the game — partridge, duck and deer—that Nimrod friends distributed in her day.

While many of the bits of comment and homespun tales are in that vein, one of the pieces Greg prefers has a more serious note.

In it, he gives his thoughts on a visit to a military cemetery, burial place of war dead. The 82-year-old writer, decorated for his service in the First World War, writes:

"Captains and corporals, colonels and privates, they do not lie, they stand, and have stood for year upon year. Not strangers as we will be when we take our place beside utter strangers but companions of a special order of men."

Greg joined Toronto Star as a reporter in 1911. He has been an associate editor with Weekend Magazine since 1961.

Although he has covered many of the world's big stories, he calls himself a writer rather than a reporter. The kind of human little pieces in his new collection—one of a series that began in 1971—is an indication of that.

Grandma Preferred Steak, Gregory Clark; $7.95; 175 pages; Isbister Ltd., Montreal.

Cassava Seen Valuable Food

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Researchers at University of Guelph are studying a tropical plant they feel could be the answer to world hunger and rising food prices.

The plant being studied is the cassava. Its roots yield a nutritious starch used to make tapioca and other foods.

The researchers, in co-operation with the International Centre for Tropical Agriculture at Cali, Colombia, are investigating global markets for cassava, the plant's growth physiology and its nutrient deficiencies.

The plant is native to tropical America and Africa. The researchers feel the plant could provide a better diet for humans and animals in areas around the world where food is scarce.

Trudeau Is Willing To Study Oil Swap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is reported willing to consider an alternate proposal that would help states affected by Canada's cutoff of oil to the United States.

Republican Representative John Anderson of Illinois raised the possibility with Trudeau at a breakfast meeting Thursday and said Trudeau expressed a willingness to consider some such proposal.

Canada plans to end oil exports to the United States by 1982. Oil refineries in upper Midwest states would be particularly hard hit because of transportation problems in shipping domestic oil to that area.

Anderson, chairman of the House of Representatives Republican conference, one of 19 House members who have written to President Ford expressing concern over the Canadian intentions, He said he made no specific swap proposals to Trudeau, but merely broached the subject generally.

An aide to the conference said that one of four proposals being studied is to exchange Canadian oil for Canadian oil, which might be moved into the U.S. Midwest.

Before returning to Ottawa, Trudeau told reporters he had no choice but to stay with the oil phase-out plan. Otherwise, he said "we won't have enough for ourselves in the next seven or eight years."

The 19 House members said in their letter that the pending cutoff would adversely affect the producers and consumers in the upper Midwest.

They noted that Canada is the major supplier of crude oil in the Region, and that two-thirds of the Canadian exports are consumed within the northern tier states.

They urged serious discussions on the subject, saying that "even if alternative domestic or foreign oil is made available, no satisfactory transportation system at present exists to move petroleum to the area."

Inspectors Approve Settlement

OTTAWA (CP) — A tentative contract settlement clearing the way for normal grain exports has been approved by government food inspectors, the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) announced today.

Andy Stewart, PSAC executive vice-president and chief union negotiator, told a news conference that operations, including biggest down domestic grain shipments, now are back to normal.

He said union policy is not to release ratification figures, but he expects signing of the contract with the treasury board early next week.

The 26-hour ratification process took place in the shadow of a wipe the union called an extraneous and untimely announcement of the settlement by Treasury Board President Jean Chretien on Wednesday.

SIU Head Plans Reply to Shulman

OTTAWA (CP) — Amid growing demands in Parliament for a full-scale public inquiry, the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) planned to break silence today and answer Ontario Attorney Morton Shulman's charges of violence on the waterfront and corruption in high places.

SIU president Hal Banks Gralewicz scheduled a 1 p.m. news conference at union headquarters in Montreal to answer against what one union official described as the "smear campaign" being conducted by Dr. Shulman from the Ontario legislature.

But the new development is not expected to calm Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party demands for an inquiry into Shulman charges that the SIU leadership beat up on its own members and bribed federal politicians to keep quiet about it.

The controversy, centered on SIU election campaign contributions to cabinet ministers and others, gathered momentum Thursday as a union official denied there was anything wrong with making the payments and a growing list of cabinet ministers denied there was anything wrong with accepting them.

During a tense and baited hour of questioning in the Commons, Labor Minister John Munro and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, the two ministers most embroiled in the issue, stood firm in their opposition to an immediate public inquiry. Conservative and NDP members protested that the public will not settle for less.

Mr. Munro, whose department has jurisdiction over the SIU, and Mr. Allmand, minister responsible for the RCMP which is investigating the bribery allegations, said any decision on an inquiry will be made by cabinet on the strength of the RCMP's findings.

Shulman Called Liar And Stanfield Coward

This prompted a series of sharp outburst and denials in the commons with Mr. Munro calling Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield a coward and Mr. Allmand calling Dr. Shulman a liar.

Later Mr. Allmand said he may sue Dr. Shulman for saying that SIU aid led to violence in his Montreal riding of Notre-Dame-de-Grace.

Meanwhile the list of politicians who admit receiving SIU money lengthened as Health Minister Marc Lalonde confirmed that he received $500 towards the July 8 election campaign in his Montreal riding of Outremont.

Mr. Lalonde, counsel to the 1963 Norris commission inquiry which found the former SIU leadership a "violent, lawless, cruel, dishonest," said thourh an official in his office that he accepted the money with no promise to do anything in return.

So far four cabinet ministers, one former minister and two Conservative backbenchers have admitted receiving SIU money. All dispute suggestions by Dr. Shulman that the payments were linked to bribery and violence.

SIU Spokesman Says Charges 'A Lot of Bull'

Norman Olson, who describes himself as an SIU public relations man, said in Montreal Thursday night that the Shulman charges were "completely untrue" and "a lot of bull—".

Three police forces now are conducting investigations touching the troubled union. The RCMP is examining Dr. Shulman's charges of bribery and the OPP and Toronto police are investigating his charges of SIU-inspired violence against seamen.

Dr.Shulman's almost daily litany of charges against the union and his blots of gross impropriety by cabinet members follows the settlement of a labor contract last spring between the 2,750-member SIU and the Great Lakes Carriers Association.

Mr. Gralewicz hailed the settlement, which ended an SIU strike, as one of the best ever, but "a substantial minority of seamen voted against it.

Dr. Shulman said dissent over the settlement led to a renewal of the violence that plagued the SIU during the 1950s when it was run Hal C. Banks.

Shulman Says SIU Orders Gag

TORONTO (CP) — Morton Shulman (NDP—High Park) told the Ontario legislature Thursday the Toronto local of the Seafarers International Union (SIU) has passed a bylaw forbidding its members to give information to any outside persons.

"Ray Willis announced that the SIU was passing a new bylaw which would make it an offence for any member of the SIU to give any information about the SIU to any outside person," Dr. Shulman said.

The New Democratic Party member asked Ontario Attorney-General Robert Welch what the government intends to do to protect civil liberties of members of the SIU.

Mr. Welch replied that he is unaware of the bylaw and of what happened at the Wednesday night meeting at the SIU's Toronto hall.

After Dr. Shulman left the chamber, Patrick Lesbarrere (Lab—Rainy River) asked Solicitor-General George Kerr whether the government has ordered an investigation into how Dr. Shulman came into possession of the information.

"I do have some concern about that," Mr. Kerr replied. "I have asked the Ontario Provincial Police and the group that are investigating the SIU to see if they can ascertain that information."

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis then turned to Mr. Kerr and said: "You didn't have the guts to say that in his (Dr. Shulman's presence."

Dr. Shulman has said that the SIU boasted of having a mysterious unnamed senior cabinet minister in its pocket" and has charged that a paid-off government and nothing to stop SIU-instigated waterfront violence.

Juror in Tears

Demeter Given Life Sentence

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — One of the biggest and most bizarre murder trials in Ontario's history ended Thursday, as a tearful juror Peter Demeter was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of his wife, Christine.

After almost 43 hours of deliberations, an Ontario Supreme Court jury of nine men and three women found Demeter guilty of hiring someone to kill his wife, a 23-year-old former fashion model.

The shaken Mississauga, Ont., builder listened to the verdict and then delivered an emotional address to the court before the sentence was passed.

Choking back tears, he told the jury he supported their verdict and said they could not have reached any other decision, given the evidence.

He told himself, however, that he was not guilty and that they did not hear all the evidence.

His voice seemed glassh hiding a film of tears, the once-wealthy Demeter said he came to Canada with $3 in his pocket and found it an outstanding country.

He said it was ironic that he was convicted of murder almost 10 years to the day after he escaped to freedom in Austria from the oppression of his Hungarian homeland.

He said the trial has ruined his life, has left him broke, sick and his business capital.

There was silence in the town courtroom as the convicted man made his statement.

At one point, Karen Ross, a London personnel manager who acted as foreman of the jury, broke down and wept softly into a handkerchief.

Mr. Demeter's plea was an unusual reaction for a convicted person and after the proceedings were over, the presiding judge, Mr. Justice Campbell Grant, said he had never heard such a plea before.

"Usually they just keep quiet," he said.

Demeter told the court that it was his decision not to take the stand in his own defence and he added that he did not plan to appeal the verdict.

However, his lawyers said later there will be an appeal, adding that they plan to seek a bail hearing for their client shortly.

Rhodesia's Premier Attends Lusaka Parley

SALISBURY (AP) — A secret trip by Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith heightened anticipation that progress is being made toward a settlement between Rhodesia's black nationalists and Zimbabwe's white-minority government.

Smith returned to Salisbury Thursday, and sources close to the government indicated that he had been meeting in Lusaka, the Zambian capital, with nationalist representatives and the presidents of Zambia, Tanzania and Botswana.

These sources said they believed Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa would go to Lusaka this weekend, although this was denied in Pretoria, the South African capital. It was believed in Salisbury that Vorster, who is anxious to avoid a black-white confrontation in southern Africa, was putting great pressure on Smith to come to terms.

Smith proclaimed Rhodesia's independence from Britain seven years ago to block British plans for a new constitution promising the black majority eventual control of the government. Economic restrictions and guerrilla activity have not forced the white regime to retreat. But the new Portuguese government in Lisbon plans independence to Mozambique and Angola raises the threat of stepped-up guerrilla campaigns from those neighboring territories.

Rhodesia has a population of 270,000 whites and 5.8-million blacks, while in its parliament 50 seats are allotted to the whites and 16 to the blacks.

Last month, Smith's regime gave temporary confidence to two leading black political detainees—Joshua Nkomo, head of the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union, and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, leader of the Zimbabwe African National Union—when they conferred in Lusaka with Presidents Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and Seretse Khama of Botswana, three African leaders of the Commonwealth who also are sponsors for a peaceful settlement in southern Africa.

Nkomo and Sithole returned to confinement in Rhodesia after the meeting. Their lengthy detention, both family and their willingness to return to detention were considered strong indications that a settlement was in the works.

Stanley Structures Will Lay Off 100

By COLIN BRUCE

Up to 100 employees of Belleville's Stanley Structures will be laid off Dec. 23, a company spokesman said today.

Cliff Neill, company personnel manager, said he could not be specific as to the number of employees affected and that the layoff will last three weeks into mid-January.

A company release explained the layoff as the result of contracts for the coming year not being completely arranged.

The employees affected by the action are all from the company's precast division, where custom-made concrete forms are produced.

"We have approved contracts but are still waiting for production detail information," said Mr. Neill.

A union-negotiated arrangement allows for five days at holidays in a two-week period during the Christmas season, so employees will receive one complete pay, covering one of the three weeks of the layoff, said Mr. Neill.

Mr. Neill said "seasonal layoffs are not uncommon in the precast concrete operation. All workers will definitely be rehired."

"The layoff is being conducted on a seniority basis ... the only thing unusual is that so many workers are affected at one time," said Mr. Neill.

The maximum of 100 workers to be laid off represents about 45 per cent of Stanley Structures' 225 employees. Mr. Neill said employees will be called back when new orders are complete.

The company's written statement says "continued work prospects have been encouraging."

This is the second major layoff to strike the Belleville labor force in recent weeks.

Two weeks ago 150 employees of Northern Electric were laid off due to a "softening" of U.S. markets. Those employees had worked for Northern Electric for less than one year. There is no word whether those employees will be re-called.

Ten-day Sentence On Drinking Charge

TRENTON — A Trenton man, Kornelis Dykstra, 23, of 35 Crestwell Dr., was sentenced to 10 days in jail and prohibited from driving for six months after pleading guilty to impaired driving in provincial court here this week.

He was also fined $150 for failing to take a breathliher test following an Oct. 18 car chase on Dundas St. East, Trenton.

Court was told the Dykstra vehicle smashed out of a drive-in restaurant on Dundas St. East and was subsequently pursued by police at speeds of up to 90 miles an hour.

In another case before the court Roger Joseph Cormier, 25, of 53 Bay St., was fined $250 after pleading guilty to a charge of impaired driving Nov. 8. The charge arose from a collision on Front St. in which the Cormier vehicle struck two parked motorcycles.

Found guilty and fined $150 was James Patterson, 38, of RR 7 Brighton. Patterson pleaded not guilty to a charge of common assault but by police after a Sept. 22 incident involving Robert A. Crawford of RR 1 Trenton in the parking lot of Graham's Taxi on Murphy St.

City Begins Campaign For Foreign Industry

European economic gentlemen are forcing companies to look towards overseas locations for business expansion — a trend Belleville's industrial commission is capitalizing on.

Germany, one of the key countries looking abroad, is the target of a specially-created economic profile of Belleville that explains the virtues of the city as a potential home.

The multi-page document, written in German, covers all aspects of the city outlining existing business, current economic conditions and general lifestyle in the Belleville and surrounding area.

"Germany has a great interest in Canada," said Fred Bemis, the city's industrial commissioner. "This profile of the city is designed to return some benefits and results," he said.

The pamphlet will be sent directly to "several selected German companies," to the provincial and federal governments in Canada and to international bankers, said the commissioner.

"It's a small advertising program in addition to the German businessman with Bells-ville," said Mr. Bemis. "Just part of our prospecting, he said.

Consultant Urges CPR Study Imput

An interim report of progress of an official plan for the townships of Sidney and Thurlow and the villages of Frankford will be available in February, the Quinte Planning Board was told Thursday night.

Tony Holmes, representing the Toronto consulting firm of Proctor Redfern, said "75 to 80 per cent of the research data concerning the municipalities has been accumulated."

All that stands in the way of a completed first stage are meetings with the province's ministry of natural resources and ministry of housing, he said.

The interim report will include all the gathered data, an analysis and some conclusions that will point to general growth and development of the subject areas.

Mr. Holmes said his firm, in gathering data, had approached Canadian Pacific regarding input into plan material and whether plans had been made to re-route any of the train line.

He said the only comment was that CPR suggested a two-mile wide industrial strip on either side of the track be provided in an official plan stretching from the Trent River in Trenton continuing to Tyendinaga Reserve. There was no further comment.

Centre Gets Boost

DESERONTO — This town's community centre drive received its first big boost Thursday.

The source was an enthusiastic supporter of the project since its inception — the town's Canadian Legion branch.

The Legion's latest gesture was a $3,000 cheque — raised over the last two years by monthly ticket draws.

The presentation was made to Clarence Ziemau, chairman of the community centre committee, launched recently and hopeful of raising $25,000 in surrounding communities.

Work meantime continues on the centre, being built at the west end of town and estimated to cost more than $200,000 with federal and provincial government assistance.

Cox Plans Action On Zoning Motion

Belleville alderman Joe Cox will present a motion at the next meeting of council to see if the city's official plan in respect to lands in the Hillcrest area.

Ald. Cox said the land includes the east side of University Avenue from McLaurin Drive to Vico Crescent.

Ald. Cox, wary of delaying the plan, was assured by Bert Kenny, Quinte Planning Board director, the amendment to the plan is not a lengthy one and could be dealt with quickly by council.

The land is presently zoned as a holding area and designated in the newly-created official plan as restricted industrial. Ald. Cox's motion will call for a density one residential allowing single family homes and duplexes.

"The people up there definitely don't want it industrial," said the alderman.

Bureau Exploring New Sources of Funding

TRENTON — Citizens Bureau directors are hopeful that concern expressed by various federal government officials over the fate of the consumer help group here will manifest itself in funding in the near future.

Money to maintain operation of the consumer help group remains in short supply, since the bureau's last Local Initiatives Project (LIP) grant ran out in mid-summer.

Allen Baldwin, board chairman, said Thursday talks with various federal officials in Ottawa Wednesday indicate funds, other than LIP, are available.

He said he expects to receive some word on a possible new source of funding for the controversial bureau by next week.

Mr. Baldwin and bureau staff were in Ottawa this week to discuss new money sources with various government ministries. The chairman would not reveal the names of the people spoken to Wednesday.

The search for funding is currently at a sensitive stage right now and he did not want to compromise government officials.

Staff member William Hockley said Thursday the officials recognize the urgency of the situation. The bureau received an indication that intermim funding might be made available to "tide" the bureau over while government consideration continues.

Because the bureau performs work similar to that of several ministries, it is considered funds could come from several sources. Either one ministry, or several handling together, might provide new funds.

A provincial government source, the ministry of community and social services, has been approached for money. However, bureau personnel said they fear that certain, provincially-run funding could knock the teeth out of the bureau's role as a consumer advocate.

Mr. Baldwin said the bureau is exploring the possibility of provincial affiliation, but may not proceed if it is left without its title.

Farrow Joins Board

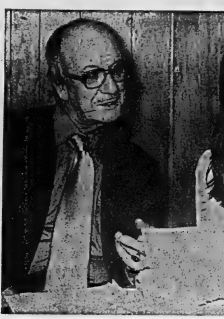
TRENTO — Vernan Farrow, an insurance agent, has become the Citizens Bureau's newest board member. His acceptance as a director increases to eight the number of board members. Gordon Young, a vice-president of the Quinte District Labor Council, was named to the board earlier.

Crash Results In Minor Damage

TWEED — A rear-end collision Wednesday evening on Highway 14, two miles north of Stirling, caused $300 damage to each of the cars involved.

Lola Margaret Dunford of Springbrook was southbound and making a left-hand turn when the car was in collision with a car behind her, driven by Helen Muriel Thomson, also of Springbrook.

A Hamner, woman Eva White, 72, has been charged with careless driving following an accident Thursday at 4:15 p.m. on Highway 62, 15 miles north of Madoc.



The car Mrs. White was driving crossed the road and came to rest against a tree, causing $500 damage. There were no injuries.

Fire Cause Checked

MADOC — Madoc's volunteer fire department is investigating the cause of the blaze that destroyed a garage belonging to M and S Construction Tuesday evening.

Three men were in the garage at the time, using an electric sander. Fire Chief Lorenda Empey said today that sparks from the sander are believed to have ignited material in the 40-by-80-foot garage, built last summer.

Mr. Empey has sent construction material, such as iron the structure, for analysis. No estimate of the damage is available, but machinery, tools and a new half-ton truck were lost in the blaze.

Looking for a Way

Allen Baldwin chairman of Citizens Bureau board, and Pam Allen, board member, go over papers dealing with the bureau's search for funding to keep it operating.

Speeding Motorists Land On Homeowner's Lawn

WOOLER — There was a little bit of this and that for just about every resident of Murray Township at the municipal council meeting this week.

Tom Hatfield began the meeting by telling council he shouldn't have to put up with cars driving on his lawn, between his two house, and almost into them, on Barcovan Rd south of Highway 2.

Council said it was nothing new, and reeve Harry Lafferty said he has sightmares about a truck meeting a school bus on the sharp curve where the road turns sharply before reaching the Murray Canal.

Mr. Hatfield said he has seen two cars roll over, while a neighbour said in the summertime one could expect two cars a weekend on the lawn.

Council is planning to try to buy land and widen out the corner, but Mr. Hatfield said "This will only make cars go faster."

In another matter, clerk Ken Rose said a resident south of the Murray Canal and west of Highway 33 wants his road plowed in winter.

He said the resident has been writing since spring and getting nowhere, so now council might take the long route again to buy the land to build its own roads so it can be plowed. The present road is owned by the department of Indian and northern affairs.

Council also said isn't happy with people using old hot water tanks for culverts, and is going to back $100 onto the $10 building permit for culvert installation.

And in the future, when township work crews dig holes near, and reeve Harry Lafferty said he has sightmares about a truck meeting a school bus on the sharp curve where the road turns sharply before reaching the Murray Canal.

City Of Tomorrow

It's clear that more serviced land and low-cost housing are two of Belleville's prime needs as Council gets down to charting the city's course for the days ahead. Industrially, Belleville has pumped forward in the past couple of years, but this has not been matched residentially.

That was the burden of recent observations by city building inspector Grant Stickle, and despite the fact he was able to point to a healthy position overall, noting that the city "is riding on a strong wave of development."

As the election campaign has revealed, there is still some land in Belleville which is suitable for development but remains unserviced.

There is the potential also for cooperation with the township, for construction of housing on the city's fringes, with water and other facilities being provided by Belleville.

While it is not going to happen overnight, the ultimate and logical evolution of the region should see a link-up between Belleville and the townships. Such a development would facilitate planning and help ease the shortage of reasonably-priced housing.

Money To Invest

There is nothing to stop Arab nations, with money to spare from oil, investing in overseas development.

In fact, following purchase of a substantial share of the Daimler-Benz Corporation by a Middle East government — believed to be Iran — a West German spokesman said it was "a private enterprise, and the government has no reason to welcome or regret it."

What would be alarming, however, in the official's view, would be purchase, for example, of major shares of a German nuclear energy enterprise.

But shouldn't the Arab lands' newfound wealth be directed toward upgrading their low overall standard of living?

The answer of course is yes, and this applies to other oil-producing areas too. At the same time, where Canadian tax money is concerned, Ottawa is in the process of carrying out a necessary review of our aid to countries whose revenues have risen sharply with increased international prices for oil.

They include Algeria, Nigeria and Indonesia which have been receiving in excess of $24 million in aid from Canada.

If Ottawa concentrated as much attention and material aid on necessary development and on removing inequalities at home (such as those which affect our native population) as it lavishes on countries overseas, we would indeed be the fortunate land so many claim for it.

Driver Caution

Just because Safe Driving Week is drawing to a close does not mean motorists should suddenly throw caution to the winds.

Far from it. Safe driving should become a habit, and all the more so during this winter season when conditions are that much more difficult.

Here are a few things to remember at this time of year.

Approaches to icy intersections may be packed and polished. Slow down to avoid sliding into cross traffic.

When an unexpected patch of ice is encountered, don't brake, or accelerate.

And, at this time of busy downtown shopping, look out for pedestrians caught halfway across the street.

These are only a few hints; they should be part of a pattern of defensive driving every motorist should cultivate.

Make every week a Safe Driving Week.

South Africa Not Alone

Skeletons Abound In Political Closets Of Black Africa

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst—
Thomson News Service

The very powerful but often very irrationally-thinking Arab can bloc in the United Nations have finally secured a General Assembly vote to exclude South Africa from all UN functions.

The reason for this of course is that country's racism and strong economic relations with many powerful multinational corporations in the world which allegedly exploit black labor in South Africa and southwest Africa.

This means South Africa remains a UN member in name only. The South African ambassador has been called home and Pretoria is obviously determining new strategy for its future position in the United Nations.

All this might be in order if the African member nations of the UN were themselves free of racial discrimination. But their leaders against their people and their own private deals with the big, bad multinational corporations.

South African apartheid aside, the fact is Africa as a continent is ridden with racism and incredibly cruel rulers.

At least three African leaders, General Idi Amin of Uganda, Colonel Quaddafi of Libya and certainly an especially brutal President Ngarta Tombalbaye of Chad appear mentally unstable.

And the record of barbarism towards the populace and political enemies in black Africa is almost impetus with the exception of the "essentials of the state" in military-controlled Ethiopia.

In Chad its president has ordered the reinstitution of a cruel and stupid tribal test of strength called Yondo which includes mock burials and crawling naked through a nest of termites. He already has performed the test himself to show his terror-stricken subjects what a great guy he is.

Gen. Amin's latest obscenity was his proposal, openly spoken and British-trained Prime Minister Elizabeth Bagaya, his former foreign minister, of having sexual relations with "an open Elizabeth Bagaya," in a public washroom at the Paris Orly airport, and to hold her in "protective custody (shudder) in Kampala.

The record of racism in black Africa in many ways outdoes that of the white South Africans. Again from a sick Uganda we remember the sudden and unnecessary 1972 expulsion of the entire Asian Ugandan community.

In Kenya, the pressures on Asian Kenyans to sell out to the government has been subsidized by state decrees to accomplish just this.

Kenya is still in the throes of its worst homicidal ideology involving cabinet members around Prime Minister Jomo Kenyatta and the bizarre seizure of perhaps the largest new diamond find in Africa from its original white prospectors.

In the Congo President Mobutu engages in a stupefying form of self-adulation not seen in West Africa since the similar display of this by the late president Nkrumah in Ghana before his fall-out fellow citizens rose up in 1966 and tossed out "The Great Redeemer."

And so it goes, one black African nation after the other, with large, strong and confident Nigeria under its brilliant military President General Gowon being an exception other black African nations could follow but won't.

Instead in their self-right-eousness, they maintain the fiction at the United Nations that South Africa is the only offender in a continent of many vetta and Hitler, and some of which has a representative government.

The final irony for the South Africa is the news leak that Prime Minister Vorster and Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda have been meeting secretly to try to form some area of rapprochement between black and white regimes in the still very Dark Continent.

Stanfield Getting To Opposition And Conservatives Rally Behind

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA - Something most unusual has to be happening inside the parliamentary wing of the Conservative Party when MPs Gordon Fairweather of New Brunswick's Fundy-Royal and Jack Horner of Alberta's Crowfoot see more of each other's eye-to-eye.

Such a meeting of minds would have been just about the most unlikely development among the Conservatives in all the 12 years the two have been together — but as far apart as it was possible to be — in the Commons.

For while they have occupied the same political side of the House, Horner for 17 years and Fairweather since 1962, they have been worlds apart ideologically.

Horner is the established hard-shell conservative Conservative, the party's recognized granite-nose, and Fairweather is the resident socialist conservative, its ranking bleeding heart.

But right now, you would never know it.

You might even suspect, if you didn't know it was all but ideologically impossible, that they are political blood-brothers.

But like all the other 94 Tories they are united, with enthusiasm behind Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

It must be an intoxicating experience for him.

For it is a real first, never ever having happened to him before in his years since he came to the Capital as the uncertain leader of a divided band of fighting, feuding Conservatives, seven difficult years ago.

It is not that the Conservatives have ever given him an oath of undying faith and loyalty to their leader and are, unbelievably, united to it.

Nor is it that the good and decent and reasonable Stanfield overnight has turned into a parliamentary tiger.

It is not that the Conservatives, collectively, despite their wonderful new position, have found strength in governing-by-opposition.

They see the Liberals founding in economical difficulties and personal embarrassments.

They sense that perhaps there is the whiff of blood in the political wind, and off on the horizon, perhaps much closer than the election, ordinarily scheduled four years from now, they see the possibility of power to come.

And you should see — and hear

— the astonishing difference it is making to Robert Stanfield.

The tragedy is that it has taken so long — too late, since he has all but committed himself beyond recall to resignation as leader — to come about.

The Conservative caucus, he has trumpeted in triumph, has long delayed, never has been so united in enthusiasm and determination.

Nor has it, and that is the simple truth, been.

What has got the Conservatives all fired up?

Three things.

Margaret Trudeau's remarkable freelance trip to the Orient as the guest of a Hong Kong shipping magnate ... her amazing self-revelations on television ... and the way it all seemed to be symbolic of the Prime Minister's cost and even attitude.

Second, the incredible flip to the Middle East by Health Minister Marc Lalonde aboard the Distillers-Seagram "whiskey ship" his arrogant "let 'em drink milk powder" and overlook the 1.2 bacteria-loaded baby-burger political bloopers.

And third, cabinet concern over Trudeau's "Caesar syndrome" in executing unwanted ministers, provincial and the provinces with his resources ripoff, and his bilingualism-be damned edict.

The Conservatives feel it in their political bones that something is happening on the Liberal cabinet benches — not an open revolt against the Prime Minister, but a petrifying of the conventional Trudeau wisdom previously taken as Holy Grail, and most of all a wondering whether something is coming apart.

If you listen carefully, you can hear the whispered rumblings on the front rows of the taxpayers to the public galleries — no longer the worshipful oo-ing and ah-ing when the Prime Minister appears, but the buzz and murmurs of disagreement and even contradiction when he speaks in invitation, flounces to his feet, flings himself back in anger into his seat, and, as has happened more often of late, when he buries his head in his hands in despair.

Stanfield and his Conservatives are in a position of hearing it, and starting to put it all together, and to work.

Food Shortages Could Hit Canada In Wake Of Grain Disruptions

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The current standstill in Canadian grain movements is bringing the threat of food shortages closer to home than ever before.

The grain trade had resumed for the only a few weeks after the strikes of the Coast elevator workers and Great Lakes officer-seamen, when there was a small number of grain inspectors against the federal government and brought shipments to another abrupt halt.

The impact on the economy is widespread. Not only is shipping time prior to the freeze-up of the Great Lakes and the ocean cost of shipping Western grain to domestic markets is limited largely by rail rather than by water, lay-offs in Eastern mills because of lack of supplies to work with, and shortages—combined with price increases—in flour, bread and pasta on retailers shelves.

"The present resentment of delay is reacting to a situation well known in advance of its occurrence is disappointing," comments James Richardson and Sons Ltd. of Winnipeg in its current Grain Letter.

"Also discouraging is the quite different attitude displayed in its treatment of federally employed inspectors in this dispute, compared to the settlement the government forced upon the grain trade a few short weeks ago."

(This is a reference to Labor Minister John Munro's imposition of a settlement giving British Columbia grain handlers a 30-per-cent increase, and Great Lakes officer-seamen a 60-per-cent pay boost).

This year's disruptions to the Canadian grain trade could hardly have come at a worse time—a time when Canadian consumers are facing the biggest food-price increases in memory, and when many food-short foreign countries are looking to Canada for help.

But they also remind us that food production and distribution are, and have always been, a business.

Many journalists at the recent World Food Conference in Rome were apparently shocked to discover this fact and long after story about the number of people who attended at its end of the conference, and about the generous meals served to the 1,200 conference delegates.

Brotherhood and voluntary self-denial, unfortunately, have not been the solution to the problem of hunger in less developed countries.

Even though the journalists present may not have been satisfied, the conference was actually constructively seeking a solution through a combination of a) international emergency food-aid plan to deliver $3-billion worth of grain to the hungry by mid-1975, and a long-term plan to finance agricultural and fisheries development projects in developing countries so that they would ultimately become self-sustaining.

The U.S. government and its famous agriculture secretary may have been insensitive in placing new emphasis on sales rather than aid. But American handouts in the past were one reason for the failure of some recipient-countries to try to develop their own food-growing potential.

Canada's stance at the conference—greater aid and strong support for self-help projects—was an enlightened one. But its implementation could threaten the strikes that have been choking off our grain trade.

Canada And Monarchist Tradition

Peterborough Examiner

It is time for Canadians to get off their pedestals about the Queen.

For years, Canadians who favor a strong monarchist position have been accused about the country to defend the Queen's honor against all real and imagined attacks. They've been finding republicans, communists under every bed, lurking under stones from British Columbia to Newfoundland.

Hardly a day goes by in fact without one of these monarchists uncovering another plot to edge the Royal Family out of its influence out of Canadian life.

It's time they gave it up. Republicanism is not the only mass popular appeal in Canada. Although it has its quirks in isolated areas of the country, it has never managed to secure much of a hold over the minds of the Canadian people.

The fact is, we see, that Canadians, generally speaking, like the Queen and her family. While they don't spend all their time waving little flags and cheering, neither do they have any intention of hooting the Royal Family out of town.

No the monarchy is safe in Canada. It's been safe for some, for the foreseeable future at least.

In light of the public favor accorded to Queen and family, Canada's rabid defence last week was unnecessary and silly.

Some members were scandalized by a segment of a CBC French-network television show.

The Senate's reaction far exceeded the humor of the segment.

Bid To Save a Historic Home

Kitchener - Waterloo Record.

Announcement of a grant of $4,000 by the provincial government gives some encouragement to a local historical group at Waterloo in its bid to save the 126-year-old home of Col. Anthony Van Egmond, just outside the town limits of Seaforth. The project is one of importance to local history in Huron County, but the Van Egmond story also has a connection to the history of the Waterloo Region.

Col. Van Egmond, commander-in-chief of Dutch-Belgian forces in the Napoleonic Wars, arrived in the 1831 retreat from Moscow, lived in Waterloo after he emigrated to North America. He is recorded here by John Galt, founder of the Canada Company, as the first construction contract, opening through previously unbroken forest a road from New Hamburg to Goderich.

The line of the trail that Van Egmond's crews of axes-wingers chopped out is now that of No. 8 Highway. He was one of the principal figures in the opening for settlement of the area now contained in Huron and Perth counties.

The more dramatic and better known story of Van Egmond's part in the Mackenzie Rebellion of 1837. He was to have trained the volunteers in Mackenzie's army, but became a victim of Mackenzie's bad temper, was arrested and put in the Don Jail in Toronto and died there of pneumonia, in an unheated cell in December, before coming to trial.

The Van Egmond home deserves to be saved as a reminder of one of the most colorful characters in western Ontario's history. Local subscriptions in the Seaforth area have raised $4,500, but that is not nearly enough. A Local Initiatives Program grant now makes it possible to start on restoration before the Van Egmond home crumbles beyond repair.

Impact Of Alcoholism On Society

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Not a week goes by in the Assizes at Thursday's BGH Rehabilitation Week discussed about alcoholism.

It was agreed consumption is the key to the problem — and that Alcholism increases as per capita consumption increases. It was further stated the public was over concerned with prescription and illegal drugs, alcohol on younger members of society.

What is alcohol doing to the youth? During the past four years every province in Canada has reduced the legal drinking age from 21 to 18. I understand they are trying to lower it to 18. The citizens are beginning to see a growing number of fully developed alcoholics who are in their teens and early 20's.

Prevention? — Our example as adults would be the greatest single influence in a young person's 'allure drinking behavior.' They will do as we do, not as we say.

There are now probably 40,000 full-blown alcoholics in Canada. Of the 133,000 alcoholics in Ontario, more than 15 per cent of these being treated in one of the clinics in Ontario have been drinkers.

Prevention? Stop the TV Beer Commercials. One beer company spends an average of $25,000 per commercial to fill our home screens with fallacies designed to reduce the number of places Canadians can drink. — Double the price.

I do not need to say that heavy drinking plays a significant role in suicides, murders, and crimes of violence — lighted and killed in car accidents. According to careful estimates of total alcohol problems in Canada is now about 20 to 33 per cent as serious as that of France.

The picture of Canadians as safe, harmless, jovial drinkers is a myth!

Ontario's Land Tax To Be Cut

TORONTO (CP) — An amendment lowering the rate of tax of the provincial land speculation tax to 20 per cent from 50 per cent was introduced in the legislature Thursday by Revenue Minister Arthur Meen.

He said the tax rate was being lowered because of the federal government's refusal to allow the Ontario tax a deduction for federal income tax purposes.

He added that even if the provincial government won a court case, the federal government could amend the federal tax statutes to effectively reverse the court's decision.

Travel Agents To Be Licenced

TORONTO (CP) — John Clement, provincial minister of consumer and commercial relations, Thursday introduced an act would regulate Ontario's travel industry.

"For some time now, my ministry has been extremely concerned about the irresponsible selling and administrative procedures used by some travel agents . . . " Mr. Clement said in a statement.

"Our examination . . . has shown that no one is exempt very effectively for the travel consumer" he said. "The new legislation is going to put the consumer in a much better position."

Compensation Increase Asked

TORONTO (CP) — The Service Employees International Union has recommended to the Ontario government that it increase workmen's compensation benefits to 100 per cent of an employees wages at the time of his accident and that the payment be protected from increases in the cost of living.

Limit Stays

TORONTO (CP) — A motion by James Foulds (NDP—Port Arthur) to delete a list of maximum salaries for school board trustees from Bill 72, the new education act, was defeated Thursday by an Ontario legislative committee.

The salary-setting provision drew considerable criticism from Liberal and NDP members of the standing committee on social development, but Education Minister Tom Wells said a school board trustee's job is only part-time.

"It's a policy-setting job," Mr. Wells said. "He (the trustee) isn't there to administer."

Building Burns

DOUGLAS POINT, Ont. (CP) — Fire destroyed a warehouse containing $500,000 worth of equipment at the Bruce nuclear power development of Ontario Hydro, a Hydro official said.

Elgin Horton, Hydro operations manager, said the fire Wednesday is believed to have been caused by an electrical or heater malfunction.

Four Jailed

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Four Toronto men were each sentenced in provincial court Thursday to one year in jail for the theft of $25,000 worth of stereo equipment from a Timmins store Oct. 26.

Raymond E. Friedels, Peter Anthony Mirkocca, Leonard Reuben Talbot, all 20, were each sentenced to nine months definite and three months indefinite by Judge H. W. Gauthier.

All four pleaded guilty on Nov. 13.

Opposes Fences

TORONTO (CP) — Bernard Newman (Windsor—Walkerville) Thursday criticized a provision in Ontario's Bill 72, the new education act, that school boards be allowed to erect walls or fences around school grounds.

Speaking to the legislature's standing committee on social development, Mr. Newman, a committee member, said the provision is inconsistent with the current trend toward making school facilities more available to the public.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Civil Servants Plan New Drive

TORONTO (CP) — The Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) said Thursday it is beginning the second phase of a campaign designed to ready its members for a showdown in the new year with the provincial government.

John Gordon, general manager of the CSAO, said at a conference that the decision to continue an attack against the provincial government's policies relating to the CSAO was made after a reply from the government earlier in the day to the association's recommendations for changes to the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act (CECBA).

The second phase, Mr. Gordon said, would include newspaper advertisements on the scale used recently to provide the public with the CSAO's position regarding wage discussions with the province and to openly criticize the government for its stance.

The CSAO has set Dec. 21 as the deadline for signing of a new agreement.

Mr. Gordon said the CSAO will meet with the provincial management board on Monday to present it with a reply to government wage offers submitted earlier this week.

He termed the province's offer of a 30-per-cent wage increase for 20,000 CSAO operating personnel "reasonable" and said the association would have to "seriously consider" the offer.

The CSAO had originally sought a 61-per-cent increase for operating personnel.

Mr. Gordon said that if members are dissatisfied with the bargaining process during the coming weeks, the CSAO will ask major unions in Ontario to co-operate in an all-out attempt to defeat the government in the event of an election next year.

Eric Winkler, chairman of the management board of cabinet, said Thursday in a statement in the legislature that the board agreed earlier in the day with CSAO representatives to recommend a number of changes to the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act.

Mr. Winkler said the management board is recommending the method of appointing the chairman of an arbitration board be changed.

The change means each party would appoint a member to the Proposed Amendments Criticized

TORONTO (CP) — Proposed amendments to the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act are inadequate and a provocation to the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO), Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, charged Thursday.

Mr. Lewis told the legislature the proposed amendments introduced earlier in the day by Eric Winkler, chairman of the management board of cabinet, avoid three critical issues that are central to the CSAO.

The amendments do not give the provincial employees the right to strike, do not allow them the right to bargain for their pension plan and do not resolve the CSAO's complaint that the arbitration board is stacked in the government's favor, Mr. Lewis said.

Separate Schools Claim Right to Hire Only RCs

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Jacques Desrochers, a Roman Catholic—priest, told a legislature committee Thursday that provincial governments do not have the authority to interfere with the rights of separate school boards in hire teachers according to religion.

"We feel we will have to start spelling out the rights of separate school boards in this particular area," said Father Desrochers, who served on a study group preparing sections of the new education act, Bill 72.

He was speaking to the standing committee on social development which is conducting a clause-by-clause study of the huge Education Act, 1974, a consolidation of five previous acts.

The bill already has been given second reading and approval in principle from the legislature and is subject to amendment by the committee before final passage.

Father Desrochers, speaking for the Ontario Separate School Trustees' Association, has said the rights of separate schools are defined by imperial statute and "cannot be altered unless the British North America Act is changed.

Father Desrochey said separate school boards' rights must be spelled out.

Two women were dismissed Nov. 13 by the Essex County Roman Catholic separate school board because they were mar-

Plan Attacked

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members grilled Ontario Housing Minister Donald Irvine Thursday for his announcement of provincial government housing agreements to provide living space for families earning $15,000 to $19,000 annually.

The four agreements would provide townhouses in two Ottawa developments, condominium apartments in Ajax and townhouses in Brampton, Mr. Irvine told the legislature.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said the province was providing housing for people that don't need assistance.

ried in civil ceremonies. One teacher has appealed to the ministry of education for a board of reference hearing.

Father Desrochers said separate school boards reflect the consensus of the Roman Catholic community which pays for the system and the boards want to ensure "Roman Catholicism of the system" is continued.

Gerald Barbeau, a Sudbury District Roman Catholic separate school board trustee, asked the committee to amend the bill to allow separate school boards to maintain classes for trainable mentally-retarded children of elementary school age.

"This is a grave injustice that's being done to these children," Mr. Barbeau said. "We feel this is a basic right these children should enjoy through their parents."

Education Minister Tom Wells said he earlier agreed to authorize a special study of the problem.

Elie Martel (NDP-Sudbury East) said:

"We need another study like we need a hole in the head. It's just a put-off."

Mr. Wells replied:

"There is a need for a deeper study for this, so we can get the whole thing straightened out."

Bob Spencer, newly-elected trustee of the Toronto board of education, said the role of school boards—such as hiring and firing authority and salaries for trustees—should be clarified.

Mr. Spencer said school boards should be authorized to develop short-term pilot courses without having to seek approval of the minister in order to meet local needs.

Review Award

ST. MARYS, Ont. (CP) — An arbitration board will meet Saturday in London to reconsider a wage increase award made Nov. 1 to workers at a Dutton, Ont., curvalcement home which left some employees with wages below the provincial minimum had the part of the contract.

Bishop Impatient

TORONTO (CP) — Rt. Rev. John Bothwell, Anglican Bishop of Niagara, says he is tempted to ordain women to the priesthood without official approval of the Canadian Anglican House of Bishops because a firm decision on the matter by his peers continues to be put off.

Bishop Bothwell, attending a meeting of 35 prelates in nearby Port Credit, said Wednesday he is frustrated by the fact that two days of discussion on the subject had resulted in a decision to submit the matter to further study "without a set time limit."

Lougheed Called 'Vicious,' Getty Dripping with Venom

OTTAWA (CP) — The rift between Alberta and Ottawa widened Thursday night when Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, facing a pack of hostile Progressive Conservatives, had harsh words for Premier Peter Lougheed and his senior minister, Don Getty.

Mr. Macdonald said Mr. Lougheed was vicious and Mr. Getty was "dripping with venom" in their attitude toward the federal government, which wants a larger share of oil royalties.

His denunciation of the two Alberta politicians came on the eve of his participation here in a meeting with his provincial counterparts, including Alberta Mines Minister Bill Dickie.

He said a speech earlier this week by Mr. Getty, provincial intergovernmental affairs minister, was evidence of a growing antipathy about the growing energy requirements of Central and Eastern Canada.

Mr. Getty, at the nomination meeting for a provincial election expected in 1975, rapped Ottawa for what he said was a carefully calculated 12 month program designed to give the federal government a firm grasp on the province's natural wealth.

Parts of the speech were read in the House Thursday by Dave Roche (Edmonton Strathcona), one of a series of Progressive Conservatives doing all they can to delay the almost inevitable parliamentary approval of the proposed petroleum administration act.

The Opposition is angry about one particular clause, an 81-word section that would enable Ottawa to unilaterally impose a ceiling on the price of crude oil and natural gas in any province.

"If that clause were to be removed, we could promise very rapid passage of that legislation," said Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre), one of the main speakers for Bilsdoter, which consists of lengthy, delaying speeches.

"We opposed, plead, beg the federal government to stop this confrontation tactics, this grubbing for power."

Mr. Roche said passage of the bill with the offending clause still in it would be "the worst thing in the world we could do for this country."

CHANCES SLIM

But the Liberals, just as stubbornly, want the bill to remain intact. And, with their 141-seat majority, the possibility of any concession to the Conservatives is slim. For the bill to be defeated, the Opposition would need the support of a substantial number of Liberals, a remote possibility.

Mr. Macdonald's reaction to the unflagging opposition, with some help from Saskatchewan Conservatives, was his terse descriptions of Mr. Lougheed and Mr. Getty.

When it was suggested outside the House that he did not seem to care about improving relations with Alberta, the energy minister hastily disagreed.

"Oh no, it's not that at all," he said. "But that speech of Getty's. . . .

"He was not optimistic when asked whether there is any solution to the crisis or any immediate hope for an improvement in the deteriorated relations between the two governments.

He said the Getty speech, the Conservative premier's claim that Ottawa's oil policies "will destroy Confederation as we know it" and the hostility of the Opposition "certainly don't do a thing to help."

Mr. Macdonald's statements were the latest chapter in a bitter dispute centering on the administration bill and other federal programs.

Alberta and other provinces with resources say Ottawa is creating their resources and flouting the British North America Act, which gives the provinces jurisdiction over their own resources.

But the federal viewpoint is that the BNA Act also gives Ottawa wide taxation powers.

If the bill is not passed by the end of this year, consumers would pay higher prices for heating oil and gasoline in and east of the Ottawa valley. This is because federal subsidies are to end Dec. 31.

Mr. Roche said there is a danger that if Ottawa gets too greedy about royalties and too restrictive about oil pricing, Alberta might find it cannot develop further oil finds.

The matter was not helped by Ottawa, "playing a different ball game every day of the week," OWEN DERBY

Mr. Macdonald, amid a hail of interruptions by the western Conservatives in the House, said it is time Alberta realized it owes a debt to Eastern Canadians.

"For 10 or 15 years, oil was sold to Central Canada at about $1.35 or $1.50 above world prices", he said.

"The Alberta industry developed on the basis of a series of federal policies' which substantially assisted the development of that industry and from which, at that particular time, the producers of Alberta benefited."

He said this was because the East, particularly Ontario, used domestic oil at a time when it could have obtained imported oil at a lower price.

Grain Shipments Moving Despite Inspectors' Anger

OTTAWA (CP) — Grain shipments began moving Thursday for the first time in nearly two weeks as federal grain inspectors began returning to their jobs across the country.

But many inspectors expressed dissatisfaction and anger about Treasury Board President Jean Chretien's promature announcement of the tentative settlement reached Wednesday.

Inspectors at Thunder Bay, Ont., where an estimated 50 per cent of all domestic supplies for Eastern Canada has been tied up, reluctantly returned to their jobs.

By mid-morning only a handful of the 139 Lakehead inspectors had returned after a back-to-work appeal from union offices here.

Results of a vote on the tentative contract agreement are expected to be announced early today.

Mr. Chretien, in making an announcement in the Commons, said the agreement provided for an 18-per-cent pay raise in a 15 month contract ending Nov. 9, 1975.

Inspectors now have an average annual salary of $18,258.

Andy Stewart, chief union negotiator, said Mr. Chretien's premature announcement of the settlement was "a totally irresponsible act."

"He (Mr. Chretien) totally misrepresented the settlement. I'll on Friday when the results of the ratification vote are announced, the settlement is rejected, the blame must be laid at the feet of Mr. Chretien," he said.

Mr. Chretien said outside the Commons Thursday that perhaps he should have waited before making the announcement of the settlement.

"I think perhaps they have a point when he told reporters, when asked what he thought about the annoyance expressed by the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the union representing the inspectors.

He said he had been under pressure to settle the strike and felt he had a responsibility to keep the Commons informed on negotiations.

Atlantic Richfield May Quit Alberta Oil Sands Project

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An announcement that a partner is considering leaving the Syncrude Canada, Ltd. oil sands project added fuel to the federal-provincial energy dispute and sent the project's three remaining partners into an emergency meeting to discuss the situation.

Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. (ARCO) told partners Imperial Oil Ltd., Canada Cities Service Ltd., and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and the Alberta government Wednesday that it was reassessing its participation in the Syncrude consortium.

"We are waiting for official clarification and legal interpretation of what ARCO means by reassessing," said John Barr, Syncrude public affairs manager in Edmonton.

However, ARCO's partners held an emergency meeting in New York Thursday and said they are reassessing their position in view of the ARCO move.

The three have requested a meeting with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed to discuss the situation next Tuesday.

The premier said in an interview government puts pressure on the federal government to increase the price of Canadian crude oil.

A higher price would strengthen the viability of oil sands plants, particularly the Right of a National Energy Board prediction of oil shortage for Canada in about seven years, Mr. Lougheed said.

Bob Clark, Social Credit house leader in Alberta, said ARCO's move shows that the province and the federal government must keep trying to iron out differences over natural resources.

It is clear the present crude oil price of $6.50 a barrel must be increased, Mr. Clark said.

He also said it is understandable that when crude oil exports to the United States are going to be cut off, one of the Syncrude partners is getting nervous.

Federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday the federal government still is willing to participate in development of the Alberta oil sands.

But he said that any federal investment will require the approval of Alberta, which has opposed such plans.

Mr. Macdonald said he wanted to see a report from the Syncrude meeting in New York before making detailed comment.

Government and Time Deadlocked Over Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government and Time Canada Ltd. are said to be deadlocked over a four-point plan to "Canadianize" the newsmagazine and save it from extinction.

Time executives have accepted government proposals for a majority Canadian ownership of the United States-owned publication but have turned down demands for a minimum 65-per-cent Canadian editorial content and changes in the magazine's format, sources say.

As a result the whole question of ending the controversial tax exemptions for the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest has been moved well down on the government list of cabinet-level priorities.

Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner announced plans earlier this year to review the exemptions with a view to no longer allowing advertisers to claim tax deductions for advertising costs in the two publications.

The Time Canada president Stephen S. LaRue responded with a warning that the parent company, Time Inc. of New York, would cease publication of the Canadian edition with a loss of millions of dollars in salaries to employees, payments to printers and other suppliers and commissions to advertising agencies.

Sources say a cabinet committee has made Time an offer which would effectively allow the government to introduce in its new Tax Act changes barring the exemptions but let Time Canada Ltd. continue operations as a Canadian publication.

Under the proposed deal Time would let Canadians buy a controlling interest in the subsidiary which now is wholly-owned by the parent publishing company in New York. This would have to include autonomous control of the Time Canada budget.

In addition the magazine would have to expand its five to seven pages of Canadian news every week to at least 65-per-cent Canadian content. In conjunction with this the magazine would have to make major changes in its format to make it distinct from the so-called "American product" in the U.S.

A Time official said the company is ready to accept the first two points in the proposed deal to the extent of making Time Canada Ltd. 75 per-cent Canadian-owned and financially independent of New York.

Weaving Is a Way of Life

An invention to make braid weaving more convenient for his wife Ellie has made Cherry Valley weaver Harvey Nurcombe widely know among weavers in many countries.

Mr. Nurcombe, who along with Ellie and wife has been weaving for a dozen years, tells it like this:

"Ellie wanted an inkle — braid — loom to work on in the evenings, so I made one for her. But it was in the den by the couldn't watch television p- rerand it. So I made a little one. That worked! fine but it was so small that she couldn't weave a very long braid on it. So we constructed this one."

After a little discussion and a few modifications, they had a working loom. Then a weaving friend saw it and wanted one.

From there their popularity mushroomed until the foremost U.S. weaving and spinning magazine — Spindle, Shuttle and Dyepot — described the unique Ellie loom in its new equipment column.

That was last spring and since then, as the Nurcombe's say, "we've heard from every state in the union, as well as several other countries.

Many of the hand-made looms have been sold right in home, too. Bayside Secondary School has recently ordered several and fellow-members of the weaving guild in Belleville use them, too.

In spite of their success, building looms is just a sideline for the Nurcombes. The main interest is and has been weaving since Ellie Nurcombe became fascinated with spinning at Toronto's Black Creek Pioneer village.

"We were looking around and I saw a woman spinning. I found it so fascinating that Harvey finally said 'Maybe I should build a spinning wheel for you. Well, I never let him forget that remark for a minute until he did."

Ellie began taking spinning lessons, spending all her spare time at it — she was a pianomaker; he an offset pressman — until Harvey was driven to join in.

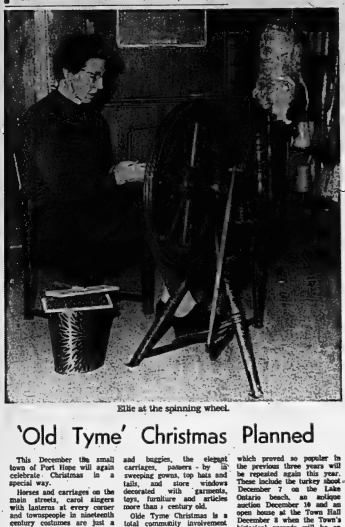
"He just said 'If you're going to sit there spinning all the time, I'm going to learn to weave.'"

Then Ellie learned weaving, too, and, in the end, there were 11 looms in their Tyendinaga home.

Teaching and demonstrations were the natural extension of their craft and when they retired early to their new home in Cherry Valley in 1970, they opened a studio.

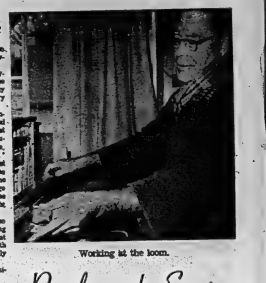
"We've never looked back since," Ellie says.

Besides offering spinning and weaving lessons, the pair weave a vast variety of goods for sale from place mats to lengths of cloth for some newcomers.



Also agents for widely-known LeCarre looms, the Nurcombes welcome many visitors to their studio every day.

"Why one day last summer," Harvey says, "we had that on one page of our guest book we had people from Australia, New Zealand, Alaska, Germany and South America."



Ellie and Harvey work at their looms, and Ellie at the spinning wheel the same time Harvey made 13 years ago — nearly every day in the studio and some days for eight or nine hours at a time.

"Then we go into the house and at 10 o'clock we're sitting there talking about what we've been doing all day. With both of us weaving it's really interesting.

"It's a lot more than a business."

'Old Tyme' Christmas Planned

This December the small town of Port Hope will again celebrate Christmas in a special way.

Horses and carriages on the main streets, carol singers with lanterns at every corner and townspeople in nineteenth century costumes are just a small part of "Olde Tyme" Christmas in Port Hope.

This will be the fourth year that the people of the Lake Ontario Town, 50 miles West of Belleville, have celebrated Christmas in the same style of their forefathers a century or more ago.

They participate in beard growing and wick trimming contests, buy Christmas hand made gifts in a replica of an old fashioned general store and take carriage rides to view the unique mid nineteenth century architecture in the town's main core.

Starting the weekend of December 6 children will delight in seeing the horses and buggies, the elegant carriages, passers - by in sweeping gowns, top hats and tails, and store windows decorated with garments, hats, furniture and articles more than a century old.

Olde Tyme Christmas is a total community involvement festival with local organizations, schools, churches, service clubs and individuals staging a host of theme-related events: from a hockey-took, axe-dust flavored tavern open for three weekends before Christmas to a "Grande Christmas costume ball" in the magnificent setting of Osler Hall at Trinity College School.

The over-all organization of Olde Tyme Christmas, including the setting up of most major events, is in the hands of a committee elected earlier this year at a public meeting.

Joan Fredrickson, chairman of the committee and owner of a downtown hardware store, said many of the events which proved so popular in the previous three years will be repeated again this year. These include the turkey shoot December 7 on the Lake Ontario beach, an antique auction December 10 and an open house at the Town Hall December 8 when the Town's historical records will be on display.

A section of the Town's main street will be closed to motor vehicles on the three Sundays before Christmas, when a number of on-the-street events including a sports day, carol singing and a display by the Upper Canada Riflemen will be held.

College School.

During the three weekends before Christmas, museums, historical displays and an "olde tyme pancake house" will be open to the public.

Antique dealers from the surrounding area will launch the three-week festival with an antique show and sale scheduled for December 6 and 7.

Government Day Care In 'Immediate Demand'

OTTAWA (CP) — About 400,000 children of working mothers need full-time, government-supervised day care—but aren't getting it, a Canadian Council on Social Development report.

Philip Hepworth, council program director, says in the report there were only 88,200 in full-time day care in 1973.

But one-quarter of the 3.4 million children under six had working mothers "so there is an immediate demand for more than 400,000 full-time day care places."

The report reviews what current social services provide. It will be published early this year. A chapter on day-care was published in the November-December issue of Canadian Welfare, a magazine published by the council.

The report says that even if two-thirds of children of working mothers are looked after in their own homes by relatives or others, about 200,000 should get full-time day care, it says.

Of these children, Mr. Hepworth said in an interview, it is "a reasonable guess they are acutely in need of day-care services."

The remaining 400,000 children of working mothers also deserve full-time care, although they may be looked after by relatives at home now, he said.

Only four-and five-year-old children of working parents attend elementary school kindergarten, getting half-day care. But Mr. Hepworth indicated the demand is for full-time day care for these children.

He noted the Royal Commission on the Status of Women concluded in 1970 that governments should provide day care. But evidence suggests an enormous gap between what governments have provided or are willing to support and the actual demand.

Governments should be responsible for day care and pay some of the cost, he said. Employers of parents with children in day care could provide facilities or pay part of the cost of day care.

People and Events

The St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E held a potluck supper meeting at the Riwasis Hall on Tuesday evening. Friends and neighbours were invited to share in the fun, food and fellowship with the members. A Christmas novelty and bake table was well patronized by both guests and members before the supper. Following the meal, Thelma Bailey welcomed the guests and called on the members to introduce them.

One of the guests, Wilhelmina DeBoer, director of Meals on Wheels, was invited to tell of a special project which she has organized for Senior Citizens - a luncheon club on Fridays at Bridge St. church. The St. Julien Chapter voted funds to support this worthwhile project, and several volunteered their services as well. Announcement was made of the Christmas court to be held on December 18 following which St. Julien and Argyll Chapters entertain the New Canadians at the Officers' Mess at the Armouries. The 1975 special I.O.D.E. 75th Anniversary calendars were sold at the conclusion of the evening.

REDEMPTIVILLE WI

Pat Keene was hostess for the November meeting of the Redemptville Women's Institute.

President Edith Cairns called for silence in memory of Bessie Wood, a charter member recently deceased.

Mrs. Cairns thanked the members for their donations to the Cheshire Home auction sale. A cash collection was taken for the Arthritis Society.

Delegates to the recent area convention gave their reports on the two-day event.

Arrangements were made for the pot luck supper to be held December 17, with fried chicken supplied.

Flossie Fulver led a program on citizenship, assisted by several members who spoke about the assets of each province.

The meeting was concluded with a lunch.

Sponsored by the CWL, the booth featured many handcrafted items made by children of the two schools.

Family Fun at Holy Rosary Bazaar

Hundreds of people of every age — seven to seventy — attended the Holy Rosary Church Bazaar Wednesday night in the auditorium of Georges Vanier Separate School.

A family event, the bazaar was convened by Kay Dobec and Jenny Richardson, of the Catholic Women's League.

Many children brought their mothers and fathers along to buy from tables featuring handicraft items made by Holy Rosary and Georges Vanier Separate School students.

In charge of the various tables were children's room, Sonya Biocha. Children's creations, Tina O'Sullivan; lunch and take table, Teresa Hogan; penny sale Dorothy Pope; apparel, Mrs. Joy Bedard; Christmas boutique, Sandra Huffman, Sharon Robbins and Cathy Chapman; candy, Ann Eaton and Jessica Corrigan; handicraft and sewing, Shirley Cain and Mary Flander; home baking Jean Malvihill and Irene Smith; hot dogs, Doris Hogan and Margaret Bissett; and tea room, Doris' Lapinette and Aimee LaGuff.

Waitress Wants Customers To Eat And Run

Dear Ann Landers: I have a message for the public and can think of no better way to get it across than to write to Ann Landers. Be an angel and print it.

I supervise a large number of waitresses. Most of them have families and need to go home after work but they can't leave until you do. So . . .

I am talking to the after-dinner diners. The businessmen who occupy a table from 6:30 or 7:00 until 11:30 at night. They have five cups of coffee after the meal—between cups and papers strewn everywhere. Don't they have offices?

There are the hand-holding smoochers who sit at a table and stare into each other's eyes for two hours after the food is gone. Don't they have homes?

Please, Ann, the waitresses can't leave until the place is cleared out. Will you do us a favor and say something?—

Tongue Tied

Dear Tony: Say what? "Dear Restaurant Diners: Please eat and get the heck out of the place because the help wants to go home!"

Sorry, but when people spend money to dine out they have the right to sit and talk, provided other patrons aren't waiting to be seated. After-dinner visiting, be it business or social, is part of the reason people eat in restaurants instead of at home. I'm not about to help you give them the bum's rush.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column with its enormous circulation was largely responsible for starting an intensive effort to eliminate cancer. About a year ago I wrote to you in the hope that you would get behind another extremely cruel disease. Aging. You didn't print my letter because you probably thought I was some kind of a nut. I do hope you'll print this one.

We've all seen great writers, statesmen and scientists (as well as friends and relatives) decay in mind and body. The tragic waste and misery caused by aging need no longer continue. Like other diseases that have plagued mankind for centuries, aging can be brought under control, but only when we stop accepting it as "inevitable." Much has been learned in recent years about the biological nature of aging, but no effective attack has been launched because there's been no massive effort.

Please, Ann, get behind this campaign. Aging could join the list of such diseases as bubonic plague, TB, smallpox and polio.—R. J. of Chicago

Dear R. J.: There is no doubt that the life span of humans can and will be lengthened. In fact, it's been happening right along. But don't expect some new magic elixir to be developed that will keep people youthful and healthy.

The real "elixirs" are based on (a) what we inherit from our parents and (b) how we take care of ourselves. We see friends worried sick eating, drinking and smoking themselves to death. There's a way to keep these people alive, much less youthful.

Dear Ann: I have a two-part letter with a friend. If I win one part he pays me $10, if I win the other part I pay him. It seems as sure of himself, I'm uneasy. The questions are these: (1) Can a fish drown? (2) Is a 25-rifle mate? I say yes to the first and no to the second. How about it?—Needles and Pins

Dear N. and P.: You win $25! And if you don't know what to do with the money, give it to your local chapter of The American Cancer Society. The need is great.

Positive Thinking Helps

One of the things which distinguishes human intelligence from that of the lower animals is man's ability to make judgements and to exercise choice. And as one snoots up with one shoulder or another which requires intelligent judgement, he becomes smarter and more aware of just how important it is to have freedom to choose.

Sometimes decisions about small things can make all the difference. Make many small decisions wisely, and a pattern emerges which may well determine the happiness or misery of your life.

This is where positive thinking comes in. Let your decision be the one that serves a positive purpose. The well-being of those you care about or your own peace of mind and honesty. Choose quality rather than quantity. And don't let prejudice hinder happiness.

Dear Doris: I'm 15 years old. I think that is a hard age for both parents and child. What I want to say is that I feel out of. Friday is my only night out.

What I can't understand is I always have to be home around 11 p.m. My friends go home around 12 p.m. No matter where I go, it's "Why did you go there?" or "Who else was there?" Doris, if I go out I tell her where, with whom.

She says I'm old enough to know right from wrong, and so do. Through no experience, I smoke the odd time and she disapproves. What can I do for a bit more freedom?

Help.

Dear Help: You won't always be just 15, and however slow things seem right now, time will change them. Meanwhile, you need more communication with your parents.

If you can preserve all the rules, your parents will appreciate good behavior and will give you grounds for asking for a little more leeway on Friday nights.

As for smoking right now you can take a big step in having a healthy and long life, by choosing not to form a habit before it gets a hold on you. More and more doctors are telling us the very bad things cigarette smoke does to health, as well, and to a general feeling of well-being.

Have you been reading my column lately? Cigarettes are definitely threats to health and the term "coffin nails" is highly accurate in describing them.

Dear Doris: Could you tell me a few exercises that might help to firm up my breasts? I am 25 years old and always have very soft, pendulous breasts. They are small and need shaping up.

Concerned About Figure.

Dear Concerned: Exercises don't help the bust much because there are hardly any muscles in the breast. Sometimes, though, it is helpful to do exercises that improve the posture, thus pulling up the bust.

(What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris Clark in this newspaper is the first step towards solving your problem.)

For Christmas:

How About a Mouse Ranch?

DALLAS, Tex. (CP) — Would you consider giving a mouse ranch for Christmas that he can stock himself? It's not a gag. It's one of the almost-incredible Christmas suggestions from the famed Neiman Marcus store here.

Every year people who can't ahead this specialty store wait with preverbital bated breath for the NM Christmas catalogue. It serves as a kind of Bible for many shoppers.

This year it's Hix and Her's Hereford-sort of step-on to a hovercraft. It's a pleasure craft on a cushion of air six to eight inches off the ground or water. Assembled, customized and unhostered, it's a $3,600 Christmas gift.

But the store does stock serious Christmas gifts too. A year-round popular item is the chiffon handkerchief (price $4), arranged as a nosegay ($5) or rolled to form an umbrella with handle ($5).

For men there's an $1, 200 cahan made of chainmesh, the finest mesh ever made. Jewels flare in the world, from the first goat in Kashmir. One goat yields only about 12 ounces a year.

There's a sterling silver section with $5 gifts of pill boxes, roller skate key, comb, clasp and even a toothpick. And at the other end of the watch for $60,000. It's all diamonds.

And all the years in the book Minding the Store, written by Stanley Marcus, is how he tells how his father, Herbert, his Aunt Carrie and brother Edward started.

In 1905 they opened a sales promotion business, a new idea at the time. It was so successful that in four years they had two offers to buy. One was for $75,000 which they took. Financially they should have accepted the second.

As Stanley Marcus says: "We have sometimes said that Neiman Marcus was founded on bad business judgment." The other offer was a franchise for a new bottled soft drink called Coca-Cola.

Housewife Takes Over Business

EDMONTON (CP) — "Margaret Zeidler says her job as president of W. R. Zeidler Ltd., a small-million-dollar corporation which this year marks its 40th anniversary in business in Western Canada, is to "give direction."

Zeidler, who became president of the forest products company following the death of her husband in December, 1973.

She said in an interview it's a complicated business, but she doesn't feel it's her job to know every facet of the operation, which now involves veneer plants and sawmills at McBride, B.C., and Slave Lake, Alta., and plywood, mill work and aluminum manufacturing plants in Edmonton.

"There are top-notch people in charge of the various divisions and I have no intention of making my managers' business mine. My job is to give the firm a sense of direction and to ensure the policies established by my husband are continued."

Included in the policies is the philosophy that business "can't be bought but must be earned" through hard-fought work and consistently good service and that the welfare of the firm's 500-odd employees is always a main concern of management.

"This is a family business," Mrs. Zeidler said, "and there's always been a special feeling among the people working here. When my husband died, there was some fear the company would be sold, but employees now have the assurance the company will go on as it has and I will back them 100 per cent."

Mrs. Zeidler said it's important that the boss be accessible at all times.

"My door is always open to those who work here, but I don't try to solve the problems myself. I make sure they're channeled to the proper person."

The step from a suburban homemaker to head of a firm deeply rooted in the traditionally male world of forestry, manufacturing and construction was not as great as some might think.

Mrs. Zeidler was always interested in the business to some extent.

"I stayed in the background but I was always there; and over the years I learned a great deal about the business and the people involved."

For several years she managed a family venture—Tekarra Lodge at Jasper, Alta.

"I did all the buying, hiring and training and I proved to myself that I could run it well and at a profit." The lodge was eventually sold.

Mrs. Zeidler still believes the best place for a woman with young children is at home, although this doesn't necessarily imply a wife should lack interest in the business world.

"Most women simply don't have the stamina to run a home and cope with a career. However, when children are grown, the opportunities for women in the business world are excellent.

"Everything is out there for you and you can reach out and take it if you're willing to work and listen and be constructive."

An Evening Of Enjoyment

I had a chance this week to enjoy the new entertainment format at the Four Seasons — from 5 'til 7, the restful, cozy Islander atmosphere is filled with the delightful, sophisticated sounds of the nationally-renown Bill Slater Trio. It was a great evening, with an elegant dinner in the Terrace Dining Room to follow. Entertainment citizen: You know we are so lucky to have all of these talents in our area, aren't we? How about a Christmas trek to the Four Seasons, for someone special in your life?

Music For Christmas

Beatly's on the Market Square, includes a music centre in its establishment as well as providing carpet, furniture and appliances. Whether you're looking for your favorite music recorded from instruments of all sorts to organs and pianos. Christmas is a wonderful time of year to remember giving as a musical gift in a gray way to keep the feeling of family closeness going all around the whole year. Go and see the selection at Beatly's. Maybe they'll all join in and sing a Christmas carol for you.

A Present That's Really One

I'm a working mother and many of you are. We all love Carlot, man, but I'm sometimes already wondering how I'm going to get the extra time and energy to handle Christmas, preparations, and the holiday season. So a Christmas present of having the expert staff from ServiceMaster come and clean my house is a thoughtful gift I wouldn't forego. It's practical, for sure, but a very joyous prospect to know carpets, floors, walls, and windows would be already for Christmas entertaining — and for Santa himself. Hey, Santa's little helpers . . . here's that ServiceMaster number 967-1672.

A Delight At A Price

Pal Harris at the Drift-Inn on Hwy. 33 near Consecon tells me seven of her staff have been getting around — and so is news about her more than reasonable price. For instance Wednesday night is Steak Night at the Spinn for dinner starting at only $3.75. The Squire Room's dining hours are 3 to 9 p.m. every day. The number to call for reservations is 392-2151. You don't always need reservations during the week days, but they're a good idea on the weekends. Friend is a friend to a pre-Christmas present and the good food and warm hospitality of the Drift-Inn.

Keeping Away The Fog

Mira-Kleen is an anti-fogging cleaner which you can obtain at Truscan Optical, 52 Bridge St. The product doesn't completely eliminate fogging but it certainly helps. Try it on the bathroom mirror before taking a steaming bath or shower and see how it works there. Treating-Optical suggests, however, that if you buy plastic lenses or "crystal" lenses as they're sometimes called, you will have less of a fogging-up problem. Plastic lenses are always on the weekend. Truscan Optical specialist in many ways as you'll see when you visit them. You don't need an appointment, remember.

The Lessons Of Experience

Here's some more good notes from our Front St. sage Murray Atkinson of Murray's Men's Wear. Murray reasons: If you judge a good highway eating place by the number of trucks stopped out in front of it, and if you judge a good car dealer by the fact that Mechanics buy their cars from him, doesn't it make sense to judge a good food store by its number of experienced shoppers? And I bet they're no food store in the area which can boast the number of senior citizen shoppers that Murrays can. So go with experience and shop where the experience shops — Murrays.

Bid to Change CMHC Name Is Talked Out

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons talked out Thursday a Liberal member's private bill that would have changed the name of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. to Habitat Canada.

The bill, proposed by Jim Fleming (York East), was intended to give the corporation a shorter name that would be the same in both official languages.

Conservative and New Democratic Party members gave it a rough time.

Said John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview): "I've never in my nine years here seen such a waste of debating time."

Finance Ministers to Study Division of Resource Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial finance ministers meet here Monday and the question of how to split up resource tax revenue is expected to be the dominant issue at the two-day session.

Finance ministers have met annually for many years and one purpose is to attempt to coordinate policies.

This year the resource tax policy issue is a thorny one because it affects federal-provincial financial arrangements. Taxes on oil from Alberta and Saskatchewan are the focus of the dispute and agreements on oil taxes may set a pattern for other resource taxes.

Provincial mines ministers are here today for a meeting with the federal minister, Donald Macdonald, and the finance ministers on Friday. This week is part of a continuing effort to work out a deal. The premiers are to meet with the prime minister in January.

The federal government and governments in the oil-producing provinces have increased their takes from oil profits as world oil prices have gone up sharply.

The provinces have increased taxes on oil and the federal government has stopped allowing companies to deduct royalties as an expense, resulting in an increase in the federal tax take.

The pipeline system distributing western crude oil extends to refineries in Toronto and surplus Canadian production is exported to the United States. East Coast refineries use imported crude oil.

An agreement between the premiers and the prime minister earlier this year established a two-price system for oil, resulting in cheaper prices for the domestic market.

There is an export tax on sales to the U.S. and most of this money is used to subsidize eastern refineries, which must buy costlier imported crude oil, and hold down product prices to consumers.

The tax take from oil has by no means been in how much the federal government pays to the no-called harvest provinces. The federal government is concentrated to provide extra revenue to those provinces where revenue per person from various tax sources is below the national average. These equalization payments are made to seven provincial governments.

Canadian Economy Amongst Strongest

TORONTO (CP) — Despite some weak spots, the Canadian economy "will be one of the strongest in the industrialized world in 1975, a group of experts told a business outlook seminar Thursday.

T. A. Wilson, director of the Institute of Policy Analysis of Toronto, said the federal government's expansionary fiscal policy will give a substantial boost to consumer spending and keep the economy on a healthy track.

Indexing of social welfare payments and personal income tax plus the recent massive cuts in personal income tax will provide between $5.5 and $5.5 billion dollars in disposable income next year.

Inflation, he said, "remains the only fly in the ointment."

Estimating inflation will run around 10.5 per cent next year, he said it is the most serious aspect of the economy.

Mr. Wilson was the first speaker at a one-day business outlook seminar for 1975 sponsored by the University of Toronto.

John A. Pollock, president of Electrolume Ltd., said secondary manufacturing will experience the first decline in many years.

"We will, during the first six months, go through a period of major adjustment with many firms being forced to undergo significant cut-backs in all expense and cost areas," he said.

Donald Wood, executive of department stores for the Hudson's Bay Co. Ltd., said rising costs, a slowdown of economic growth and heavier financing cost for inflated capital expenditures will put heavy pressure on profits in the retailing sector.

However, he offered some encouragement for prospects after the middle of 1975.

—Disposable income will expend while inflation eases somewhat.

—New home construction will rebound as demand picks up in 1975.

—Reduced store expansion in 1975 will give retailers a chance to improve the productivity of current space.

—The overall economic situation in North America is expected to improve in late 1975.

Henry De Puyjalon, president of the Canadian Construction Association, said outlays in the construction industry will be marginal, considering the effects of inflation.

Construction would "concentrate on industrialized work rather than housing and urban development, which has been emphasized during the past three years.

B. C. Gibbs, group vice president of Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd., said the forest products industry has a mixed outlook for the coming year.

The lumber and wood segment is in a depressed state and losses are occurring in most operations. The fine paper and miscellaneous paper segment will have modestly lower performance.

Newsprint and pulp and paper segments will retain their strength, he said.

No Pipeline Decision Scheduled This Week

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday no announcement will be made this week on proposals for constructing an oil pipeline to Montreal.

Earlier in the week, the minister said he had made recommendations to the cabinet and hoped they would be considered at the regular weekly cabinet meeting.

But as he emerged from the session Thursday he said he would have no comment on the project, later adding "there will be no announcement this week."

Interprovincial Pipelines Ltd. of Toronto applied to the National Energy Board last spring for permission to build a 500-mile extension to its pipeline, to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont.

But the company told a hearing this fall it might not be able to go ahead with the pipeline without financial aid from Ottawa.

Reason for their reluctance, Interprovincial officials say, is the dwindling reserves of Canadian crude oil which might mean there will not be enough oil in future to keep the line operating at full capacity of 250,000 barrels a day.

Mr. Macdonald said the federal government remains committed to construction of the line and still hopes it will be completed by late 1976.

McKeough Defends New Energy Body

TORONTO (CP) — Energy Minister Darcy McKeough defended the government's new Ontario Energy Corp. Thursday as legislation establishing the provincial Crown agency received second reading Thursday.

Mr. McKeough said the corporation will concentrate on development of natural gas supplies, but will deal with a full range of fuels from coal and oil to nuclear and geo-thermal.

The bill received approval in principle and is assured passage, but opposition members questioned provincial expenditure on a new agency at a time when current energy resources are facing difficulties.

Ted Bounsall (NDP—Windsor West) said he is concerned about the accountability of a body that will be composed mainly of businessmen and will be responsible directly to the minister, without reporting directly to the legislature.

Mr. McKeough said the new corporation will have full accountability and will assure good investment for Ontario's energy needs.

Education Beat

New Blood Good for Board

BY LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The suspense is over, and rainsayers of the Quinte district know who their trustees will be for the coming two years.

The public school board will have the largest influx of new school since the 1969-72 term. Seven people new to trusteeship will have a hand on the ropes in the new year.

They have a hard act to follow. The trustees who stepped down played a major part in making the Hastings county board of education one of the best. The newcomers' job will be to maintain that standard.

As we've remarked before, the 30s were a big campaign issue. It's a safe one — like motherhood. Few people are against it, but as a campaign slogan it is largely meaningless.

The real issue sounds like a cliche: providing quality education under increasingly difficult circumstances. As one trustee said privately, "The honeymoon is over. Things are going to get more and more difficult."

With inflation eating away at meagre budget increases, trustees are going to be faced with politically unpopular decisions — program supply and services cuts to meet the salary demands. The salary cut of any school board budget is fixed by negotiation, and takes the lion's share (75 per cent or more).

No organization can afford to lose men like James Clarke, Mac Smith and Ralph Weaver. All three dropped out of school board politics this year.

Mr. Clarke, first chairman of the county board, melded the diverse elements of several individual boards into a harmonious working organization. It's a feat many Ontario boards haven't achieved yet, and education under their jurisdiction suffers from trustee dissent.

Mr. Smith, a man of stature on the provincial level as well as in Hastings county, has combined wisdom and balance in fostering good relationships between trustees and staff. As well he performed his duties here on an almost full-time basis, he travelled across the province to give the hailing board his accurated relations in other areas.

Mr. Weaver, able and hard-working chairman of many board committees, always was available for low-keyed and intelligent leadership in crucial issues.

The coming two years may see women come into their own as the county board. Their number has increased from two to three with the election of Elaine Neve.

The two incumbents, Miriam Graham in Belleville and Jean Harrison in Trenton, led the polls in their municipalities. Both these women have taken leadership roles on the board in the six years of its existence. Both are knowledgeable, able and will stand by their well-considered opinions. Newcomer Mrs. Neve looks like another of the same kind. The women have entered a chance at the chairmanship.

SIU History Marked With Violence and Political Dealing

OTTAWA (CP) — The latest uproar involving the morals of the Seafarers' International Union is just another chapter for a hard-knocked waterfront labor organization that has violently run the Canadian scene in the late 1940s under the guise of good guys.

The U.S.-based SIU was united by the Great Lakes ship owners, with the acquiescence of the Liberal government of Louis St. Laurent, to smash the old Canadian Seamen's Union, called Communist-dominated by the Canada Labor Relations Board.

The CSU with about 300 members had created chaos on the Great Lakes in bitter headknocking with a splinter group.

What happened to the SIU thing like letting the fox into the hen-house.

The SIU under the leadership of the notorious Hal C. Banks quickly destroyed the CSU, dwelling to about 13,000 members by 1963 and to a power that far outpaced that of the union it had crushed.

Great Lakes waterfront terror tactics had generated a federal inquiry that found Banks "ruthless, lawless, cruel, dishonest, a power-hungry tyrant."

Relations between Canada and the U.S. were nearly strained over the SIU and the all-Canadian union formed to defeat Banks and the SIU.

Relations between the Canadian Labor Congress and its U.S. counterpart, the AFL-CIO, never did recover. The CLC had long kicked the SIU out in 1960.

Great Lakes shipping was in as bad shape as it had been under the CSU, with ship bombings, strikes, beatings and disruption.

The federal inquiry produced legislation clapping the SIU and three maritimes unions under federal trusteeship.

In 1964, Banks, who had brought a Communist to power in Canada was convicted of conspiracy in a Manhattan court and jumped bail to the U.S.

There, he quit the SIU to set up a cruise-boat operation in California. Now 64, he still is there.

But the U.S. state department in 1965 declined the Canadian bid for extradition. It was later known that the SIU had contributed $200,000 or more to the Democratic party in the presidential elections that year.

Dr. Morton Shulman, the New Democratic Party gadfly of the Ontario legislature, has revived the SIU interest by saying the union today is a corrupt, terror-filled outfit still.

The SIU, like other unions, makes political contributions.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, Labor Minister John Munro, Immigration Minister Robert Andras, Health Minister Marc Lalonde and two Progressive Conservative MPs—Michael Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East) and Robert Hanis—are among those who received funds from the SIU during last summer's federal election campaign.

Mr. Munro returned in September the $500 sent him in June during the campaign for the July 8 vote. The others all kept their donations.

Mr. Allmand received massive help from the SIU briefly during his 1972 campaign and received $500 from them in 1974. He has said he accepted the contributions because there had been no suggestions of wrongdoing by union officials in recent years and he would not return the money.

But the 1972 election came just six months after two union members, Peter Nearhood and Donald McFarlane, swore in affidavits that they were beaten and kicked at the SIU Montreal headquarters while other members simply stood around.

Others connected with a union reform movement also said they were punched and threatened.

In 1971, a candidate for vice-president of the union, Francois de la Chevrotiere, alleged that he was attacked by 12 or 14 men, including present SIU president Roman Gralewicz.

Mr. Chevrotiere wrote to then-labor minister Martin O'Connell complaining of the attack and asking the labor department to investigate the union. The request was turned down.

Dr. Shulman has said Mr. Gralewicz told police officers that he had a senior federal cabinet minister in his pocket."

In 1971, elections were held in the union and Leonard (Red) McLaughlin, Banks' former executive vice-president, took the presidency by 37 votes.

The 1971 campaign was punctuated by violence and Dr. Shulman says the election results usually won by William Glasgow.

Mr. McLaughlin's opponent.

Mr. Glasgow was with Mr. de la Chevrotiere when the vice-presidential candidate was allegedly beaten.

Last year, Mr. McLaughlin, who was appointed as a representative to the International Labor Organization, was succeeded by Mr Gralewicz.

The SIU negotiated a new contract last spring with the Canadian Lake Carriers' Association after Mr. Munro personally intervened in the dispute.

But the agreement, termed by Mr. Gralewicz the best ever for the union, was opposed by a substantial minority of SIU members.

Dr. Shulman charges that some of the directors became targets of attacks by the union executive.

Most Council Candidates Spent Under $500 Seeking City Seat

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The response ranged from total hardmindedness to complete candor in an election expenses survey of city council candidates this week following Monday's municipal election.

Only two candidates were not interviewed: Ken Little, who was unavailable for comment Thursday, and George Casey, who could not be reached by telephone.

Out of the other 20 candidates, two vowed to make public their expenses in detail for the record, even though they are not required to in municipal elections under provincial law.

The two are defeated hopefuls Ray Michel and Clarence Young, who both stated they will do so "as a matter of principle."

Mr. Michel's campaign cost him between $200-$250, he said, with the greatest amount, $125 in newspaper advertisements. The remainder went into brochures and litter, he added.

"I will be filing an audited expense claim with the clerk on a point of principle," announced Mr. Michel. "I feel it should be done for any election, municipal, provincial or federal."

Mr. Young said he will publish details of his approximate $400 expenses, plus their sources, in a newspaper advertisement. The majority of his total, $194.39 went into buttons.

On the other side of the coin last-place finisher Roy Hebbert flatly stated: "I'm not prepared to say that at the present moment."

In addition, successful candidate Jack Ireland said he did not know his amount offhand, but doubted if he would release the information if he knew. However, he admitted the majority of his expense was in radio and newspaper advertising.

Among the other candidates, their expenses varied from a near $500 to just a few bucks.

Phil Soverman was the economist on the list at $174. "I bought some buttons and some white tape and I wrote my name on the tape," covered over the buttons with the tape, and gave them to some friends," he said.

The highest was Ste."Bocko at $477 most into radio and newspapers.

Two candidates had their expenses figured out to the penny — Carson McCausland with $521.30 and Andre Mercier who spent $94.28.

Just one candidate had no idea of his expense, as his bills were not in yet, and that was Frank Seemungal. But he noted he had 10,000 flyers printed for distribution.

The amount spent on a campaign had little to do with the final outcome. Ben Corke said he spent and ended up topping the polls, while Bill Sills said he noted he spent up to $200, finished 13th.

All of the above totals are approximate, as most candidates said they had not received all of their bills when the survey was undertaken.

As for the election's cost to the taxpayers, city clerk Earl Dafoe said no final figure is yet tabulated, but the budget estimate is about $13,000. He said the city hopes to stay within the budget.

The municipal expense includes advertising, preparation of the electors' list, printing of ballots, hiring of polling officials and cost of material for them, and the rental of polling locations.

Latest Industrial Park Ready By Spring: Bemis

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The final stage of Belleville's northwest industrial park will be opened up this spring and is expected to be completely sold within two years of completion, it was learned Thursday.

Fred Bemis, the city's industrial commissioner explained the final segment as a cul de sac — the completion being placed on sites for small business.

A carbon copy development, directly opposite on Bell Blvd., was completely sold before the work of servicing and lot layout was completed early last year.

Seven firms were accommodated in that development and it is believed a similar number will locate across the road.

The cul ed sac will open up approximately 23 acres for industrial use — the final acreage available in the city's northwest park.

"There is an excellent chance that the land will be completely sold within two years of completion," said Mr. Bemis.

We strive to make the industrial parks "a nice place to be," said Mr. Bemis, both for the company and the employee.

"It's encourage compatible business in the area, control of aesthetics and maintenance of a park-like surrounding". The new cul de sac will stretch some 700 feet south of Bell Blvd.

Purchase and subsequent water and sewer servicing of the land will be borne by the city taxpayer initially but will be "completely" returned during the sale of the land to the company, said the industrial commissioner.

During the next two or three years work will also begin on development of 180 acres in the city's north east industrial park — land that is already being viewed by some prospects, Mr Bemis said.

UIC Return to City Speeds Local Claims

Local processing of unemployment insurance claims returned to the Belleville area last December.

Today, Vaughan Storey, Unemployment Insurance Commission district manager, says the decentralizing move has proved a correct decision.

The service was sliced off the UIC's regional administration centre in Kingston and opened in Belleville Dec. 17.

Now, a year — and thousands of processed claims later — Mr. Storey still is emphasizing the official philosophy with which he introduced the localized operation to Hastings and Prince Edward Counties: "We're available — we're here to create a personal service to the public."

It's major accomplishment has been the reduction of a communication gap between the department and the Quinte public, he says.

For years, under the old National Employment Service, claims and problems of local workers seeking insurance benefits were handled in Belleville. With re-organization of federal manpower, the claims office was moved and incorporated into the Kingston regional UIC complex.

The decision to shift back to Belleville has smoothed the wrinkles, indicates Mr. Storey.

The claims flow runs around 250 a week in summer months. In winter it may more than double — depending on local layoffs patterns, says Mr. Storey.

New Insulin Offered

Area diabetics and medical people were briefed on the new 100-unit insulin and syringes, introduced by Connaught Laboratories in April, during a special program at Loyalist College, Thursday.

The new 100-unit insulin will eventually take the place of the 40 and 80 units, which are being phased out.

Reason for the change is to avoid serious errors in insulin dosage, which can be overcome by having fewer concentrations available in one strength.

A report by Dr. R. G. Romans, a director with Connaught's insulin division in Toronto, states, "the use of the 100-unit materials will require the injection of smaller quantities by the patient. This should be an advantage and should cause less discomfort at the site of the injection."

Dr. Romans adds Connaught is modifying "Insulin-Toronto" in the 100-unit strength. "We are changing the acidity of this solution and making it the same acidity as the body fluids."

Loyalist Film Nears Completion

Loyalist College Board of Governors met Thursday, dispensing with several items, including a proposed formation of an alumni association.

Art McFarlane, director of student services reported the "mechanical end" of forming an alumni association is under way at present, as the department seeks addresses of graduates as a prelude toward first meeting.

He said he should have further results at the next board meeting in January.

Reg Loader, management committee chairman, announced a proposed contract to develop a crest for the college, which is hoped to be under way by January

In addition, the committee asked the college administration to investigate the registration of college logo, he said.

Mrs. Gordon Fraser told the board a new college film is currently being edited with music dubbed in. She said television stations in Kingston, Ottawa and Peterborough have requested copies of the film.

The mid-winter student break has been set for Dec. 24-28, except for certain programs which must carry on, said college president Herb Young.

He added any faculty members not involved in activities at that time may also enjoy the break.

The college open house has been accomodation here.

and it was divulged there is about a 30-40 per cent enrollment increase in the extension courses

Next board meeting will be held Jan. 2 at 8 p.m., where the elections for chairman and vice-chairman, and appointments of committees for 1975 will take place.

Mixed Classroom Termed Success

An experiment in integrating handicapped and normal children came to a successful conclusion Thursday at Our Lady of Fatima School.

A class of seven multi-handicapped students from OSD visited a Grade 4 and 5 class at the separate school, and everyone had a great time.

- "I was afraid they wouldn't mingle at all," said Our Lady of Fatima teacher Mike Coughlin. "But the two groups blend each other's activities and our children were disappointed when the others left."

The visit was planned by Mr. Coughlin and OSD teacher John Doran. Mr. Doran accompanied the deaf children and acted as interpreter.

"It's not often the handicapped have an opportunity to visit an ordinary classroom and mix with normal children," said Mr. Coughlin.

The 10-and-11-year-olds from Our Lady of Fatima were prepared for the visit in advance, and many learned how to fingerspell their own names and a few phrases. They have been invited to OSD after Christmas to join their new friends in their classroom.

Life-saving Citizens

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie today said speedy citizen action "saved the life" of Marmora resident Timothy Augar, 21. Mr. Augar drove his car off the end of Belleville's government dock Thursday and later had to be treated for frostbite and shock. He was released Thursday evening. "Citizen support saved his life," said the chief. Police and local residents worked to haul Mr. Auger and his station wagon from the water.

Remembering the Past

John Donelan (right), retiring veteran member of the Loyalist College board of governors, and board chairman, Wm. Whitmore, reminisce over past board achievements at the college while they study an aerial photograph of the campus. Mr. Donelan officially retired Thursday after seven years service as the Napanee represe ntative.

Donelan Steps Down After Seven Year Career

One of the founding members of the Loyalist College Board of Governors resigned Thursday amid praise from fellow board members and college officials.

John Donelan, the Napanee representative stepped down after seven years of service, which included two years as board chairman and three years as vice-chairman.

Mr. Donelan attended his first meeting in 1967 in Peterborough when the setup was a joint board between Sir Sandford Fleming and Loyalist. One year later, the two boards split to better accommodate the increasing responsibilities.

He is also a former executive member of the Association of Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology of Ontario and for the past year held a liason post between area county school boards and the college's extension division.

"The liason system is going to profit both the secondary schools and the college," commented Mr. Donelan. He said he is happy to have had a role "in a very exciting part of education."

He noted the concern board members have for the college, even though their service is voluntary and there are no honorariums. "Everyone who is appointed to the board takes it as a personal thing," he remarked.

Mr. Donelan joins J.A. Cleminson, representative of Prince Edward County, as a retiring member. Mr. Cleminson has completed his two-year term and has asked the county not to reappoint him.

Opponents Reject Chief's Statement

TYENDINAGA — Chief William Brant has been accused of trying to take "the heat" off himself by involving a former chief in the current dispute on this Mohawk reserve.

The charge came from the group which is opposed to the reserve's elected council and is fighting operation of an industrial corporation here.

This week Chief Brant produced a resolution from reserve records showing a council request was made in 1973 to form an industrial corporation.

The resolution was signed by then Chief Earl Hill, now associated with the Mohawk protest movement.

Today's statement said Chief Brant's release of the resolution to the press was an attempt to divide those fighting the present industrial corporation on the reserve.

It also was aimed at giving credibility to the company now operating here, said the formal statement from the opposing Mohawks.

The statement said Chief Brant realizes a majority are opposed to corporate structure and is aware he is "in trouble".

As a result, he now "wants to implicate ex-chief Earl Hill in an attempt to take some of the heat off himself."

The statement then said Chief Hill would have been president of the corporation was "an absolute untruth and without evidence."

The corporation proposed in 1973 was to be located in Deseronto — off the reserve. When it moved here the corporate structure was to be dissolved, said the statement.

"But the move never went through.

The 1973 resolution was introduced by Chief Brant, — then a councillor.

The group accused Chief Brant of blowing "all out of proportion" the 1973 council's association with corporate structure.

Math Workshop

ECI math teachers held a workshop Thursday for the elementary school teachers in their associate school group to introduce a new mathematical instrument. Called a Mira, the plastic instrument acts as a mirror. "You can do anything with it that you can do with a ruler and compass, except draw a circle," say teachers Dawn Hider and Dave Handley, seen demonstrating the instrument.

Housing Costs Up

Lower Interest Won't Help: Realtor

Mortgage rates won't drop substantially in the coming year and for the non per cent relaxation that might come, "it's no reg worth waiting for," says Gerry Joyce, president of the Quinte and District Real Estate Board.

In recent weeks Canadian economists and lending institutions have hinted at the possibility of declining rates by the spring.

Waiting for a number of possibilities to happen is the root of the real estate market's problem, said Mr. Joyce.

"Buyers are waiting for a bargain that-isn't coming," he said.

He said during the time it takes for interest rates to drop, inflation in the housing construction industry will consume any interest rate saving.

According to figures released by the real estate board, a $20,000 mortgage at a current rate of 11.5 per cent and amortized over 25 years carries for a monthly charge of $206.

By the time the interest rate drops to 10.5, cost of the house will be inflated drawing the necessary mortgage to $22,000 which will require a monthly payment of $208. The conclusion drawn by Mr. Joyce is that by waiting for a one per cent decrease in interest rates, the buyer pays about $2 more a month for the same purchase.

The multiple listing service, "the barometer of the business," shows 40 listings in January and 31 sales. This October, 134 listings were received and only 44 sales completed.

The early portion of 1974 bristled with real estate activity with the board's membership climbing by more than 30 per cent.

Now, the board is projecting at least a 10 per cent decrease in sales force in the coming year.

Bob Marcotte, president of the Quinte Home Builders Association, agrees with Mr. Joyce and said, "buy now, you'll never buy for less. The wait for lower interest rates will be destroyed by inflation."

Mr. Joyce said it is not a matter of the money not being available.

"There's money around," he said. "People are working if away in guaranteed investment certificates ... bidding themselves that they'll get a bargain in lower interest rates."

House retail figures produced by Mr. Marcotte show a house that cost $27,000 in 1972 now cuts $41,500. In the same period interest rates have gone from nine to 12.5 per cent.

Canadiens Ship Winger to Blues

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens announced Thursday they have sent veteran right winger Claude Larose to St. Louis Blues in a National Hockey League deal for cash and future considerations.

The Canadiens did not elaborate.

Larose, used sparingly this year, played for the Canadiens for the last three years after spending two seasons with Minnesota North Stars, which obtained him from Montreal in June, 1968.

A native of Hearst, Ont., Larose scored one goal and had two assists in eight games this season.

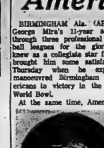
Mira Gets Job Done

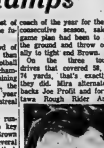
Gotta's Birmingham Americans Champs

BIRMINGHAM Ala. (AP) — George Mira's 11-year search through three professional football leagues for the glory he knew as a collegiate star finally brought him some satisfaction Thursday when he expertly maneuvered Birmingham Americans to victory in the first World Bowl.



At the same time, American Football Association coach of the year for the second consecutive season, said their game plan had been to stay on the ground and throw occasionally to tight end Brown.

On the three touchdown drives that covered 51, 68 and 74 yards, that's exactly what they did. Mira alternated halfbacks Joe Profil and former Oilers Rough Rider Art Carlisle, who scored a touchdown apiece, and also called on former National Football League runners Paul Robinson and Charlie Harraway.



There were two key passes, both to Brown. One kept the first drive alive and the other covered 26 yards and accounted for the third Birmingham touchdown.

But the margin of victory turned out to be a 75-yard run by rookie Matthew Reed, who bulled his way across the goal line on the only successful second-down play of the night.

Mira and Gotta, who earlier this year was named the CFL's coach Jack Gotta won his second league title in as many years. He directed Ottawa Rough Riders to the Grey Cup title in the Canadian Football League last season.

GEORGE MIRA

JACK GOTTA

And the World Football League, whose incredible financial problems could conceivably force it to fold without ever playing a second season, at least closed its first one on a brief note of respectability.

Historians might even note that Birmingham's 22-21 victory over Florida Blazers, whose furious fourth-quarter comeback fell just short, was the league's last game.

Grant Baffles Bruins As Wings Pull Upset

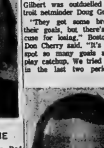
BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

When a National Hockey League team is outshot by nearly a 3-1 margin and still manages to win, it's difficult for the coach to take credit for the victory.

"I'd like to say it was my game plan, but it wasn't," Detroit coach Alex Delvecchio said after the Red Wings, who had won only two of 11 previous starts, piled up a 4-0 lead and then went on to hand the Bruins only their second home loss in 13 games this season.

Marcel Dionne scored three goals and rookie Earl Anderson had two in leading the Red Wings. Dionne's third goal came with just 1:18 to play after Boston had closed the within 5-4.

The Bruins outshot the Wings 43-22, but Boston goalie Gilles Gilbert was outbodied by Detroit netminder Doug Grant.



"They got some breaks on their goals, but there's no excuse for losing," Boston coach Don Cherry said. "It's tough to score so many goals and then play catchup. We tried like hell in the last two periods, but couldn't do it."

"Her guy (Grant) played one helluva game," Delvecchio said. "He made some big saves early in the game and that started us off. The guys at the other end (Gilbert) had his problems."

Buffalo's Gilbert Perreault took over the league's scoring lead when he scored three goals and one assist in leading the Sabres to their 10th consecutive decision over the Bruins.

Perreault now has 19 goals and 27 points, putting him one point ahead of Boston's Bobby Orr who has 18 goals and 30 assists. Orr's record chipped in with a goal and four assists for the Sabres who outshot Washington 45-16 before a Buffalo crowd of 15,349.

Paul Nicholson scored his two NHL goals to provide all the Washington scoring.

Whalers' Abrahamsson Finally Gets a Rest

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

After five periods of hockey in which he faced 66 shots, goalie Chris Abrahamsson, who hails for the Scandinavian Association New England Whalers, had almost single-handedly carried the club to a 2-1 win over Cleveland Crusaders Wednesday night when the Whalers were stalled 44-27.

At Quebec City Thursday night, the high-powered Whalers, playing their 13, straight game on the road, were outshot 29-14 and outscored 8-1 in the first two periods before coach Don Ryan gave Abrahamsson a rest and put Ted Oulmet in the nets for the last period.

The Nordiques added another three goals to finish with a 9-1 win in the Canadian Division leaders and wound up outshooting the Whalers 58-36.

In other WHA games Thursday, Michigan fans delighted a crowd of 1,620 at Detroit with a 5-3 win over San Diego Mariners while Houston Cougars defeated Indianapolis Racers 5-3.

Abrahamsson her had plenty of work for the Whalers recently with goalie Al Smith among the injured.

After a minor incident when Whalers defenseman Jim Dorey engaged in a brief scuffle with Gary Veneruzzo, Abrahamsson scored the first goal midway in the first period.

After that, it was all Quebec with Real Cloutier and Serge Bernier leading the Nordiques with two goals each.

At Detroit, the Stags rose their second game in a row for the first time this season, rallying for three second-period goals to overcome a 3-1 San Diego lead.

Wayne Rivers scored twice for San Diego in the first period before Steve Tardif, J. F. Sauvé, Blanc and Danny Green scored in the second-period rally.

Chicago scored its fourth straight win and extended the club's unbeaten streak to a record 13 games.

Paul Dennen, new owner of the Indianapolis club, saw the Racers rally from behind a 5-2 deficit in take a 3-2 lead before the Cougars got third-period goals from Jan Popiel, Gary MacGregor and Pete Mahaffey.

WHAs Problems Fatal — Campbell

PITTSBURGH (CP) — The World Hockey Association "can't go to the second very long" because it faces fatal economic problems, says Clarence Campbell, president of the rival National Hockey League.

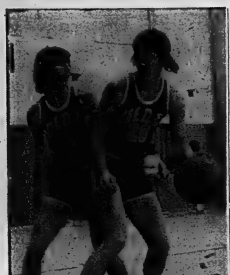
Campbell told a news conference here Wednesday:

"Economically, the WHA simply can't continue much longer. Some franchises might survive but situations simply destabilize continuing in many cities in that league."

Campbell was in Pittsburgh to check on one of the NHL's own economic problems, the financially - troubled Penguins. Only 7,656 fans attended Wednesday night's game between Toronto Maple Leafs and the Penguins and, because of attendance clauses and a steep payroll, the NHL is giving the club financial assistance.

The NHL has an even bigger problem in Oakland, where it owns California Golden Seals since acquiring them from Charles Finley. It is looking for a buyer.

"We've got to resolve the Oakland situation or we'll bleed to death," Campbell said. He added there is a good possibility the team will be moved but "we're not there yet."



The Seals are drawing an average of 8,800 fans a game. To break even in the NHL, crowds of 15,000 are needed.

Winner by TKO, 'Sam' Is a Girl

LOUISVILLE (AP) — In the third round, Sam unleashed a right hook that docked Pickles Gray for a technical knockout. But the word was a pseudonym.

Pickles and his father learned afterwards that Sam's real name is Thelma Gail Marshall. She's a spunky, 69-pound, freckled-faced 11-year-old.

She was billed as Sam Marshall on the card-for a boxing tournament sponsored by the Jefferson County police department Wednesday because her coach, Moon Mullins, was afraid "no boy would take the chance of being humiliated by a girl."

Mullins said the Grade 4 student started coming to boxing practice with her twin brother and "dogged the hell out of me until I let her get in the ring."

Sam's mother, Margie Aliss Marshall, said she was a little worried about the bout.

"After all, she's a little tyke, this, not a muscular child at all," she said.

It was that build that dropped Sam into Pickles' weight class. The seven-year-old tried, but he was outclassed.

"I won it fair and square," claimed Sam, who collected a trophy, hugs from her parents and a handshake from the county police chief, Russell McDaniel, who had been outwitted.

Got NFL Franchise

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League awarded Thursday ownership of its expansion Seattle franchise to a prominent group of Seattle businessmen headed by clothing store chain owner Lloyd Nordstrom and awarded ownership of the new Tampa franchise to Florida lawyer Hugh Culverhouse. Both teams will begin league play in 1976.

Cavaliers Do It All

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"There are two things that totally demoralize an opponent," said coach Bill Fitch of Cleveland Cavaliers. "One is the repeated successful fast break and the other is getting 20-foot-ers drop in from all over the court."

The Cavaliers had both of those things going for them Thursday night as they outclassed Kansas City-Omaha Kings 134-91 in the National Basketball Association.

Because of several easy lay-ups on the fast break and outstanding shooting from the outside, the Cavaliers spent very little time at the foul line. In fact, they didn't go to the line for the first 23 minutes, yet still built a comfortable lead.

In the night's only other NBA game, Phoenix Suns beat Golden State Warriors 106-105 in double overtime. In the only American Basketball Association contest, Denver Nuggets defeated Utah Stars 89-85.

Dwight Davis and Bobby Smith combined for 45 points leading the Cavaliers' victory.

Dennis Awtrey's 19-foot shot with 1:20 to go in the second overtime gave Phoenix its victory over Golden State.

Mike Green scored 18 points in the second half and Mack Calvin hit four free throws in the last 39 seconds to pace Denver's victory. Green ended with 25 points, a game high, and Calvin had 19 as the Nuggets beat the Stars for the fourth time in four games this year.

Kuhn Lists Toronto Near Top

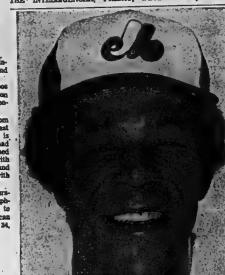
NEW ORLEANS (CP) — Toronto's hopes for a major league baseball team were riding high today after baseball boss Bowie Kuhn listed the city among the top four contenders for the next round of expansion, which will probably take place in 1976.

At baseball's winter meetings Thursday, the American and National Leagues established a joint committee to deal with expansion and the problems of attendance-starved clubs that have been talking about moving.

Kuhn told reporters that new cities to receive the commissioner's "principal focus" are those that have stadiums of big-league calibre built or in progress. He listed Toronto, Seattle, Washington and New Orleans in that category.

The four groups trying for the Toronto franchise are Labatt Breweries, Maple Leaf Gardens, the Canadian Baseball Co., headed by Toronto construction man Sydney Cooper, and Howard Webster, a Montreal industrialist.

Metro has just begun a $15-million rebuilding of the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium, which will accomodate 40,000 persons for baseball in the 1976 season.



Toronto's chances appear to have been improved by the appointment of John McHale, president of Montreal Expos, as the four-man joint expansion committee. He is a strong advocate of the Toronto bid.

The Expos made the biggest trading news of the week-long meetings, with three deals climaxed Thursday by their swap of former all-star outfielder Willie Davis to Texas Rangers for Ken Henderson, a utility outfielder, and pitcher Don Stanhouse.

Davis, 34, was voted Expos player of the year last season and led the team in most offensive departments.

Mackanin, 23, is just up from Spokane of the Pacific Coast League, while Stanhouse, 23, is a righthanded pitcher who had a 3-1 record and a 4.88 earned run average in 16 games with the Rangers last season and pitched part of the year with Spokane.

The Expos' other trade Thursday sent catcher Terry Humphrey and pitcher Tom Walker to Detroit Tigers of the American League for Woodie Fryman, 34, a lefthander.

Advice From Neilson

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada will have to contend with superior play-making, skating and positional play from some opposing teams in the coming world junior hockey championships in Winnipeg, says the coach of last year's Canadian entry.

Roger Neilson, coach of the Peterborough Petes, who emerged from the 1973 tournament in Leningrad with a 5-5 record, says the Canadian entry will probably enjoy an ad vantage over last year's team.

"Our team will have a better chance this year because the series is being played in Canada. But the European teams, particularly Russia, Sweden and Finland, skate better, pass better, and play positional, play better than we do."

A Western Canada Hockey League all-star team will represent Canada this year in the championships Dec. 26-Jan. 5.

In a telephone interview from Peterborough, Neilson said the all-star squad will probably better on familiar territory.

"Most of our players caught 'bugs' and they were down 12 pounds a man. This greatly affected our play. However, I still don't think we would have won it all anyway."

Canada also will have to devise strategy to cope with widely-varied styles of play, Neilson said.

The Russian team is rugged and unafraid of physical contact, while teams from Sweden and Finland are noted for speed and agility.

"The Swedes really fly, and you have to have defencemen who can manoeuvre or they'll skate right by you. The Finns aren't far behind them either."

The Russians are more physically oriented than either the Finns or Swedes.

"But they're smart. They don't retaliate if they are given a cheap shot. It's unbelievable to our boys. I guess it's the Canadian way. We don't like having body to get away with anything.

Gros Streaks To Slalom Win

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Piero Gros of Italy came from behind with a daredevil second run and won the giant slalom of the First Snow ski tournament Thursday, the first race of the season counting toward the World Cup, which Gros won last year.

Ingemar Stenmark, 18, of Sweden, was second after leading by four-tenths of a second in the first of the two heats. It was the fourth time in less than a month that he was runner-up.

Gros, 30, who won five of last season's 14 World Cup slaloms and giant slaloms, risked everything to overtake his Swedish rival in the second heat. Driving a light mist and poor visibility, he exhibited superb form in flashing down the 48-gate course of the Bellevarde Mountain to victory over the home Italian fans.

Gros' time was 3 minutes, 19.88 seconds after runs of 1:31.54 and 1:38.46. Stenmark was clocked in 1:36.39 and 1:40.69, finishing almost a full second behind Gros with 3:100.

Canadian entries finished well back in the field of 101 that started the race.

David Murray of Vancouver placed 42nd overall in the official results with runs of 1:37.13 and 1:44.76 for a combined total of 3:21.89.

Steve Podborsky, 17-year-old newcomer to Canada's national team from Toronto, finished 46th with times of 1:38.38 and 1:43.70—3:22.08.

Bob's Cats Begin to Purr

It's been 10 games now since 29-year-old, Bob Boyle, took over the coaching reins of the Bellevile Bobcats. Some feel he hasn't done much to improve the position of the Cats in the Metro Junior B Hockey League.

As far as standings are concerned, the team has made little progress. But in watch them in a game now and compare it to these of late October, you discover you are looking at two different hockey clubs.

When Boyle took over he didn't promise to produce any whirlwind hockey team. His tendency was, "if I have them playing 500 hockey by Christmas time I'll be happy."

From October 27 (when Boyle began coaching) he has had the team playing 500 hockey. They have five wins and the same number of losses. This brings their season record to 8-10-1 (one lost-sked) compared to a 3-5-1 record when he came on the scene.

One thing should be noted. When Boyle took the coaching job the Cats were in the midst of a losing streak. Their play was loose and sporadic and appeared to be getting progressively worse.

Now, the Cats are beginning to show their fans and the other teams in the Metro Junior B League just what kind of hockey they're capable of playing.

"The other clubs are starting to realize that they aren't going to walk over top of us", says Boyle.

take two sports

Belleville is out of its losing streak. Though they didn't at the beginning of the season, the players are now playing hockey as a unit.

If you've been to any one of the Cats last few home games you can see for yourself. It is showing in the team's statistics.

The Bobcats have won three of their last four games. Since Boyle took over they have been slowly levelling out their goals for and against until right now the opposition has only out-scored the Cats by five goals on the season. They try to beat the Central Division leading Bramalea, and the Blues have only been there three times this season.

Cats also beat St. Michael's Buzzers on home ice. The best that a team like Pickering Panthers can do against the Buzzers on their territory is a 4-4 draw. The Panthers are the junior B team representing this area in the Ontario Games.

"They're coming," says coach Boyle, "pretty soon we'll be up where we belong."

Boyle does set his sights on one of the top three spots in the Eastern Division of the Metro Junior B League.

"The first round of the playoffs is only a three-out-of-five this year," he said.

"In a situation like that home ice is a great advantage if the series goes to the limit.".

SLICES–When the Cats take on the Toronto Young Nationals at 9 p.m. in the Memorial Arena tonight they'll be looking for their fourth win in five starts. It isn't going to be an easy task however, since the Cats are going to be missing at least two of their big guns.

Grant Coogan and Jim Richardson have been invited to visit Boston University this weekend. Hockey officials there are hoping the two will take a liking to the surroundings and maybe consider BU as a possibility for post-secondary education.

Coogan has picked up 10 points in the last three games, while Richardson has 15 in his last three starts.

* * *

Also missing from the lineup for the game will be Ian Watt. Work commitments have his hands tied. Congratulations are in order. Mike was married recently.

* * *

Things won't be as bad tonight as they were Tuesday when the Cats were in Oshawa. Belleville was missing eight players and in order to ensure a full roster – OHA statutes 14 players must be dressed – the Cats had to have their trainer, 16-year-old Chris Rutledge, bring his equipment in case one player was injured.

Coach Boyle says he's never seen Chris play, but adds, "if he's half as good a player as he is a trainer we can sure use him."

You might have missed your calling, Chris.

Mclnroy Wins 7-5

NAPANEE (Special) — The Mclnroy Construction Minor Bantams took a 7-5 win here Thursday night despite the aggressiveness of Tony Napanchuk.

Mark Crawford led the way for Belleville as he picked up a hat trick and assisted on two other goals. Steve Cleary potted a pair and Steve Murphy and Clarence Bowers scored one each.

The home team got two goals each from Dwight Williams and Dan Stinson and the fifth from Peter Fox.

Napanee took nine of the game's 13 penalties.

Parkway Tops Lions

OSHAWA (Special) — Belleville Lions Midget Majors came up short here Thursday night.

Because the team was unable to cash in on numerous scoring opportunities, Oshawa Parkway TV skated off with a 6-2 win.

Goal scorers for Lions in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA match were Sandy Waterson and Pat McClint.

Nicholson and Quinte Impress

Nicholson Catholic College Senior Boys Basketball team put it all together for their home fans Thursday night as five players hit double figures in the scoring column and the Vikings romped to an 82-36 victory over the Moira Trojans.

In other Bay of Quinte High-school Basketball League games Thursday, the Nicholson juniors downed Moira 60-48, Quinte Saints seniors battled their way to a 50-40 win in Trenton, the Saints juniors took a 45-30 victory from the junior Tigers and in bantam, Moira and Quinte took three

Belvedere Ties Reid's Cornerstone Builds Up Lead

CORNERSTONE Construction moved four points into first place in the Quinte Hockey League with a decisive 7-3 win over Stinson Construction Thursday night. In the other half of the QHL doubleheader Belvedere Hotel and Reid's Dairy battled to a 5-5 tie.

The victory was number six for the Cornerstone crew against two losses. Their 12 points gives them sole possession of first place over Reid's, which has only eight points.

Tied for third place in the standings are Belvedere and Stinson. They have identical records with two wins, four losses and two ties.

Cornerstone got two goals from Doug Jodoin and singles from Barry Pyear, Mike Burdack, Norm Pope, Roger Johnson and Bruce Backer.

Reid's Allen Ray, fired a goal in the eyling minutes of the game to give the club a one-point point.

The Dairymen had taken a 4-0 lead early in the game while Belvedere was missing their regular goalie. Moe Hunter scored two of those and Jim McKay and Carl Boomhower got the others.

Ted Kale scored twice for Belvedere and Ron Foster, Reid Mallory and John Baker each got one.

COSSA Crowns On the Line

By MARK RETT
Sports Staff

Belleville Collegiate Institute's junior girls basketball team will be going into this year's Central Ontario Secondary School Association finals with an 18 and three record and "possibly one of the best teams yet," according to coach Sue Davie.

This year the finals will be held at Kenner Collegiate in Peterborough, Saturday.

BCI does not know who the opposition will be as yet, but they are out to avenge last year's loss.

In the finals of COSSA play last year the junior lost out to Dunbarton High School by a slim four point margin.

BCI for the past five years (including last week's win) has been Bay of Quinte champions.

The team's record includes three tournament championships; the Cobourg East-West Renfrew and their own BCI Invitational tournament.

"We've been working a lot on pressure shooting as well as the quick pass," explained the coach.

Accompanying the junior will be the senior Bayside girls basketball squad.

Bayside earned the right to represent this area in volleyball play by defeating the BCI senior girls by one point, also in Bay of Quinte finals.

IN MEMORIAM

ARNOLD — In loving memory of a dear dad and grandfather who passed away Dec. 6, 1973.

SCOTT — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Mary Ann, who passed away Dec. 6, 1963.
Sweet was the face we loved so dear,
Kind was the heart we loved to bear;

But now our thoughts shall reach.
Peace to remember her who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Lovingly remembered by daughters, son-in-law and grandchildren.

HOLOWAY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father, and father, Holoway who passed away, Decem- ber 6, 1973.
Think of him when household cares
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Think of him when you are forgotten,
Though no earthly eye is wet;
But in memory you will see him
As he was in days gone by.
—Always remembered by wife Anne and family.

WOODCOCK — In loving memory of a dear wife, Maudie Pearl Woodcock, who passed away December 6th, 1971.

They are filled with remembrance of you.
—Lovingly remembered by husband Everton and sons.

BOWLES — In loving memory of my dear husband Thomas E. who passed away on December 6, 1973.
Little true knew when I said "good- bye"
It would be forever and a day,
The call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with you I loved so dear.
Sometimes it's hard to understand,
Why suffering have to be,
But in His wisdom God has planned,
And He does all things well.
—Deeply missed and always remembered by wife Helen.

HOLOWAY — In memory of a dear father, Mr. John Holoway who passed away on December 6, 1973.
The years are quickly passing,
Time changes all we know,
But in the hearts that love him,
His memory lingers yet.
—Never forgotten, Bonny and family.

ONCE UPON A TIME

I was a happy carefree 3-bedroom, split level home, located in a new development on a nice large fenced lot. Maybe I was a little spoiled, because I wasn't just an ordinary home. I was a model and the first home built on the street. Some of my grayest moments were spent watching four small children playing in my large rec room. Meal time was fun in my modern kitchen. Nearly all meals were eaten in my kitchen, but on Sundays and holidays, the family would use my nice dining room. Evenings, holidays, the family would use my nice dining room. Evenings, after the children had bathed in one of my two bathrooms and were tucked away, Mother and Dad would relax in my large living room. Then tragedy struck. Dad was transferred. Now I'm just a lovely home looking for some nice people to shelter. Why don't you call J. J. Lewis Realty Inc. and let them help you buy me with that lovely existing 9¼% interest rate. P.S. Please bring some children with you.

YES, QUINTE AREA — THERE IS A SANTA CLAUS !

Solid brick 10-room, 2 bath home presently duplexed but could easily be converted to a large single family dwelling or left duplexed for additional income. Full price $32,000.00 with good terms. Don't write to Santa call me now and I'll contact Santa for you.

Theatre Said Too Big, Its Budget Too Small

LONDON (CP) — Britain's state-subsidized theatre, opera and ballet companies, flagships of the national culture, are deeply in the red at the end of a crisis-ridden year, bedevilled by inflation, rising costs and generally thinner audiences.

The National Theatre, Royal Shakespeare Company (RSC) and Covent Garden's Royal Opera and Royal Ballet, are all in varying degrees of financial peril and hoping for bigger grants from the Arts Council, which doles out treasury funds to keep the arts afloat.

In the last financial year, the British taxpayer contributed £451,000 to the National, £426,000 to the RSC in London and Stratford-upon-Avon, £1.13 million to the English National Opera at Sadler's Wells and a whopping £2.4 million to Covent Garden.

In spite of this, Covent Garden expects a loss of £250,000 in 1974-75. Administrator John Tooley said recently that without private help—"The Garden" has many wealthy backers—they could not have put on several of this year's productions, including Wagner's Ring cycle, an annual operatic event.

He added that the theatre was reluctant to push seat prices up to a point where some patrons could no longer afford them—Covent Garden prices are already the highest in London, ranging up to £8.50 for certain big - name productions such as the forthcoming La Traviata with Joan Sutherland.

At the National Theatre, where starkly modern new building on the south bank of the Thames should have opened next April but has been postponed indefinitely because of inspection delays, the entire budgeting and production schedule for 1975 has been thrown out of gear.

Director Peter Hall said they had planned for a theatre of 2,500 seats but still are having to make do with one of 900 — the beloved but now threadbare Old Vic. Talking of the need for more government help, he said if they did not get enough money to run the new theatre "as it should be run," the results would be "catastrophic."

"We will certainly be in the red at the end of this financial year," he added.

The National is proud that its audience have not fallen off, as those of many other theatres have, on account of the general belt-tightening and drop in tourism which started with the three-day work week earlier this year.

But the Royal Shakespeare reports a 30-per-cent drop in tourists visiting Stratford, and says its box office has been hit at both its theatres. Last year the company played to record audiences, with Stratford averaging 93 per cent of capacity.

Their deficit for the current year is expected to reach £200,000 to £250,000; inflation has hit them badly, with costs of materials for stage sets and props more than doubling in 1973. A spokesman said the company would have to cut production and impose an austerity regime on those already scheduled for 1975.

Even big money-makers like Sherlock Holmes which have toured in North America cannot fill up the deficit, he said.

The RSC is to launch a Centenary Appeal next year, and of which it hopes to find £500,000 for renewing its heating and ventilation at its Stratford theatre, built in 1932.

All theatres, both all-subsidized and commercial, have been trying to get the government to lift value added tax—the ubiquitous European-style sales tax which now falls on nearly everything except food. The newly-elected Labor government has pledged to look sympathetically at more help for the arts, but in a year when industry is running at a £3 billion loss and the balance of payments deficit is an astronomical £1 billion, the stage is likely to take last place in the queue.

The commercial theatre has also had a bad year, beginning with the power cuts which accompanied the coalminers' strike and kept many patrons at home. Backers are reluctant to risk expensive productions in such an uncertain climate, and already one of the biggest attractions scheduled for the fall season, the Broadway hit A Little Night Music, has been shelved and now may not be seen in London.

The famous old - D'Oyly Carte company, meanwhile, goes into its long-heralded centennial season with serious doubts about its future. All attempts to get Arts Council grants have so far failed and the company, shrine of all Gilbert and Sullivan buffs, is saving like its capital to meet operating costs of £3,000 a week.

It is scheduled to open its centenary program Dec. 17 with a 16-week season at Sadler's Wells and by the end of next year will have presented all 32 of the famous partnership's light operas, including two rarities—The Grand Duke and Utopia Limited—not performed since the start of the century.

Professional Writer Doesn't Enjoy Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Best-selling novelist Frederick Forsyth doesn't really enjoy writing. That's why his new best seller, The Dogs of War, will be his last novel—at least for a while.

"A writer-writer has a compulsion to put down on paper. If it's not what he wants, he tears it up and starts over. He's thoroughly professional, writes as other people go to the office each day. That's a proper writer.

"I don't really have to do it any more. So why do something I don't enjoy."

Forsyth turned out three best-sellers in a row based on his experiences as a journalist and might consider returning to that profession.

A lean, curly-haired Englishman, Forsyth was born in 1938, spent the war years growing up in Kent and left school at 17. He joined the Royal Air Force and decided when he came out to be a reporter.

"Everyone said it was a terrible thing to be, but it was what I wanted," he recalled in an interview here. He became an apprentice on a provincial paper, worked there for three years and, at 23, went to London. He recalls wearing out a lot of shoe leather walking up and down Fleet Street, looking for a job. But his persistence paid off. Hired by Reuters, he soon received a foreign assignment—to Paris. The Algerian war was ending, the OAS was in open revolt against de Gaulle, Forsyth, junior man on the staff, was ingered to follow the general around. These experiences later revived into The Day of the Jackal, about a loose assassin who hunted de Gaulle.

A year behind the Iron Curtain covering East Germany similarly resulted in The Odessa File, about a Nazi hunt.

Forsyth returned to London in 1962 and joined BBC television.

It was July, 1967, Forsyth said, that the deputy news editor poked his head into the newsroom and asked if anyone had ever heard of Biafra.

"He said it was a tribal fire war going on in Nigeria, and that it would be over in a week. I was there 10 weeks and it was still going on." Forsyth returned to London and eventually left the BBC, returned to Biafra as a free-lance reporter and stayed for two years.

Many of those experiences translate into The Dogs of War.

"Finally I returned jo London, broke out of work and had little to get any work either. So I had an idea that I'd write this novel and make a few fast quid," Forsyth said.

In 23 days he had finished the first book, but it took several months to sell it to a publisher. Forsyth says he writes by setting himself a page rullen—12 a day—and faces a blank wall because he finds a window distracting.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, December 7

Aries (March 21-April 19) Is a situation where you have been at odds with another? It is up to you to take the initiative to get things straight.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20) Help for a task that faces you will be available, but you have to tackle it close. Your co-worker has some good ideas, too.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Schedule your day so that your responsibilities are taken care of early. Late afternoon and evening offers you a social reprieve.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Touch you may engage in an outside activity with friends; chances are everyone will wind up at your home till the wee hours.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) An idea you have not thought about for some time will be revived because of a conversation with one you encounter socially.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are much more adept at handling business or financial affairs today than tomorrow. Don't let important matters dangle.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things start off a bit slow today, but by late afternoon the momentum picks up. Your evening should be anything but dull.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A material transaction you will handle with ease if you proceed confidently with just the principals involved.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The early part of the day your outlook is a bit serious. You won't let it too painful a mood. Later in the day you will be.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are going to learn of something that was said about you behind your back. You will be quite flattered. It was very complimentary.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A plan you have is rather sound. You are going to have ways to improve upon it, aided by a friend's suggestions.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You will see as the day wears on that what you want to achieve will come easier if you are less forceful and more logical. Use your head.

Cataracts Don't Mean Blindness

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When I was in the city recently I had my eyes tested after not having had them examined since 1967. This doctor was very abrupt. He told me I didn't need to change glasses as I had cataracts starting in both eyes. He didn't say anything about treatment, but dismissed me.

I am a widow, 58, and live alone, and dread the time I am going blind as I love to read.

I don't know yet what form of treatment for cataracts; but thought you just waited until they were ripe and had them operated.—V.N.

You are pretty much correct in your understanding of cataracts. There is almost nothing to do in the way of treatment except to remove them surgically. As a few cases, medications to dilate the pupils can help temporarily. This does not affect the growth of the cataract, but can be helpful by admitting more light if the dilation exposes more of the lens through which light can pass. This depends on whether the cataracts start in the centre of the lens leaving the edges clear for a time, or whether the entire lens is cloudy.

So a few patients may be helped a little that way, and only temporarily. In the final analysis, removal of the lenses is necessary.

But I would urge you not to be too upset by fears of becoming blind. For one thing, cataracts do not progress at the same rate in all people. In they progress quite slowly. For another, it is quite common for them to progress differently from one eye to the other, so one eye may continue to give you pretty good service while the cataract is being removed from the other eye, and a lens fitted to it to restore vision.

The idea of having to wait until a cataract becomes "ripe" is not correct although such references are often heard. Many eye surgeons prefer to wait until a cataract is pretty well developed before removing it, but the actual fact a cataract can be removed at any stage of development. Earlier removal is sometimes done with patients who need particularly good vision for close work—a watchmaker being an example.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have just yourself too much. I suggest you have your eyes and see regularly your cataracts are developing. Some folks have them for years and do not have enough so they don't need surgery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My little daughter's nose bleeds all the time, at bedtime while she sleeps, when she plays. It bleeds two or three times a week. It happened when she was two and now she is five.

I have two other children and their noses never bleed. Sometimes it bleeds and won't stop for an hour or more. Is there anything wrong with her nose?—G.E.

Obviously there's something wrong with her nose. Maybe she's a nose picker; possibly there's a chronic sinus that needs cauterizing, maybe some polyps have developed. It's high time to have your doctor examine her nose.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son is five months old and now I find I am pregnant again. I've read that such a short time between pregnancies can prove harmful to both the mother and unborn fetus, and that the child will be slower in his/development in there any truth to this?—Mrs. S.S.

No harm to either mother or child—except that it's rough going for mama to have two little ones to care for.

The 11 in the code word ARCH stands for Review the bidding. Thanks! It is the least important of the four code letters, but there is a reason why it comes all important.

South rolls the second spade. If he is the least bit careless, he will wind up losing two club tricks. He'll complain about the bad luck that placed both the king and jack in the West hand, but to no avail.

A careful South will Review the bidding and mark West with the king of clubs and find a way to make the hand even though West also holds the jack and one.

There will be a slight element of risk in his play, if someone is nimble enough to trump the second heart lead, the hand will collapse. But South can't afford to pull trumps before embarking on operation end-play.

He starts by cashing dummy's ace and king of hearts, ruffs a heart, returns to dummy with a trump, ruffs the last heart, plays another trump to dummy, leads a low club and plays his own 10 spot.

West wind with his jack, but is totally dead. A spade lead allows a ruff and discard; a club lead is allowed to ride around to South's queen.

Oil Scarcity Disturbs Alaska's Age-old Quiet

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (AP) — If, on that seventh day, God had wanted to contemplate all the beauty of the world, he probably rested on the lonely mountaintops overlooking Alaska's North Slope.

For all those centuries between the Beginning and the Oil Rush, the only people who cast their eyes over the endless vista of land and mountains and sky were the Eskimos and Indians who lived in harmony and respectful fear of that endless terrain.

Now, the white men and their machines are there in force because the children of the Industrial Revolution need what the North Slope has hidden.

Oil—billions of barrels of it—lies underneath the frozen ground waiting for those who can get it out. Predictions are that it will begin to flow south by mid-1977, south to the factories of Cleveland, the compact cars on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and the outboard motors on Florida lakes.

But so far, the newcomers' presence has done little to change the face of the North Slope. About 6,000 men and women are living in 13 camps that are expanding daily north of Fairbanks. They were hired by companies under contract to the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. to build a road parallel to part of the pipeline route.

As though in cheerful defiance of their hostile environment, the camp workers sleep and eat in prefabricated modular compounds with names like Happy Valley, Prospect Creek, Dead Horse, Old Man and Cold Foot.

But when they go outside and into the mosquito-infested wilderness, they leave behind all traces of a portable life of modern toilets and pool tables, stainless steel kitchens and fresh doughnuts.

They must psychologically adjust themselves to the land, the emptiness and the Arctic summer's continual sunshine, and winter.

Already many haven't been able to adjust, and have left after only a few weeks or even days. Alyeska officials cite a turnover rate of about 25 to 30 per cent.

But for those who stay, the monetary rewards are great—some pipeline workers could make $50,000 a year—and many find a personal kind of peace.

In summer, the mountains of the wild Brooks Range are naked of their Arctic wrap of white. Their peaks poke the sky and stab the clouds. Their skin is bleached white.

The rivers are a thousand carelessly tossed blue ribbons scattered in disarray, the lakes countless puzzle pieces dumped on a carpet.

In the midnight sun the earth is brown velvet lightly dusted with green powder. There isn't a tree.

The gravel road being built between the Yukon River and the Prudhoe Bay oil fields on the edge of the Arctic Ocean looks like a slender string dropped across the tundra.

The 360-mile pipeline road, once it is turned over to the state, will open up the North Slope to the outside world and, for the first time, provide an entry route for anyone who has wheels.

It is hard to imagine the North Slope on the verge of tourism and all that it implies.

"It's sure a pretty piece of real estate right now," said the helicopter pilot dryly as he hovered his whirring machine a few feet above the little knoll near the Sagavanirktok, or Swift, River. "Going out here is something you feel, but it's hard to explain, to put into regular words."

Mike Carroll, 28, has been flying the North Slope for two years. He ferries construction workers from site to site along the pipeline route above the Yukon. Every three weeks the Vietnam veteran heads home to Anchorage to his wife and two children for a few days, but says he doesn't look forward going back to the North Slope when his leave is over.

"This is still one of the last few places on earth where it is truly man against the elements," said Carroll. "If any thing's going to get you, the weather will get you first. One minute it can be completely clear, the next the snowflakes will be hitting the windshields as big as silver dollars.

"But you can see sheep and moose and bear, tiny little flowers which don't bloom anywhere else, water as clear as glass, and not enough people to bother you. I think it takes a special kind of person to stick it out. But it's an experience which would be unique among any other in a person's life."

Two Bits for a Dime Big Business in U.S.

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — That jingle in your pocket is the $5-million gleam in Bob Nalmy's otherwise tired and cynical eye.

"I'm just that ugly middleman," says Nalmy, who at 48 has exchanged his wife's troublesome penny collection for a wide assault on America's spare and hoarded change.

Nalmy owns Prestige Coins here, and for 14 years he's spent most of his time on the road, buying silver, gold and rare coins for resale to specialists, investors and collectors.

He estimates that his three full-time buying crew snake hit operation the largest of its kind in a money-conscious country.

The method of operation is spectacular. Moving through 48 of the country's largest cities a year, his crews purchase full-page ads in newspapers.

"Immediate cash!" began one that ran in a New York state paper last month. "Paying 250 per cent of face for U.S. silver coins dated 1964 or before," the appeal continued.

For higher-silver-content coins, Prestige will pay $1.25 for each half dollar, 62 cents for each quarter, 25 cents for each dime and $2.50 for each silver dollar dated before 1935.

A $1 gold coin gets at least $40. "The stuff we're buying is mostly quite common," he says.

"Everybody's got it."

But not everybody has Nalmy's cultivated contacts, the specialists who buy his stocks hoping the value will increase.

Prestige pays immediate cash for coins, and this year the turnover will be about $5 million. Twenty per cent of that amount should be gross profit, Nalmy said.

The largest buys have reached $40,000, he said, with one former taxicab company owner dumping $27,500 worth of coins a few weeks ago in Los Angeles.

"They really shock you sometimes," says Nalmy. "A guy who looks like he couldn't buy a cup of coffee might have $10,000 worth."

Nalmy began his business in 1958.

"My wife had a penny collection, and every time we moved, pennies dropped out of it," said the former insurance salesman. "I got sick and tired of it. A guy offered me five bucks for it, but the next day I found out the amount should be five grand. I've been buying coins ever since."

This year has been one of the best, because for the first time silver prices on the coin-collectors market have made it possible to offer more than double the face amount of the coins. That happy situation developed, Nalmy says, when a Texas millionaire cornered the country's silver stocks, forcing up the price.

Parisian Businessmen Take to Motorbikes

PARIS (Reuter) — Neatly-dressed businessmen on motorcycles, pushing their way through the congested Paris traffic, are becoming a familiar sight here.

"This form of transport is increasingly popular in the French capital, enabling business executives to beat traffic jams and arrive for appointments on time.

A bank manager, who owns a 1,000 c.c. motorcycle, said: "I really enjoy the ride to my office and I am never worried about being late to see my customers."

The weekday rush period in Paris is from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., practically without interruption, and many former car users have decided that the best way to travel around the city is on a moped or motorcycle.

Traffic problems in Paris have reached a critical point.

While car users, often stranded in seemingly endless streams of traffic, are losing their tempers and snarling at each other, people on two-wheeled conveyances are getting somewhere.

The motorcycle craze began about three years ago. Thousands of youngsters from the suburbs swarmed into the capital on their machines, bent on making noise and having fun.

Some prominent psychologists tried to explain the phenomenon by saying that control of a powerful motorcycle was a palliative to violence.

But the motorcycle ban was never, not only youngsters, but executives, doctors, artists and journalists.

The interior ministry followed the trend by ordering 2,000 mopeds for its police patrols.

"These motorbikes will be a great help in our fight against crime and in tackling traffic problems, especially as security cars are ineffective in solving jams," a spokesman said.

No special licence is required to drive a motorcycle which does not exceed 125 c.c. Motorbikes also use less gasoline than cars.

But the bank manager with the 1,000 c.c. bike said there was one snag.

"A motorbike user has to be fitted out with a helmet and special gear, unless he does not mind being exposed to rain and bad weather."

"Car Drivers Should Prepare For Winter

OTTAWA (CP) — With temperatures dropping and the holiday season not far away, the Consumer's Association of Canada urges drivers to prepare themselves for winter driving conditions.

Wherer dictates that your car carry seasonal equipment including a brush to remove snow, a windshield scraper for ice, a battery booster cable, a bag of sand, a shovel and a flashlight, says the CAC.

Check your snow tires to be sure they will still provide adequate traction. A set of tire chains in the trunk will increase traction on glare ice and is usually packed snow.

The Consumers Association says winter is a prime time for traffic accidents but, despite the efforts of highways and automobile builders to make driving safer, in the final analysis safety will is the driver's responsibility.

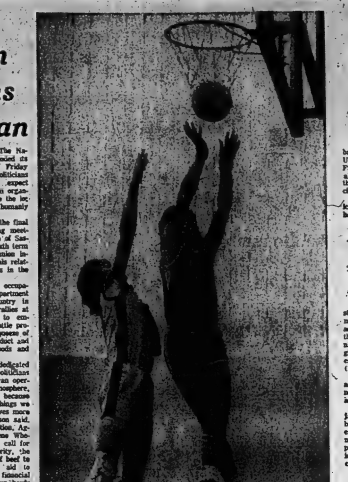
Farm Union Warns Whelan

WINNIPEG (CP) — The National Farmers Union ended its fifth annual convention Friday with a warning that politicians and bureaucrats can expect more action as the farm organization seeks to improve the lot of both farmers and humanity around the world.

The 800 delegates at the final session of the week-long meeting heard Roy Atkinson of Saskatoon, elected to his sixth term as president, say the union intends to achieve its goals relating to current problems in the cattle industry.



The union mounted exceptions of agriculture department officer across the country in November and signed rallies at provincial legislatures to emphasize the plight of cattle producers caught in the squeeze of low prices for their product and high prices in food and other services they need.

"Our members are dedicated to solidarity and the politicians and bureaucrats, who can speak ably in a quiet atmosphere, had better take note because there are all kinds of things we can do to make their lives more interesting," Mr. Atkinson said.

Earlier in the convention, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan rejected the unions call for a national meat authority, the purchase and canning of beef to be provided as food aid to needy countries, and financial support to maintain cow herds to ensure future production.

The delegates adopted a major paper on philosophy, increased membership fees to $100 from $25 and suggested that it take the lead in introducing new concepts of land tenure to ensure farmers retain control of the land through their generations rather than lose it to giant corporations.

Mr. Atkinson said the fee increase would allow the union to pursue new goals — financial ones that budgeted allowed many needed projects of concern to be tackled more easily.

Herb Gray Haunting Colleagues

OTTAWA (CP) Herb Gray, chopped from the cabinet in a post-election shake-up, haunted his old colleagues Friday by questioning the effect of a proposed cut in the federal sales tax on building materials.

The reduction, from a top rate of 12 per cent to an across the-board rate of five per cent, is supposed to benefit home buyers, he told Commons debate on a sales and excise tax bill.

Builders in all parts of the construction industry will also cut some of the gravy because the cut is not limited to housing materials, he said.

He agreed there are strong arguments for cutting the tax but suggested that consumers might have to be builders who pocket the benefit in the form of higher profits.

The Commons, sparsely attended when Mr. Gray spoke, gave second reading to the bill, sending it to committee for clause-by-clause study.

The bill covers sales and excise tax changes announced by Finance Minister John Turner in his June 18 budget. Rates are unchanged, it will officially raise taxes on wine, liquor, gaming vehicles and boat motors, while cutting the building tax. Although not officially authorized until the bill passed the taxes took effect budget night.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has requested extradition from Hungary of Imre Olejnyik, charged with the murder of Christine Demeter, an external affairs spokesman said Friday.

Olejnyik is charged with the actual murder of Mrs. Demeter, 46, her husband, Peter Demeter was found guilty Thursday by an Ontario Supreme Court jury of hiring someone to kill her and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The external affairs spokesman said Hungary was requested last month to begin extradition proceedings against Olejnyik.

"It's up to Hungary to make the next move," he said.

Olejnyik fled to Canada after the 1956 Hungarian revolution and became a Canadian citizen. However, he still is considered a citizen of Hungary by that country.

Because of this, Hungary is not legally required to extradite him to face charges in Canada.

Any extradition request has to go through the Hungarian courts and there is no indication when proceedings may start.

Demeter will appeal his conviction of the non-capital murder of his wife Christine, and seek to collect the $1-million insurance on her life, his lawyer said after the Mississauga, Ont., house builder was found guilty Thursday at the end of his 11-week trial.

Demeter, 41, was sentenced to life in prison exactly 20 years to the day he received from his native Hungary to Austria before coming to Canada.

In an emotional address that had some jurors and spectators fighting back tears, Demeter told jury members that they should not let the guilty verdict haunt them. However, he maintained his innocence.

Shulman Under Seafarers' Gun

OTTAWA (CP) — The embattled Seafarers' International Union came to its own defence Friday, claiming innocence in all its political activities and threatening a democratic rebel accuser.

SIU president Roman Gralewicz told reporters at the union's headquarters in Montreal that the SIU campaign contributions that have kept the Canmont about all week were "completely legal."

Shouting at times, the 41-year-old president said the contributions totalled only $4,788.18, not $18,000 as charged by Morton Shulman, member of the Ontario legislature, on television and alleged in the union's reports.

He aimed his angriest rebuffs at Dr. Shulman, a New Democrat who has accused the 3,700-member SIU of bribery, corruption, intimidation and violence.

Denying all charges of wrongdoing, Mr. Gralewicz said the SIU contributions were offered freely, without strings, and went to 17 candidates—Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats—who have supported SIU goals such as higher pensions and an all-Canadian coastal shipping industry.

He also said the contributions were channelled through campaign committees in every case and that none of the candidates personally received any money.

He accused Dr. Shulman of "peddling crap . . . lies and slander" by suggesting that SIU contributions had been encouraged actions have been dirty, bloody and that federal politicians have been bribed to look the other way.

The SIU had never bribed anyone and the only violence had been occasional drunken fights at bars frequented by SIU members, Mr. Gralewicz said.

He said he never has talked directly with Dr. Shulman, who is demanding an inquiry into SIU activities.

"We're taking action against Shulman and his big white horse," he said. "I intend to give Shulman a good ride on your time-what."

Saying there is "nothing to inquire into," he disclosed that SIU lawyers have asked Ontario Attorney-General Robert Welch to take criminal action against Dr. Shulman.

The Metropolitan Toronto police also have been asked through Mr. Welch to produce legal authority for launching a wiretap on the SIU's Toronto office, he said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau said in Winnipeg there are no plans for an inquiry into SIU affairs but something may be done "if specific allegations and accusations are made."

The political contributions, the focal point of the week-long uproar in the Commont, were made during the July 8 election campaign and included a $500 donation to Labor Minister John Munro.

Others besides Mr. Munro known to have received SIU donations are Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, Manpower Minister Robert Andras, Health Minister Marc Lalonde, former labor minister Martin O'Connel, Conservative MPs Michael Forrestall and Robert McCleave and Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming). Two former NDP members, both defeated July 8, were also given SIU money—Paddy Neale and Frank Howard.

Makarios Rejects Partition

NICOSIA (AP) — Archbishop Makarios ended his five-month exile from Cyprus today and went as he told 200,000 followers he would "never accept" a military solution imposed by the Turkish invaders.

The record turnout of Greek-Cypriots in front of the archbishop's palace welcomed him with hysterical chants of "Makarios! Makarios!"

"This is not the time to set out my views on how the problem should be solved," Makarios, the elected president of Cyprus, said.

But he added: "We shall never accept a settlement involving transfer of population and amounting to the partition of the island.

Mr. Greaka, vice-president of the international relations committee for the Russian ministry of sports, was one of the main organizers of the recent Canada-Russia hockey series, the paper says.

In November he was presented with a plaque and a Team-Canada hockey sweater by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Tax Board Confirms Indian Income Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — Indians must pay income taxes on money earned off the reserves, the tax review board ruled in a tax appeal judgment made public Friday.

The ruling, almost certain to be appealed to higher courts, affects an estimated 200,000 registered Indians and is believed to be the first time a court has ruled on whether Indians living on reserves are subject to income taxes.

"In his ruling, tax appeal board member Roland D. Gogo said the Indian Act does not even mention income tax and "the Income Tax Act taxes all the residents of Canada."

"It is self-evident that an Indian fails under the Income Tax Act, especially when his income is earned outside the reserve," said Mr. S. Gogo.

The matter was brought to the board by Russel Snow, a resident of the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal. Mr. Snow is a steelworker and was ordered by the revenue department to pay income tax on $9,... he earned in the United States in 1969.

Evidence was that Mr. Snow returned to the reserve every weekend and that he spent the bulk of his money on the reserve in support of his wife and two children.

James O'Reilly, a Montreal lawyer who specializes in Indian cases, argued that a section of the Indian Act provides that property of Indians situated on reserves is tax exempt.

He said that property as defined in the Indian Act includes money and salary.

Mr. O'Reilly also argued that the Ilsi Income Tax Act of 1917 did not include taxing of Indians. Indians, he said, were considered a special class and "as wards of the state."

Butcher's Cut-up Prompts Complaint

By SHARON AIRHART
Staff Reporter

The big toque around a local butcher shop lately isn't the price of meat — it's a poster.

Subject of a small debate, the poster in White's Meat Market depicts a naked woman with black lines marking off "cuts" including "rump."

That irritated Linda Baker.

"I was in there buying some meat and when I was leaving I saw the poster. I found it offensive," she says.

Ms. Baker began to speak about the poster with "the man behind the counter."

"He didn't take me too seriously. Then I said a poster of a naked man would be more appropriate . . . that it would be more enjoyable for the women customers. Then he started to get upset."

Ms. Baker went back later to speak to the owner Len Shanoor, about the poster.

"He listened but he didn't take it down."

Ms. Baker explains her feeling about the poster: "It's using a woman's body like it was a cow. The other day I was walking by and I saw a bunch of little kids in there. 'Look at them in there looking at that poster.' Here's being brainwashed while they're still little,' I thought."

Dissatisfied, Ms. Baker wrote to Robin deGrey, and she says "received a reply indicating that the Chamber of Commerce had spoken to the owners of the market and let them know that the poster had received unfavorable comment".

Owner of the butcher shop Len Shanoor says he doesn't know what all the flap is about and the Chamber of Commerce hasn't approached him.

"She came in and said I should take it down, but I don't see why I should. I don't see anything wrong with it."

Mr. Shanoor told Ms. Baker that if the women customers mentioned it at all "they got a big laugh out of it".

"You don't become offended at a cartoon in the newspaper."

Mr. Shanoor told the Intelligencer, "It's like a cartoon. It's certainly not meant as any slur of degradation."

Pollution Puzzler

What's the surest way of giving a court conviction on a pollution?

Ald. Jack Ireland sought suggestions this week in city council.

The councillor's uncertainty stems from his appearance in a court case, he said.

After a lawyer got through cross-examining him, recalled Ald. Ireland, "I thought I was the accused instead of the witness."

What, he asked, would he have to do if he saw someone illicitly dumping garbage?

"I think it's a little more than arresting that guy by dumping garbage. Prosecute him," said the councillor.

He wondered if city manager Wilbor Purcell might be able to advise council on the necessary procedure.

Meantime, Ald. Arthur Keegan offered one solution: Carry a camera.

Keeping a Pet Can Be Real Devotion--at Today's Prices

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Inflation is pricing pets off the market.

It takes a devoted animal lover to keep a cat or dog at today's prices.

One pet owner estimates that the cost of feeding a 30-pound dog is $15 a month or $180 a year. And that's dry dog food, and the lowest nutritive content stuff.

A 30-pound dog's pet food costs $90.88 at feed stores. The owner of a boarding kennel says the wholesale price of dry dog food has doubled in the last two years.

Cat owners are now paying 37 cents a can for a 14-ounce can of good-quality tinned food. Since a cat eats at least a half a can a day, feeding a feline for a year adds up to a minimum of $68.14.

Widen a pet falls ill, the costs skyrocket. It costs as much to take a dog or cat to a veterinarian as it does to visit a doctor.

The Ontario Veterinary Association's fee schedule suggests $8 for an office call and examination, $10.50 for a surgical work or treatment, $20 in a modern, well-equipped facilities in a rural area.

Province Kennels, the only one in Belleville, is one of the Ontario offering boarding services for dogs, charging $1.50 a day. The kennel also does kennel for large dogs. The kennel's area has been kept busy since early fall for the Christmas season and there is accommodation for about 30 dogs. The prices went up in costs this fall because of the increased cost of food and operation.

Fish 'N Critters pet shop sells beard worm, bought kind for $2.39 a week. The staff will also clip poodles, for $10 a trim. Keep a poodle in top shape; he should be clipped every two months.

Dog leather has jumped in price, because any pet shop owners, they come from the European Common Market countries. A collar that cost $3 in January is now priced at $3.99. A leash is now worth $2.49.

Buying a pet involves a high outlay if you have not purchased. Fish 'N Critters pet supplies charge for about $125 to $135 with puppies. Most people want small dogs and the most popular breed, says the owner. Mutts are sold in city pet stores from $5 to $25. By buying rabbits, gerbils and guinea pigs from local pet owners with a surplus, stores keep the prices down. Rabbits go as high as $7, but the local stock can be had for $3.99.

Tropical fish also involve a bought for $6.95 and reports that counties are making a come-back at $28-a-bird. An ladies ringneck parrot is available at $149.99.

It's no coincidence tropical fish are becoming a favorite pet.

"Keeping fish is one of the most expensive hobbies," says the spokesman for Fish 'N Critters. "Doctors and dentists are pathetic. Down in their office to tranquilize patients.

A 15-gallon starter tank with a thermal pump and filter can be had for $45. This includes everything from the water and the fish.

The small fish have gone up about 25 per cent because of freight rate increases, but a Florida goldfish is only 25 cents. The aristocrats of the fish world are higher. Fish 'N Critters has a 16-inch black shark for $12.50 and Tropical Gardens prices a pair of black wet small fish at $20.

The cost of fish feed makes an aquarium an attractive proposition. A can of food costs $1 a month and lasts three or four weeks.

Student Production

The Fifties Come Bouncing Back

By JIM SHEELE
Staff Reporter

The 1950s could have been a fine time to live. Especially if you were a high school student — and the most important part of life was around the malt shop, laundromat or school dance hop.

Friday night students of Centennial Secondary School showed the public just how much fun the '50s could be. This was in the production of "Rock Around the Clock" which ends tonight.

The opening night audience enjoyed itself almost as much as the cast. The production was directed by Bill Culp, who provided against boring waits between scenes through color slides of characters protested as the waif.

Bill Kitchen as Al performed well as did his nemesis, Joey, played by Terry Brown. As high school knights seeking to reach top spot their conflict provided a good comic counterpoise. Jackie, as played by Lis Anderson was a real find and only had to be on stage to make the play sparkle.

But it was the atmosphere and flavor of the '50s that appealed to the audience. The sadies, down to white bobby sox and rolled up jeans were authentic enough as well as the '50s music. The cast couldn't have been any older than five or six when that period ended.

Just the name, the clothes, the '50s style, the props including large Coke signs, pinball machines and automatic washers — hence the title Rinse Cycle — all contributed to an enjoyable return to the period.

Even after the play was over, the atmosphere continued as characters in the play were led into the audience to dance with them in the aisles or take them on the stage.

When that was over everyone gathered in the cafeteria for a good old fashioned sock hop, complete

Lack of Issues Creates Apathy

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Elections are fought. Candidates are elected or defeated. Issues live or die. All action-packed words, and all ingredients to one of the more exciting few weeks in a municipality.

That's the ideal, one that didn't occur in Trenton this week. As this year's election is filed in the history books, people are already calling it the quietest municipal election in Trenton in year.

Traditionally, no issues add up to little excitement and the return of the incumbents.

Politicians are equally aware of the principle. As election time approaches the soft shoe and the soft peddle predominate in council chambers. Happily, this council did not follow the norm as stringently as others.

With some councils, one is forced to wonder whether councillors sit in secret and inform the people, or to not rile voters and endure safely to be re-elected two years hence.

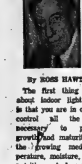
It seems incumbents feel they tread on the thin ice of public affection.

But do they in actual fact? There seems little affection in wards Trenton council. Only 34.5 per cent of the town's eligible voters bothered to mark ballots.

That majority of incumbents shouldn't be considered a mark of quality. Simply a sign of apathy.

Only the race for the three utility commission seats generated any excitement. And it was a race that nearly wasn't run.

Barry Box, the town's new PUC commissioner, filed his papers scant minutes before the nomination period closed Nov. 12 at 5 o'clock. He said he didn't like seeing anyone get into office by acclamation, without a fight.



He nearly didn't make it. When town officials checked the names of the ten people who had endorsed his candidacy, two were discovered not on the town voters list. Mr. Box found the solution — he ran out of town offices into a nearby Dundas St. variety store, and button-holed three people for their names. (The third signature just in case, he said.)

If he had put off filing longer, he would have missed the deadline. James Macdonald and Charles Hilton would have been acclaimed. The election would have been so quiet that one wouldn't have had to listen closely to hear a pin drop on the floor of the council chamber.

Election night Monday, that nearly-missed-the-boat candidate climbed aboard and late night, first with the unofficial returns indicated James Macdonald was a shoo-in, Mr. Box wasn't.

Throughout the evening, with practically each posting of poll results, the lead seesawed between the challenger and the veteran Mr. Hilton. Sighs of anguish or delight — depending up on whom one supported — escaped from onlookers.

In the end, Mr. Box won.

Soil Recipes Good Start

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

The first thing to realize about indoor light gardening is that you are in charge. You control all the elements necessary to propagation, growth and maturity — light, the growing medium, temperature, moisture, health and nutrition. And perhaps the best one to start with is the growing medium.

Straight garden soil is just not adaptable to use indoors. Without the moderating influences of weather, earth worm activity and deep cultivation, straight garden soil used indoors will achieve the consistency of concrete in very short order.

And so we have a choice — soil mixtures or no soil at all. Because seeds can be germinated quite successfully in a mixture of vermiculite and peat moss. And of course, hydroponics, (the growing of plant material without soil), has been with us for years.

In any case, here are four soil mixtures — one for seedling, one for seedlings, one for house plants and one extra special mixture for Saintpaulia, commonly known as African violets; all of which have served me admirably.

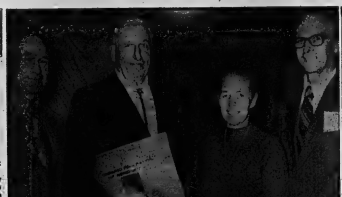
To germinate seed, we need a fine soil mixture with a reduced nutritional value and so I go with the following:

3 parts soil
3 parts peat moss
1 part sand, and
1 tbsp. powdered fungicide per bushel

And when the time comes to transplant your seedlings to the home they'll occupy until they are introduced to the outdoors, we require a more robust mixture as follows:

4 parts soil
1 part peat moss
1 part sand
1 part vermiculite or perlite
1 tbsp. powdered fungicide and
3 tbsps. bone meal per bushel.

Now the soil mixture for house plants is nearly identical. Except increase the soil content to six parts. And having said that, let me hedge for a moment. That is a good general mixture for house plants.



But there is one soil mixture I wouldn't change for anything. The one for Saintpaulia, or African violets. Now if you shy away from African violets because of all the tales you've heard about their difficult temperament — don't. Start with this soil mixture and we'll come back at a later date to the ease of raising these delightful, free-flowering house plants.

3 quarts clay loam
2 quarts perlite
2 quarts coarse vermiculite
2 quarts fine chip charcoal
4 quarts screened sphagnum peat moss

Mix separately
1 cup bone meal
1 cup calcium carbonate
1 tbsp. powdered fungicide

Combine all ingredients and add ½-gallon of water and store in a clean bin or plastic bag.

Parking Problem Still Major Issue

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Parking facilities, a plank in the platform of the majority of Picton's town council candidates, remain conspicuous in their absence.

To shop in Picton it is, first essential to stop in Picton and that is becoming more difficult with each passing day.

With the Christmas shopping season grinding into motion, all of the parking slots on Main St. and most of the vacancies on the Market Square are steadily filled.

The former Mary St. School site, a parking lot "in the rough" has been dotted with cars but lacks properly defined exits and entrances. Last winter it was a common complaint that this lot was not plowed regularly to permit parking.

The early bird gets the metre and the Picton motorists who miss a Main St. slot or a Market Square vacancy can be seen driving around the block waiting for an opening.

Candidates seeking office this month offered several solutions to the parking plight.

Several felt, through co-operation with Main St. merchants, off-street parking at the rear of stores might be developed to alleviate the shortage of slots.

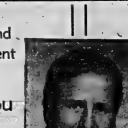
Others favored development of the Mary Street parking lot through paving and installation of meters and employment of a parking attendant.

Defeated mayoralty candidate Margaret Armstrong suggested vacant service stations on Main Street should be purchased by the town and used for parking accommodation and town offices.

The election is over and hopefully, the new council will tackle the parking problems of Picton as quickly as possible.

The town's existing parking facilities should be re-examined with an eye to ousting a clutch of permanent "parkers" who occupy metred slots from nine til five while at work in Main St. stores.

Off-street parking for store employees should be provided at the rear of the stores. Employees should use these facilities, freeing downtown parking spaces for shoppers.



The value of several five minutes free parking spaces in front of the post office is questionable as these "Free-bees" frequently sitzzet bangers-on who ignore the time limit.

Motorists jockeying for a slot near the post office often park at the edge of the side entrance where there is no defined parking space. This constitutes a driving hazard for motorists coming from behind the post office on to Main St. Vision is blocked as the driver attempts to make a turn into Main St. traffic.

Erratic Trends in Gold Reflect Fiscal Uncertainty

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The recent ups and downs in gold-bullion prices are an indication of the new monetary uncertainties that have come to the fore.

Question: citizens will be allowed to hold gold in any form and in any amount, starting Jan. 2. That's not so new—the Nixon administration announced late last year that the 40-year ban on gold-holding would end in 1973.

But when the U.S. Treasury announced Dec. 3 that it would supply two-million ounces of bullion to the market Jan. 6, the wrote picture changed again. Gold prices, which had been climbing in anticipation of U.S. public demand, dropped sharply. It was one more example of the whip-saw action that can whip an entire economy.

A year ago, when the U.S. government made its initial decision to free gold, it was selling in 1975, the world market price was in the neighborhood of $100 an ounce.

It advanced steeply in the first quarter of this year to about $175, retreated to about $125 in mid-summer, then in September took off for new peaks above $185 on the Americans' G-Day approached.

It was the prospect of some 200-million people eagerly exchanging their sterling dollars for pure gold that helped to fuel the speculative flames and send the price of bullion sky-rocketing.

Much of the demand for gold came from Arab businessmen that will be in a position to sell it at retail-cash and deposit-interest stores, for example, bolling up their investments.

Some of the demand came from newly-enriched oil-rich countries that will invest exclusively in gold bars.

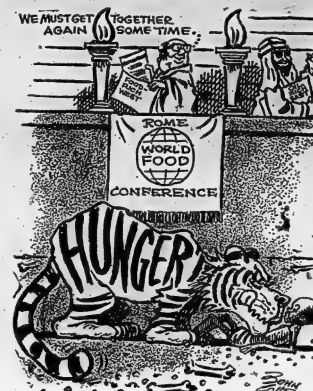
And some of the demand came from the commodity-futures trade, which has to have a stock of bullion on hand to back up dealings in gold futures once they start in 1975.

To the extent that this recent heavy buying originated with Americans, it was weakened the U.S. dollar because U.S. purchasers were paying foreign sellers of gold.

That, in turn, has contributed to the inflationary spiral by making U.S. imports more expensive.

The U.S. government's objective was to bust the speculation. According to the conventional wisdom of economic textbook, allowing the public to own gold bullion is supposed to be deflationary.

Thus, the decision to auction off a part of the official gold reserves was almost forced upon the U.S. government as a means of balancing the demand-supply equation.



It will help stem the outflow of U.S. dollars to foreign gold traders, and may be an auditory sign of the declining fever of the American public.

Perhaps most important of all, the decision shows that U.S. monetary authorities are ready to play an active role in hastening the international price of bullion within reasonable limits when free trading becomes a reality.

It could play that role by again selling gold from Fort Knox if the world price should move above, say, $200—or buying it back if the price should drop below 125 for example.

Too high a bullion price would be inflationary. Too low a price would be unacceptable because it would diminish the value of gold reserves at a time when the energy crisis is creating a balance-of-payments deficit.

Individual investors who buy gold heavily in anticipation of monetary chaos were therefore taking a substantial risk—especially when speculation, safekeeping fees and loss of interest are taken into account.

Testimonial Dinners New Pitch By Conservatives' 'Blue Machine'

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Some years ago when Henry Lau was running for governor of Louisiana you may remember he had a winning slogan, "a chicken in every pot."

The Conservatives are introducing a new political campaign technique in Ontario which is somewhat along the same lines. Somewhat.

Their philosophy, or politicking, is based on an obvious live of the Hoer Lord Bervice.

You might say it is the "rubber chicken circuit," that is the political dinner, "a chicken and peas in every pot."

You may have noticed, though it's doubtful you have, that the PCs have made it one step in their gubernatorial campaigning.

They are now holding testimonial dinners as a strategic approach to the electorate.

A while ago there was one mounted here about such a testimonial dinner held for Consumer and Commercial Affairs Minister John Clement in his home riding of Niagara Falls.

Both this dinner and the contact on it were well described. Clement is an exceptional man.

But since then it has become apparent that this was only a kick-off to a gubatorial political campaign.

Also since then, there have been a number of such testimonial dinners including at least one for a grandfather, who has hardly said a word in the house.

Actually this strategy can be viewed as the latest manoeuvre of the Big Blue Machine and a wise one at that.

It is extremely hard for a political party to maintain riding interest between elections.

You have a certain number of riding meetings and suches parties, but all of them, you can expect only a certain dedicated turnout.

Just as you can make an occasion of a testimonial dinner.

Most of the cabinet ministers and the majority of the cabinet turns out. (Not to mention they are under orders to do so), then it is something extraordinary.

There will be attendance. And you will get a reminder through your personal mailing list that they are good PCs who "belong" and have a good job to do.

The old rubber chicken circuit still stands for good "eat" politics. Get it?

Flight From Cities—Yet Stress Is to Be Found in Country Too

Norman Webster in The Globe and Mail

A place in the country is the great Canadian dream. Every Mississauga masses yearn to breathe free amid the green fields and colorful maples of rural Ontario.

Increasingly, the dream is coming true. The newspaper supplements bloom with pictures of tastefully restored farmhouses full of antique furniture and city people in their weekend peasant clothes.

It all makes city life more bearable. It doesn't, though, do an awful lot for the rural community. Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart, for one, worries about the impact on country life of these new "urbanites."

"They bring with them a new set of social values not paralleled in tone with traditional rural Ontario," he notes. "There is not the same desire to communicate with the local community. They seem to be highly independent and prefer to remain that way."

They don't join local churches. Their fields often lie idle, choking weeds and goldenrod grass. They don't maintain line fences (an important matter in the country) There is little evidence, says Mr. Stewart, that the agriculturalist even will become a part of the whole in rural areas.

It's just another impact on a lifestyle that has known shock after shock in the past few decades. Mr. Stewart, a Middlesex farmer, who has lived through it all, took a thoughtful look at things last week.

Rural life is faster-paced now. The farmer is a man with a large investment in land, animals and machinery that can go sour in a matter of a single crop. "Bankruptcy today is quicker and more devastating than just a few short years ago," Mr. Stewart notes. "Even his income is that of his family of our rural concessions."

Stress and a tattering of the social fabric. With big city jobs beckoning and farms forced to become bigger to survive, farm families have lost the local interacting numbers. At the 1971 census, only 83 percent of Ontario's population was truly agricultural.

Farmers have become less dependent on their neighbors and the community, more dependent on themselves and their bags, costly machines. Gone are the days of Mr. Stewart's youth : "It may not remember as a child the barn-raisings here in our country. The sense of urgency and togetherness felt during threshing and silo-filling was contagious."

Today's farmer faces the problem of getting labor and the terrible moral question of who is to feed the world's hungry.

The labor problem is a difficult one. Farm work is hard and the pay low, for the owner as well as the worker. There is no doubt that farm workers, particularly the migrant pickers, do not live the life of Reilly. There must be protection and security.

Mr. Stewart, though, like most farmers, is wary of labor unions in the fields. "In the tobacco fields, a last harvest day can cost the farmer $1,000. Under these circumstances, the labor strike during the peak harvest would cripple, if not bankrupt, a lot of people," he senses.

Farmers are, in any case, suspicious of organized labor. Railways and port strikes that hit Prairie grain growers as hard as they do the employers. Coal lakes recently nearly halted the fire of Ontario winter fuel, Alberta packing house workers the movement of hogs and cattle. Nova Scotia drivers the pickup of milk.

Many farmers these days are as dependent on the moods of remote unions and management as on the traditional vagaries of the weather. There is little they can do about either, Stewart.

Then, the hungry. Everyone concedes that much of the food the world can't feasibly will have to be grown in North America, but still little effort is going into encouraging farmers to produce that food and ensuring they get a fair return for it.

The assumption seems to be that somehow it will get grown and given away by the producers. All the public, we're ready to fight starvation to the last farmer.

Two items in the Globe and Mail help make the point. A news story reported that food company profits boomed last year, as the firms maintained their traditional healthy markups. And a letter by Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, noted that a study in Ontario's Dundas County for the same 1971 showed farmers getting a magnificent $4,600; the labor of wives and children was included.

We subsidies like it that way. It has brought us cheap food for years, keeping the farmer close to the line while the rest of the food—industry — and society in general — has done very nicely, thank you.

That's how city people get together the money to buy those farm country planes from farmers who can't make a go of it any longer.

Canada, The U.S., And Energy Needs

The following is the text of a letter addressed to Energy, Mines and Resources minister, Donald MacDonald, by Jean Anderson of Belleville.

As a Canadian Canadian, I have been following the recent crisis, especially with respect to Ontario and Saskatchewan's role, as it affects Canadians, Canadian industry and the rest of the world.

First of all, when Canada's Prime Minister goes to France I immediately following a majority election victory, he tells that republic, via television:

The French (in France) don't know how lucky they are, relatively free: that it is free to exploit its resources as it wants; that it has the right to the control of education that it wants; that it has the right to its own civil code; that it is free to have the kind of life that it feels is have, my God, all the social advantages in the world."

—Edmonton Journal, October 22, 1974.

I will turns around and brings down a budget which continues the price of oil per barrel to Canada's two supplies at a low and lower, then I start asking myself some questions. Or is there a reasonable explanation I'm overlooking?

Take, for case, after the United States had reduced speeds on their highways from 70 miles per hour to 50 or 55 m.p.h. and many service stations had folded (at least in New York and the New England States) my husband and I motored through the United States to Nantucket for the summer months. Leaving the U.S.-Canada border at 4 a.m. motorist, almost without exception, was doing 70 miles per hour, passing heavy transports, reducing one's speed to 50 m.p.h. as we approached Buffalo. But it was quite obvious that the driver considered it was going one step further — he or she can't drive over the maximum. At one of the fill-ups (and there were many more then — no line-ups, no quota) my husband asked the reason for the driver that we had just speed noted on the highways. Granted it was not a scientific but it was interesting. The attendant informed us the motorist had discovered he saved 2 cents a gallon. Gasoline appreciably by going 5 to 10 miles slower than the maximum.

On November 17, we headed for Orlando Florida, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York State, crossing at Ogdensburg, onto the 401 to Belleville — a distance of 1,400 miles where we hit Maine we were forced to slow down to 50 and —or 55 mph. Our last border crossing was, then Eastern Canada gave us around 22 miles to the gallon. At St. Johnsbury, Vt., we decided, after many years, to use our speed limits, to test the mileage. The next fill-up after we crossed into Canada gave us a reading of 36 miles to the gallon.

It wasn't long after hitting the Trans-Canada that the needle found its way back, and occasionally 7's or more to pass a transport or a fast driver, in spite of the posted 60 for trucks. We just couldn't see we were back in the land of plenty. We thought we had found that Alberta and Saskatchewan would enjoy the rest of Canada with "milk and honey" at a fixed price.

How does there appear to be, here in Eastern Canada at least, a deliberate effort to conserve electricity. We could reduce our hydro bill by a third with a 40-watt bulb with a 20-watt in purchased for the hall and the livingroom with one table or floor lamp. Instead we are now using a reading lamp only, if one finds it few moments to read a paper, and the rest in the kitchen and elsewhere instead of darkness during the day, etc., etc.

The way I see it:

Alberta and Saskatchewan should own jurisdiction over their natural resources, just as the Prime Minister says Quebec has the right to its resources as it wants. You cannot make one province pay for those of another.

As in the United States, all the provinces, including Quebec, should have a speed limit on all highways and byways and not so necessary policies to see that reduced speeds are observed. It has been proven in recent report that those on the highway in the U.S. has been reduced by as much as 50 per cent.

Hungary Curbs Its Smokers

Eric Bourne in The Christian Science Monitor

In an effort to curb the growth of smoking among teen-agers, Hungary has banned cigarettes in primary and secondary schools and made known the ill health hazards of smoking an obligatory part of all educational curricula.

The smoking ban applies to teachers as well as pupils during school working hours.

"It is impossible to stamp out surreptitious smoking among schoolchildren," an official says, "but we will make it as difficult as we can for them. We will try to see that at least they begin to indulge the habit as late as possible and, at the same time, educate them about its ill effects."

Cigarette consumption in Hungary has already doubled since the early '60's. The major increase has been among the young with 14 percent of 14-to 15-year-olds, 27 percent of 18 to 19-year-olds and 40 percent of 19-to 19-year-olds counted as regular smokers.

The country's first antitobacco action has already greatly reduced or eliminated smoking in large, indoor public meetings and on public transport. Underground and many other brands of wheat that have made the Hungarian name Knight Bachelor in the King's birthday honors list.

The Real Meaning of Christmas

Editor,

The Intelligencer:

Christmas does not have to be an orgy of booze, bamboozled and busted bank accounts. For Christmas is a signpost on the rugged road of human hope and endeavour — a sequined mantle upon the shoulders of a weary world.

Christmas is love — exalt it; Christmas is hope — bless it. It is joy to be sung, trust to be preserved and fellowship to be shared. Christmas is faith — declare it; it is mystery — unfold it; it is brotherhood — embrace it. Christmas is in the heart of a child, a carol, in the memories of an old man, in the concern of a mother and

Work Took More Than Two Bombs

Editor,

The Intelligencer:

It was with great pleasure I read your article about York in Saturday night's edition. I was born in York and in spite of all my wanderings it is still home.

However, I must contradict your statement that York took only two bombs during the war. I agree in regard to older cities we were extremely lucky, but April 29, 1942 was the night Hitler put down on his "Baedeker" list.

In retaliation for the R.A.F. bombing he decided to go through his travel book.

Coventry and London of course were the main targets, but York sure took a pasting that night. I was only 13 at the time — my Dad was working nights at the munition factory so that left my mother and myself home to look after the siren went.

We made our way on to the cellar steps (basement stairs) and then we huddled on a big blanket round us and I sang to her to try to drown out and to deafen the noise of the bombs falling around.

God was good and we were spared, but there were so many who lost their lives, their cherished homes and everything they owned.

The Yorkshire Evening Press was the Yorkshire Journalists' main ex every April 29 even now.

We were lucky, as I said, compared with other places — but just two bombs - I'd be interested to know where you got your information from!

Incidentally, the whitewashing done on the show up in your picture of the must are in fact to help the drivers — when they are all in black - York is a picture to behold.

MRS. JEAN COULTAS

Legislature Taking Brief Holiday Break

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature might take only a brief Christmas break and resume sittings in January, Premier William Davis said Friday.

He said the legislature the government wants proposed legislation put to be introduced on election financing and redistribution of electoral boundaries deal with in the current session.

Traditionally, the legislature ends sittings in December and resumes in March.

Eric Winkler, chairman of management board of cabinet, responsible for scheduling house business, said the government does not intend to keep late hours.

He said the government does not want to be accused of hindering debate by extending evening sessions early into the morning.

The premier confirmed reports that he had postponed a planned trip to Israel because of the workload before the house.

His announced seven weeks was that he would visit Israel in early January for about a week.

The two announcements Friday led to speculation that the government might call a spring election.

Whelan Doubts Rise In Grain Prices

AYLMER, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Friday the recent strike by grain inspectors is unlikely to cause an increase in grain prices in Canada.

He also said the backlog of grain piled up at the Lakehead should start moving by Monday.

Fourteen ships were scheduled to start for ports on the lower lakes during the weekend.

"If we can have those moving and pray for warm weather, there shouldn't be a problem," Mr. Whelan said in an interview. He was in this town near St. Thomas to address a service club meeting.

Even if grain ships do not deliver their cargo before the Dec. 17 close of the St. Lawrence seaway, it would not affect the supply or price of grain fed to cattle because less than seven per cent of eastern cattle are fed on western grain, he said.

And if freeze-up comes early, he added, his department has prepared plans to cope with the situation.

One example was an experiment with trains 250 cars long—about twice the normal length—capable of moving 250,000 tons of grain from the Lakehead.

Judge Makes Appeal For Guard Testimony

TORONTO (CP) — A royal commission inquiry into allegations of brutality toward prisoners at the Toronto jail met only briefly Friday before being adjourned until Monday.

Judge Barry Shapiro of the county court, presiding over the provincially-ordered hearings, appealed for testimony from more former guards at the jail, formerly the Don Jail.

He commended former guard Bruce McClay, one of two to have testified so far, "for coming forward with information you felt might be helpful to the public."

Mr. McClay testified that he had seen a correctional guard beat a prisoner and yank a handful of hair from his head.

The earlier witness, Gary Dizzy, had asked to be excused from continuing his testimony because financial problems made him ill and emotionally upset.

Nurses Get 50 Per Cent Pay Hike

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Registered and public health nurses at the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Valley health unit have been awarded 50-per-cent salary increases in a one-year contract, an official of the nurses' association said Friday.

Starting salary for a registered nurse rises to $11,340 from $7,750. The maximum, after seven years' experience, is $13,740. The previous maximum was $9,820.

Public health nurses, who hold university degrees in addition to their nursing certificates, will start at $12,574, and go to $14,964 after seven years. Top salary after five years' previously was $9,944.

Florence Forrest, president of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Valley Health Unit Nurses Association, said the aim of the association—parity with hospital nurses—has been reached.

There are about 12 members of the unit in Cornwall.

The contract takes effect Jan. 1 and expires Dec. 31, 1975. It was arrived at as the result of conciliation talks concluded Tuesday between the nurses association and the health unit board.

Tories Gear For Election

TORONTO (CP) — The message from Ontario cabinet ministers to Progressive Conservative party faithful around the province is clear.

In the words of that old Bing Crosby song, "accentuate the positive."

The theme has been heard repeatedly in different parts of Ontario over the last two weeks as party leaders—stunned by four straight byelection losses and polls which show a slip in government popularity—attempt to get ready for the next provincial election.

Observers believe the election may come this spring—if the government can find an issue which it believes is popular enough to campaign on.

Premier William Davis told a Toronto riding association earlier this week in "no aggressive" became the "time is coming" for a provincial election.

Sugar Is Culprit In Rising Costs

Eighteen months ago a 10 lb. bag of sugar cost $1.43 according to the Ontario Food Council. Last Friday it cost $7.85. The council says that this is responsible for the increase in price in many processed foods. In fact, marginal reductions in the prices of meat, fruit and vegetables were not enough to offset the food Marketing Board's basket cost increase of $1.38 to $60.39 during the month of November. Sugar, cereals, syrups, baked goods and dairy products caused the increase.

The potsettia you find under the tree Christmas morning can be recycled if you look after it properly.

One of Canada's leading developers of poinsettias advises that you check the soil to be sure it is moist. When it's dry to the touch, water thoroughly but not to excess; don't allow water to collect in the pot. Place the poinsettia in a sunny window, away from drafts and rising currents of heat. The plant will thrive in a 70 degree daytime temperature and a 65 degree nighttime temperature.

You can transplant the poinsettia to the garden too. In March, remove the flower and cut the stems back to six inches. In June, repot to a large pot and plant outside in the ground. Cut back again in July to four inches and in late August, bring the plant inside and expose it to darkness from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. Bring it out again in early December.

Speaking of Christmas (already?), the tree you buy from a lot has been cut a long long time. It's dry and, therefore, better firewood than decoration. But never mind, if you water it faithfully you probably won't have a fire. As long as you don't have candles on the tree. Use electric lights - if they're like ours, they don't short circuits - and keep trimmings away from the lights.

Speaking of taking down the tree (?already?), turn it into a bird feeder after Christmas by tying it to the clothesline pole and hanging suet and seed balls from the limbs.

Victorian Christmas Comes to Glanmore

As you come through the door into the grand entrance hallway of Glanmore House, the nose tells you it's Christmas.

The rich and spicy scent of gingerbread and cakes, the smell of cedar wreaths and pine boughs, of orange-and-cloves pomanders and that indefinable aroma of a great house spruced up for the holidays, makes your spirits rise.

Given time to look through the museum, you'll see elaborate decorations that volunteers have made and hung to create an authentic Victorian atmosphere.

Research into the 19th-century period has turned up information that the Hastings County Historical Society decorating committee have used in their decorating scheme.

For example, you'll notice several bouquets of red roses, made of paper or velvet, throughout the museum. Roses, it seems, were very Christmassy, the equivalent of today's poinsettias.

The enormous Christmas tree is decked out in popcorn and cranberry ropes, made by the students of Harry J. Clarke Public School.

The boys under the tree, as well as many of the other decorations on the branches, were part of the Christmas season before the turn of the century.

Margret Wiggins was chief organizer of the groups of women and student guides who arranged and hung the decorations.

During a two-day "campaign" earlier this week, these volunteers created garlands of greenery, wreaths, bows and centre-pieces to highlight the mantles, doors, tables and mirrors of every room.

In Mrs. Simpson's kitchen a display of typical Victorian holiday fare includes pound cake, gingerbread men and mincemeat made by Grade Nine Occupational students from Centennial Secondary School.

The museum will feature a wide range of activities during December, starting out with party-dress rides around the grounds Sunday, December 8 between 2 and 4 p.m.

A marionette performance is planned for December 9, The evening show, which is being arranged especially for children begins at 7 p.m.

December 10 at 7 p.m. music lovers can attend a performance of Christmas music played by the Eastern Ontario String Quartet.

Wednesday evening a different kind of music — arterested in attending Frank Ique entertains and will be in Foley's music box entertainment, starting at 7 p.m.

Thursday's evening a carol fest and demonstration of Victorian Christmas decorations begins at 7 p.m.

A magic lantern show for children takes place Friday evening, given by Harry Mulhall. Also on the program are a number of Christmas selections performed by the Belleville Theatre Guild for the grown-ups.

Putting the last finishing touches to the museum's ceiling-high Christmas tree are Ruth Gmeelinger and Shirley Norton, two of the more than 30 people involved this week in decorating every room in authentic Victorian style.

Little Old Schoolhouse Turns Into Artists' Studio

Stories and Pictures By Isabel Huggan

If buildings could have feelings, the little white schoolhouse in Ameliasburgh would be happy.

Since Barbara Whelan became its "benefactor", the schoolhouse has had its windows unboarded and repaired, and its wooden floors swept clean. After 10 years of sitting alone and unfinished on the edge of the village, it is filled with laughter and learning again.

Mrs. Whelan rescued the building a year ago, and has been able to rent rent it from Ameliasburgh township in return for fixing it up for use as an art studio.

Although the oil heater doesn't keep the large room sufficiently warm for winter use, in other seasons Mrs. Whelan uses the studio to give art classes. This autumn she has been joined by Bea Williamson who has instructed four women in the art of plaster sculpture.

Mrs. Whelan's class of eight paint with oils. The informal atmosphere of the studio allows the women to paint how and what they please, with assistance always available from Mrs. Whelan.

"I explain the basics of oil painting at the beginning - color mixing, composition and form - and then let them go ahead on their own," she says.

Although this autumn term was planned as an outdoors class, rainy weather has meant the painters have switched to learning still life techniques. Since they are the only ones to use the studio, the painters can leave their easels and displays up from one week to the next, an added advantage for the class.

Mrs. Whelan is delighted with how well her project has turned out, and plans to use the studio more frequently in the future. At this point she is also busy teaching drawing and oil painting for the city's Recreation Department, and for Loyalist College.

Her classes for painters in the early stages of their artistic development, always emphasize the individual approach, she says. This is evident in the varied canvases being painted at the schoolhouse, where originality is encouraged by Mrs. Williamson as well.

The onset of winter has closed the schoolhouse studio for this year, but Mrs. Whelan and Mrs. Williamson plan to start classes again as soon as spring comes again.

Plaster and Resin

G.F. Micks examines her handiwork during the last sculpture class of the autumn. A student of Bea Williamson's, Mrs. Micks created this sculpture of plaster-drenched cheesecloth on a wire frame, and then coated it with resin.

Paint on Canvas

Judy Hall, one of Barbara Whelan's oil painting students, works here at a portrait of her pet dog. A newcomer to the area, Mrs. Hall says that joining the art classes has helped her feel part of the community.

Ann Landers

Men, Like Dolphins, Can Grieve to Death

Dear Ann Landers: When dolphins are kept in captivity and no longer want to live, they shut off their own oxygen and suffocate. Some of the experts in the behavioral sciences believe heart attacks may be a similar method of "ending it all." Not of course, but there is much more subtle and sophisticated.

My father is a railroad engineer. When one of the men he was working with hit a car with a woman and children in it, he really went to pieces. He kept talking about how he could see their faces and those kids, their heads sticking out of windows while their mother tried to start the car that was stalled on the tracks. That engineer could talk of nothing else for days, and that he had a fatal heart attack. Dad says he really grieved himself to death.

Please, Ann, print this letter. You can use a few words about how people try to run the train, go through signals lights, and letters all warning them. Nobody wants to be ripped to pieces.

I'm still in high school and afraid of what my life will be like when I go to college. I was so much to get along with people but I just can't control my ugly mouth. Please Ann, help me. I'll do whatever you say—Big Mouth

Dear Friend: A problem recognized is a problem half solved. At least you know what is wrong and you are eager to do something about it.

There's a great deal of anger and hostility that needs to come out but in ways that won't hurt you or others. I suggest counseling. When you are able to talk to a professional—someone you trust on an outstanding basis, you'll find that you won't blow up at those you love because you'll have rid yourself of the gut-up emotions. Get going—and good luck to you.

Dear Ann Landers: I want to comment on the 14-year-old boy who had completely shot his position as the "youngest" child because I'm one of those baby kids.

I am 17 and have two sisters ahead of me. I can see both the faults and the good points in my sisters, which for their characteristics in myself. I sit back and learn from their experiences.

I never worry about teachers who spend having "another one of the family." My sisters make a good impression wherever they go. I am proud to follow them.

I hope every "youngest child" will give a thought to how lucky he is to have an example to follow—Lost Not Lost.

Dear Lost: Refreshing to receive a letter as full of admiration for older sisters. Thanks for a cheerful little earful.

Doris Clark

Dear Doris: I found your article in Canadian Welfare, about nursing homes, to be interesting, easy to read and of course your usual polite way of giving messages was appareed.

While reading the section: "Are Staff Entirely to Blame?" I couldn't help thinking that the service aspect of services seems to be disappearing. Yes, there are still many who care about the people they work with; but I keep finding more and more individuals who appear to be more centered on themselves than the people they should be serving.

I'm convinced that many people are under such tremendous pressure (and you indicate this in your article) in their daily lives - house, financial, marital, family basic dependency needs unmet, personal feelings of inadequacy - that they really don't have all that much to give. They themselves need others to give to them.

I feel what you have said ((about people who serve needing to show that they care) is relevant in the whole medical-dental clinics, social service agencies, schools, the corner garage. You'd just have to change the odd word and examples, but the message is valid and would apply.

I enjoyed your article and hope it causes a few of us to reflect on our attitudes to others and at times how we cause needless pain. I was just looking out the window and realized that often we could change the word patient to victim. Now that's sad!

P'd best think of something positive before I get too depressed. Actually the things you said are true and we must work to improve conditions. Nevertheless, had you written an article on the care of the aged in New Brunswick seven or eight years ago it would have been much different. Real gains have been made in the care of the aged.

Unfortunately society changes and the old quality of dedication is often absent. I think of people like my mother, my mother-in-law and many of the homemakers I worked with in Edmonton. They are people we give freely and have the knack of doing what is right. A colleague's mother used to say: "What can I get out of it?"

Two to three years ago personnel in a certain nursing home went on strike. It was a sad situation. Volunteers were asked to help. My mother, who was 68, and another man went day after day to help. Dad tried to get others involved. He was laughed at and considered a sucker since he wasn't getting paid for his efforts at the home.

Many who laughed at my dad may just be in that nursing home within the next couple of years. It is surprising that they didn't make this connection. They are so close to requiring the same kind of help.

Another Social Worker, Dear Colleague: I don't like that new philosophy about what-can-I-get-out-of-it, individuals you have a point there. In our hardboiled material society we seem to have forgotten the Golden Rule.

We also seem to have forgotten Biblical saying about casting your bread upon the waters.

As Lady Cholmondeley said, "The waste of life lies in the loveless years." And given the hope we have not shared, the selfish pursuits which bring nothing, and shrinken pain, misses happiness as well."

After 400 Years

Francis Xavier's Body Starts to Deteriorate

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims will journey to Goa on the west coast of India this year for perhaps the last viewing of the embalmed body of the great Catholic missionary and adventurer Saint Francis Xavier.

Incorruptibility has always been considered by most Catholics as a sign of sanctity, and since his death over 400 years ago Saint Francis Xavier's body has defied the decay which follows death.

Still remarkably preserved, though shrunken and darkened, the body may be exposed for the 13th and last time in the faithful by decision of church authorities in predominantly Catholic Goa, blossomed into the Society of Jesus, the Jesuits, which Loyola founded six years later.

Francis was already "priest in Venice in June, 1537, and was troubadouring near by" Pope Paul III and King John III of Portugal to work for the welfare of the people in the vast eastern Portuguese empire, arriving in Goa in May, 1542.

With Goa as his headquarters, he spent 10 years travelling through India to Ceylon, Japan, Malacca, Malaya, Indonesia and to Canton, the gateway to the isolated but highly civilized China.

It was the fascination perhaps of this sophisticated civilization, so long untouched by the West because of the vast tropical forests of Burma, the mountains of Mongolia and the sea, which drew Francis there in 1552.

In fact after spending two months vainly trying to cross the rainbeards he used a island, off Canton in China) Canton off the south coast of China near Canton, on Dec. 3, 1552, aged 46.

It is not clear how, but by March 15, 1554, Francis Xavier's body was brought back to Goa.

The reports of miracles he is said to have worked during his lifetime were undoubtedly part of the evidence which led the church to canonize him on Nov. 24, 1622.

The fact that his body has not decayed, and further reports of miracles such as the curing of diseases, has led many Catholics to make their way to Goa to venerate his remains.

One pilgrim, Portuguese noblewoman Dona Isabel de Castro, is said to have bitten off the body's right toe to keep as a relic.

A legend says that the foot bled profusely then though the incident was two years after death and it only stopped when she returned the toe.

The body's right arm is missing and is believed to be preserved by the Jesuits in Rome. According to church history it was severed and then taken to Rome during the counter-reformation investigations to show the body had not decayed.

Pilgrims this year will not be allowed to touch the body, which will remain inside a crystal casket which they can touch or kiss at the feet of the Bom Jesus Basilica in old Goa.

They are to be carried in a palanquin, a calm and picturesque way to see with churches, convents and monasteries.

The Goanese, a musical and humorous people, will certainly enjoy entertaining their visitors.

They are enthusiastic drinkers and the authorities have granted temporary permits to open more liquor shops and bars to meet tourist demands.

School buildings have been requisitioned in various towns to provide dormitorystyle accommodation, while two months' school vacation have been declared.

History Is Christ's Story

By DR. GORDON C. SMITH

The family tree of the Queen antedates Alfred the Great. Matthew announces: "The book of the genesis of Jesus Christ, the son of David" (1:1). Do we appreciate that reference in the carols we like to sing? Do we regret these as merely delightful folk-lore? History is its story.

The centuries have been rough this every time educational news related to nativity belief. For in stance, in 1947 an Arab boy stumbled into a cave at Qumran and found the first of the Dead Sea Scrolls.

In due course, John Marco Allegro, lecturer on Old Testament and lolertestamental studies at Manchester University, made headlines. He said, "The Church is going to be scourged as never before. The very possibility that Jesus ever existed is open to question."

The dust raised in the Caves has settled and with it the furore. Those that threw it was a "Christ before Christ" and that there is nothing distinctive in the New Testament are no longer believed only by generally esteemed scholars.

In linking Jesus with history, the Advent title "Sion of David" links him to humanity. The average person does not realize that throughout its early history the Church Universal was of its initial intellectual battles to emphasize the humaneness of Jesus. But God, and as though he were man.

His body was a normal human body. (He knew what it was like to be hungry). His emotional life was human. (He experienced and spiritual life were human life developed, as Luke reports in 2:52). In the garden of Gethsemane he prayed, not as though he were God, but as though he were man.

The apostles, strict monotheists, did not start by thinking of Jesus as divine but by being drawn to him as personally human. He was to them as he must be to us, first of all man, and then divine in what sense he can be divine.

In him was condensed all that is good and elevated in human nature. Paul can appeal to youth in "Godspell" and in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

The former Archbishop of Canterbury writes of him as what may be considered a complimentary way. Then Dr. Michael Ramsey says, "However if we are faithful to the Gospels we shall never see Jesus as himself the goal."

There is a mystery to the Man that one only solves through the discipline of study and by the spiritual depth of the choices that one makes.

Saul of Tarsus solved the mystery. Malcolm Muggeridge has solved it. For you, too, was born in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord.

Filipinos Believe In Various Spirits

MANILA (Reuter) — Superstitious beliefs are held among the 40 million people of this deeply religious republic in southeast Asia.

Despite the influence of education and penetration of the rural areas by radio, many folk in towns and villages throughout the 7,000 island archipelago still talk about spirits.

Sometimes these spirits are visible, sometimes unseen. They can make a person sick, drive him insane or direct him to buried treasure.

The spirits vary across the country.

In the central Philippines people talk about the aswang which can suck the blood of a sleeping person by poking its needle-like tongue through the rust of a house.

A pregnant woman must always be guarded by her husband, especially at night when the aswang is near. He must cut the evil tongue with a knife before it reaches his wife's skin.

In the northern Philippines, villagers speak of a beatless priest or a beautiful girl, immaculately white at midnight, who can turn into a pig or a dog. Only the flash of a quickly struck match can drive the spirits away.

The manmalan, a human being empowered by a spirit, can make his enemies, and even members of his family, fall sick. The victim can only be cured by the manmalan or by a quack doctor, not by recourse to medicine.

There is an air-to-air strike out in the middle of the night. The cry must be ignored or sickness will follow. Mischievous are the mischievous Ribban, tiny beings who steal chickens or food from the kitchen.

There are also benevolent spirits which at midnight give a favored one directions to find a buried jar of coins.

Superstition surrounds marriages, births, buildings and practically anything in the life of country folk.

The instances of the dark outline on the moon is St. Michael, who is toiling down the actions of God's creatures.

A pregnant woman who sees a solar or a lunar eclipse must immediately rinse her hair with rice straw to prevent a miscarriage. She is also advised not to leave the house at twilight without a bead scarf, to prevent having a bald child.

When a mother has to leave her sleeping child, salt, garlic and a knife must be left with it to scare away evil spirits. A maiden shot must sing in front of the stove or she will marry a widower.

In the north, farmers offer the dead cooked rice to ensure a good harvest.

In the central Philippines, if death is followed by heavy rain or a thunderstorm, people say the deceased was a good man because even the heavens weep for him. If a person comes in front of a corpse, he will also die soon.

Layoffs Bleaker Christmas Faces 400

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

General softening of markets and surplus of inventories has darkened the Christmas season for up to six Belleville and Picton area industrial workers. For them the business squeeze has meant layoffs.

Belleville has been hardest hit. Three weeks ago, 139 were laid off at Northern Electric, and "in excess of 70" employees from Black Diamond Tires weeks ago. Friday brought news of up to 100 jobs affected at Stanley Stove-Iroquois. These companies are major city-area employers.

In Picton, 135 employees at the Proctor-Lewyt plant will be sent home for a month starting Dec. 13.

A spokesman for the Canada Manpower office in Belleville said it is difficult to guess how many of these people have inquired about replacement jobs, although a "number of Northern employers" have seen Manpower officials.

Northern Electric employees have the blackest outlook as the labor picture since there is no certainty that they'll be recalled. The company has a brief statement at the time of the layoffs that the cutback was the result of a "softening U.S. market."

A company spokesman said Friday "several" more layoffs at the plant are totally unsubstantiated".

He made no guess when employees might return to their jobs.

At Black Diamond, general manager Jack Bigg said 14 of 76 laid-off employees have been brought back to the plant. The operation remains on "skeleton" staff for normal staffing, he said.

He blamed the layoffs on a fickle marketplace which is housing inventories low.

"The retail purchaser is directly contingent upon market conditions," Mr. Bigg said. "We hope for a more settled condition in January . . . (with) the vast majority of employees back in the early portion of the year."

Stanley Structures announced up to 100 employees will be laid off two days prior to Christmas. The blow is softened somewhat by Christmas period holidays pay that will cover one week of the projected, three-week slowdown. The company said layoffs at this factory are normal in the precast concrete business and all workers will definitely be recalled.

Again, market conditions are blamed at Proctor-Lewyt which plans a total shutdown of its 140 employee operation for at least one month.

A company spokesman said the shutdown is the result of an excessive inventory of finished products.

A survey of 15 major firms in the city taken Friday shows a strong outlook for 1975 with the early portion of 1975 with no other cutbacks.

A number of firms indicated layoffs are a possibility early in the spring but would not be longer or last longer than normally required by seasonal operations.

Cattle Drown Through Ice

ROSSMORE — Eight head of cattle drowned earlier this week when they wandered on thin ice on the Bay of Quinte.

The animals belonged to Cecil Tomlinson of RR7, Belleville, who had turned them out in a pasture across from Belleville General Hospital on the Ameliasburg township side of the bay.

Greenhouses Available

Belleville's parks department will have first chances in buying the greenhouses once used by federal entomology researchers in the city.

The structures — at one-time East Dundas St. federal research centre — have now been placed with the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation at "zero dollar value" with the city's interests "protected," Mayor Robin Jeffrey told city council this week.

Fire in Garage

Sidney township's fire department early today was called to a fire in the garage at the residence of Dr. Harold Williamson on Highway 2.

Provincial police said the apparent cause was a short in wiring. The garage and a car in it were damaged in the blaze.

Sidney township's deputy fire chief said the fire started in the area of an electric motor that lifts the garage doors automatically. Damage to the two-car garage and the unoccupied furnished apartment above was estimated at $30,000.

Tidy Break on Taxes -- If Payments Early

Sidney township residents will get a 7.5 percent break on their 1975 tax bills if payment is made in January — in accordance with a municipal tax pre-payment program.

Robert Vandervoort, township treasurer, said this week full discount would be available for only those taxes paid in January. During the period Feb. 1 to June 14, residents may capitalize on a 3.5 percent savings.

By inducing residents to pay their taxes prior to the September cutoff date, the council is free to use any surplus from the previous year against county council and school board tax levies — meaning a similar discount savings. Early receipt of tax money also provides council with cash to begin winter projects.

Last January the township saw the largest prepayment ever by residents — $28,000.

It is still unknown what revenues will be derived through investments but it is expected to exceed 1975. That year such income knocked three mills off the total tax bill for 1974, said Mr. Vanderveort.

Reeve Gord Wilman said while money management by township staff creates revenues that seem to reduce the mill rate — this revenue is eaten by inflation. But "without the investments our tax bill would be that much worse through inflation," he said.

Reeve Wilman said council was seeking to guard against increasing the mill rate but at the same time it is unlikely investment revenue will decrease the rate.

Two priorities for the coming year are increased roads programs and sanitation treatments and preparation for fire hall construction in the Bayside area.

Hastings Council Holds Final Session

Hastings County Council next week holds its final session of 1974.

The discussions — next Tuesday and Wednesday — will include presentation of final reports from several committees, appointments and various resolutions.

Resolutions from other municipalities include notices on returnable glass containers, welfare legislation and Bell Canada and the public interest.

Festival Gets Prizes

Belleville city council this week received its donation of two $100 prizes to the annual Rotary Music Festival.

Rotary clubs in Trenton and Belleville will combine for the 1975 festival, scheduled for Feb. 25,26.

The Paper Piles Up

Wastepaper is piling up for dealers like Marvin Holzman of Belleville, as glutted market slows demand, sends prices tumbling. The problem across North America has also hit paper recycling projects.

Wastepaper Market Collapse

Recycling Runs Into Crash

The North American wastepaper market has slumped.

And, out of the cascade of crash-diving prices has fallen a concrete new up for city hall consideration — Belleville's recycling project.

It's a dilemma shared by many communities — including the United States' centres — with similar resources-recovery schemes.

The problem in Belleville: Recycling launched more than a year ago, is not strictly a municipal undertaking. It is a co-ordinated scheme in which pickup and transportation costs are offset by selling the wastepaper collected. But, a dramatic demand decline has brought a continent-wide price crash. Current prices now are suddenly only meagre fractions of what's needed to cover costs.

The problem became apparent to civic authorities in Belleville this week.

Aldi. Jean Smith, initiating co-ordinator of the recycling scheme, took it to city hall and has confirmed it was discussed in camera. But, says a resolution on the issue will be presented to the next regular meeting of council.

Meantime she is emphatic the project will continue — with street pickups of household material — as it's running as usual.

Temporarily, she says, that citizens who have voluntarily co-operated for so long not be the discouraged from on-going participation.

John Graham, president of Quinte Sanitation Services Ltd. — who runs the pickup services — indicates the same thing.

There's a conglomerate of causes given for the slump. A few years ago producers from the continent began to recycled waste to subsidize production surplus. Recently, fears of shortages caused pig buying-ups by paper companies. Now, a slowing economy is hitting business generally. Together they compounds the market problem.

"The world demand is desperate for paper," she said.

In Toronto recycling projects now are being subsidized and the paper stockpiled, said the city controller.

She praised Mr. Graham for tremendous public service and said he often had lost money while guiding the project.

The service is "going to continue" and householders should not cease saving wastepaper for the monthly pickups.

Such programs are the start of resource recovery on which future economies will depend, she believed.

Downtown Fatality, Woman Dies

An elderly woman, Mrs. Teresa Gertrude Grace of George St. died in Belleville General Hospital Friday night after being struck by a car at the intersection of Front and Market Streets, Inside City Hall.

Police said Mrs. Barrett was in the north-south crosswalk at the intersection when the delivery truck, driven by Alan Wilson of 49 Grier St., collided with her. Time of the accident was about 4:30 p.m. at the start of rushhour jaglutes at about 5 p.m.

Shooting Suspect In Custody At Hospital

MARMORA — A Hamilton man, held by police custody in hospital today, charged with attempting to murder with intent to wound.

Provincial police have charged Peter Dennis Gale, 21 Hamilton early this morning after being shot by OPP officers on Highway 7, west of Marmora.

Police said a shotgun was discharged in the direction of Leo O'Shea, 23, of RR 1 Springbrook and his brother, Walter, 21, when they were scraping ice off the windshield of their car parked in front of the Royal Hotel at 2:30 a.m. a few minutes later, a shotgun was discharged through the windows of a car belonging to Mr. and Mrs. James Walker, RR4, Marmora causing $75 damages.

The O'Shea brothers, Mr. Walker and Don Mallon, owner of the hotel pursued a half-ton truck west on Highway 7 and forced it off the road. They pulled the barrel of a shotgun sticking out the window of the truck and the gun discharged. No one was injured by the shotgun blasts.

Hospital officials and police today would not give details of Mr. Gale's injuries.

High Feed Costs, Sagging Sales Prices

Farmers Forced to Kill Off Cattle

By CARL MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

Quinte area slaughterhouses have already slapped killing cattle or are booked on into next year as farmers cull feeding numbers to get rid of animals they say they can't afford to feed.

Sagging beef prices to the farmer and feed costs unconnected to keep animals that are near slaughtering weight.

Sam Dean, partner in Dean and McCamus Abattoir, largest in the area, has stopped killing altogether and will not resume until the new year. He's expanded this year and draw clients from as far as Port Hope, Bancroft and Hilton, we just can't keep up," Mr. Dean said.

"The farmers would sooner slaughter their cattle than feed them, it's as simple as that," said Mr. Dean. "Even a bale now, you can be sure it will be it in February or March."

Another problem is shortage of qualified slaughterhouse help. "We've appealed to Manpower offices as far away as Toronto, but the qualified people just aren't available," said Mr. Dean.

Farmers increasingly are getting into the freezer-order business themselves rather than sell to larger packing houses all prevailing low prices and additional pressures on smaller slaughterhouses. And more hobby farmers who are feeding a few head of cattle are getting out of the business by liquidating their assets, Mr. Dean said.

"We slaughtered 97 head last week," the hard-pressed butcher said. "We've been working a six-day week since the middle of October, from six in the morning to nine at night, at least three days a week and we can't keep up.

"We have the plant to handle the business but the help is unobtainable. If we could find the people, we could run two eight-hour shifts." I'd like to see Loyalist College run a course in butchering. We could sure use the help."

Mounting Workload Pressures Pose City Politics Problem

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Local governments come in

So do the issues they serve to solve.

But, there is one constant of contemporary civic service: The inevitability of growth. And, with it, the mounting pressure of work on what once was a spare-time political involvement.

In fact, such is the time demand on civic political participation, it had a selected section of this week's re-elected Belleville city hall veterans admitting to a common concern.

Their preoccupation: The workload of government now is so demanding — with no ceiling in sight — it could become a root problem of local government in a city Belleville's size. Fewer citizens may be able to afford the time — or the income lost in the process.

It's not a projected problem, felt the aldermanic and unsuccessful Prospective politicians are by. The Intelligencer being discouraged right now.

One solution offered: Increase the $5,000 now paid a city councillor to attract men and women whose business might suffer by service — $10,000 or $12,000 annually.

But, time also is an excuse of the issue — where to find more spare hours for discerning decisions as local government's leadership demands.

Today, a councillor must also devote time to being informed if he is to specialize in assigned duties, be available to the public and attend frequently - needed consultants and experts.

He's recorded since more this week as a councillor, Aldi. Paul Russell now reviews: "It was really the time involved that I found the hardest to go for-mayor 'in the past two years."

"I was just not sure I could afford the time to do a good job."

But, the highest office aside, even as an alderman his service is hedged by the time available for the workload he indicates.

Aldi. Aldi — adds from council sessions — even now there are several other meetings I can't attend simply because I'm at the meeting I must be involved elsewhere in city business.

Aldi. Reid anymore just seems to be unending. "This year we seem to be going into something new," says the alderman, even with the council and chairman of the parks board.

there's no reason to expect it to change".

The information stream is what councillors are supposed to soak up if they're to be pertinent on all aspects of community government — from planning to parking meters.

Can they?

Aldi. Ann Corke, front-runner in last Monday's election, says "The thing that bothers me, fundamentally a b o t i s formula government — when do you get the time to do an indepth study of it; that the job entails? I don't think that many have the time to go into all things in the depth they would like . . .

Councillors are assigned as contacts to appointed boards and commissions who play a crucial civic advisory role.

When they report back to city hall, they just have to believe to a considerable extent in their colleagues, their earnestness, concern and wisdom," explains Aldi. Corke.

But, the time demands made by such groups also has expanded.

Aldi. Jack Ireland, who served his first term in 1967 compares a parks board then to what it is now. It's a month for maybe "just an hour" with discussion then of a total annual $13,000 budget. Now the entire city political administration system has not only expanded but "exploded".

Aldi. Sid Meeks figures he's luckier than most in dealing with the paper fallout from the explosion.

As ambulance operator, he's put himself on an overnight shift to try to keep current on information involved in his various appointments. To do "the job well I feel I should requires close to seven hours reading a day," he estimates.

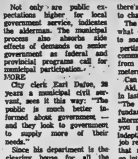
Aside from council and committee meetings, time also has to be found to answer and pursue personal issues.

Alderman Ireland, traffic committee chairman, knows of it he got one call a month from a late citizen, that was about it".

Aldi. It's nothing to get a couple of calls a day. They're not irate — they just want service. They want you to go out and look at things, and of course you can't refuse."

Alderman Ireland say higher pay is needed to encourage more people to enter local politics.

Alderman Meeks agrees. Many can't run for office without considerable loss of income" he says.



Another recommendation would particularly prompt more working people to run on the council" he feels.

Alderman Meeks is even more specific. He hopes to ask city council next year to appoint a citizens committee to review the whole salary question — for council, mayor, boards and commissions.

Now, a self-employed man as council stands to lose much income. As an employee he could even lose his job, he says.

On the average, he figures, being a commissioner calls for about 1,000 hours a year — about half the accepted norm of a full-time job. But, there's also the irregularity of the hours.

"I'm not complaining. I'm just saying the way it is," says Aldermen Corke. "There has to be more recognition to get people for office on a continuing basis."

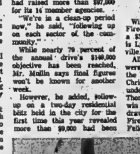
United Way: $97,000

After more than two months of active campaigning, United Community Services director Gordon Mullin said Friday the Belleville United Way drive had raised more than $97,000 for its 14 member agencies.

"We're in a clean-up period now," he said, "following up on each sector of the community."



While nearly 70 percent of the annual drive's $140,000 objective has been reached, Mr. Mullin says final figures won't be known for another week.

However, he added, follow-up on a two-day residential blitz held in the city for the first time this year revealed more than $9,000 had been collected in door-to-door canvassing.

Draw brings $500 Win

All 5,000 tickets in the draw were sold out weeks ago and the proceeds from the annual Christmas gifts for Belleville's underprivileged children. Mr. Thompson was informed of his win Friday night after the draw had been held during the annual Firemen's Ball at the Old Fellows Hall on Bay Drive.

Replacement Arrives

New ferry has arrived at Glenora as replacement for 12-car vessel Quinte. Crewmen inspect new arrival which will go into service next spring on the two-ferry operation to Adolphustown.

Cardinals Get Expo Veteran

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Baseball's winter meetings have ended without fifth usual last-minute scramble to beat the trading deadline because the cutoff for inter-league swaps that came at midnight Friday was only a formality and to trades between the leagues.

When the owners approved far mid-March an additional inter-league trading period that their general managers had requested, the urgency for dealing disappeared.

The spring training inter-league trading dates of March 24-31 will be permanent, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced at the winding of the convention Friday.

Two trades were completed Friday. First baseman-outfielder Ron Fairly moved from Montreal Expos to St. Louis Cardinals for a pair of youngsters—first baseman Ken Reitzel and infielder Rusty Richard. And second baseman Tito Fuentes and pitcher Butch Metzger were sent from San Francisco Giants to San Diego Padres for second baseman Derrel Thomas.

It made the Expos the most active team in the trade mart with four deals at the meetings. All told, major league teams swapped 38 players in 18 deals compared to 56 players in 26 transactions at last year's meetings.

Fairly, 36, hit .265 with 12 homers for the Expos last season and will be used as a pinch hitter and backup first baseman.

Orioles Stay Put

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn has ruled out the possibility that Baltimore Orioles will be shifted to another city next season, even if efforts to sell the American League club to Mary land interests fall through.

Kuhn said in an interview : "I don't see a possible change in franchise shift next season."

Orioles board chairman Jerold Hoffberger has announced he intends to sell the team for $12 million dollars.

Kuhn's comment Friday indicated that should one group of potential buyers headed by director Ralph DeCicco or an other involving former baseball star Bill Veeck fail to acquire the Orioles this winter, the Hoffberger interests would control the club for another year.

But after next year, Kuhn said the franchise could well be switched to another city, perhaps to Washington, Denver or Seattle.

Scouts Tie Flyers 3-3

Canucks Spoil Flames' Party

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Curt Bennett was all set to emerge as the star of Atlanta Flames' match Friday night until Chris Oddleifson and Gerry Meehan of Vancouver Canucks ruined the party.

Bennett scored three goals to lead the Flames to a 4-3 lead after two periods of the National Hockey League game at Vancouver.

But then, Oddleifson, who had snatched Bennett's first goal in the first period, scored another two to open a furious third-period rally that gave the Canucks a 7-6 victory.

In other NHL games, California Golden Seals beat Minnesota North Stars 4-3 and Philadelphia Flyers tied 3-3 with Kansas City Scouts.

The Canucks outshot Atlanta 18-4 in the third-period rally which appeared to founder completely in the period after Oddleifson's two goals tied the score 4-4. Eric Vail scored his 15th goal of the season to put Atlanta back in front 5-4 only 30 seconds later, Gerry Meehan tied it again and added the fifth for Bordeleau and Gerry O'Flaherty sank the Flames.

Minnesota also staged a third-period rally, lockading two goals from Bill Goldsworthy, but the Seals added an empty-net goal to hs losers' stick with 15 ,30 starts this season.

California led 3-0 with second-period goals from Stan Weir and rookie Rick Kehoe before Butch Williams picked up his third goal in two games to give California a 4-3 lead at the end of the third period. Al MacAdam beat Minnesota goalie Gilles LePresti with a shot from the right faceoff circle.

Minnesota scored three times in less than eight minutes— Henry Boucha and Goldsworthy were the marksmen—to cut California's lead to 3-2 but the Seals added when California's Ron Huston scored into an empty net with three seconds left.

At Kansas City, Philadelphia scored twice in the first five minutes and it looked as though the Flyers were headed for a repeat of their 10-0 win over the Scouts in Philadelphia on Sunday.

But Lynn Powis scored late in the first period and Randy Rota got his fifth goal of the season early in the second period to tie the score.

Rota scored his second goal of the night on the power play to move the Scouts into the lead. Reg Leach's second goal of the night and 29th of the season at 12:12 of the third period brought the tie.

Tonight's schedule has New York Rangers at Chicago, Kansas City at New York Islanders, Atlanta at Los Angeles, Pittsburgh at Montreal, Washington at St. Louis and Detroit at Toronto.

Sunday, Montreal visits New York Rangers while Philadelphia are at Philadelphia, St. Louis is at Washington, Pittsburgh at Boston, Vancouver at Detroit, Toronto at Chicago and Minnesota at Buffalo.

Bianchin Recalled

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins said Friday they have recalled left winger Wayne Bianchin from Johnstown and the New York Rangers cas Hockey League for this weekend games in Montreal and Boston.

Bianchin, 21, played 25 games for the Penguins last season, but the Nanaimo, B.C., native suffered a broken neck during the off-season in a surfing accident in Hawaii.

Goalie Haunts Rochester Club

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Werner Rochester goalie Lynn Zimmermann registered his second shutout of the season Friday night as Baltimore Clippers blanked the Americans 3-0 in an American Hockey League game.

Zimmerman, 22, came to the Clippers this year after spending parts of six seasons with Rochester. He made 31 stops Friday night.

The Fort Erie, Ont., native's unbeaten streak made first-period goals by Morris Stefaniw and Jerry Kemp stand up, moving Baltimore into a first-place tie with Richmond Robins in the AHL's Southern Division.

The Clippers and Robins, who formed Syracuse Eagles 5-1, moved one point in front of the Hershey Bears. The North ern Division-leading Providence Reds edged New Haven Nighthawks 3-1 in Friday's other game.

Jim Hrycuik and Larry Pallas each had a goal and two assists for the Robins. Andre Peloffy, Larry Goodenough and Serge Beaudoin were the other Richmond scorers. Norris and Dave Ferguson were the Nighthawks.

At New Haven, Providence goalie Curt Ridley stayed off a closing flurry of shots by the last-place Nighthawks to salve the win for the Reds before a crowd of 3,674.

Jim Reid broke a 3-3 tie with his second goal of the game at 7:03 of the third period, then Terry McKnight scored on a breakaway for second-place Brantford.

In the other league game Friday, Guelph-based Barrie Flyers edged Orillia Terriers 3-2.

Play resumes tonight with Whitby McDonalds travelling to last-place Cambridge Hornets on Sunday, Orillia visits Nepanee and Brantford meets Barrie.

At Brantford, Duffy McCarthy scored playing centre for the McMillan scored the other Brantford goals. Brantford led 2-1 at the end of the first period and 3-2 going into the third.

Jim Smutnorn, Tom Goodfellow and Wayne McConnell scored for Nagasen.

At Orillia, former Terrier Grant Moore, Bill Abbott and Jim Thomson scored for Orillia Flyers.

Saints Alive and Well

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Just a week ago, coach Harry Neale of Minnesota Fighting Saints was complaining that his club was off to a bad start and he didn't know why.

The Saints, World Hockey Association playoff finalists last season, had just beaten Toronto Toros on behalf of last place in the West Division and Neale said: "Maybe this win will get us going."

Friday night, the Saints won their third game after one loss since the Toronto game, beating Winnipeg Jets 4-2.

The Saints narrowly missed taking over third place in the West Division when, in Friday's only other game, Phoenix Roadrunners defeated Edmonton Oilers 3-1 to stay two points ahead of Minnesota.

"We've got our confidence back," said Minnesota's Wayne Connelly who scored once and helped set up two other goals in the match at St. Paul, Minn.

"We should be able to play as well as we did last year and maybe even better from here on in."

The Minnesota defence did a good job in holding off Winnipeg's big shooters, including Bobby Hull.

"We only gave Hull three or four shots and them were from the point on the power play," said Saints goalie Mike Curran. "If we can continue to keep our opponents away from our net we can beat anybody in this league."

Minnesota's Gord Gallant knocked Hull to the ice with a flurry of punches during a first period mixup. "Gallant got in a couple of good shots but it really wasn't much of a fight," said Hull.

Rookie Spring scored twice for the Jets who lost forwards Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg.

Nilsson has a shoulder injury but is expected to be available for Wednesday's game. Hedberg suffered a groin injury.

At Phoenix, third-period goals by Bob Barlow and Robbie Ftorek gave Phoenix the win over Edmonton.

Barlow scored the winning goal from the slot after taking a pass from Dennis Sobchuk from the corner. Ftorek got hung up in the net while play went to the other end of the ice and was credited with a goal when he took a clearing pass and broke in alone against goalie Chris Worthy to score the final goal.

Toronto Club Bows 11-3

Nats Discover Bobcats Have Sharp Claws

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

If the Toronto Young Nationals thought the Belleville Bobcats could be easily intimidated in Friday's Metro Junior B Hockey League game they were sorely mistaken.

The Cats, besides lighting up 11 lights on the scoreboard to the Nats' 3, showed that they could dish it out as well as take it.

"They (Nats) were a completely different team from the other night," explained Bobcat coach Bob Sgro after the game.

"Now there's bound to be fights, but for one player to go out and deliberately try to injure another is senseless," summed up Sgro.

There was a total of four fighting majors handed out to each team with three of those coming in the first period.

The first fight came with little more than two minutes gone.

Toronto's Rob Ciotti after a close call around the Belleville net took out his frustration on the nearest Bellerive uniform. Unfortunately for Ciotti it happened to be Steve Keech.

Both teams played a wide open brand of hockey accounting for several near misses at both ends.

Bobcat defenceman Neil Turner had the best chance for the home team when the Nat's starting goalie Sean Simmons...put the puck right on Turner's stick.

Neil slid the puck within inches of the gaping corner of the visitors' net.

The Toronto team came right back and on the next rush Phil Desjardins combined with Kier Todd and Dave McClintock for their only goal of the period.

The Cats never gave up in pressure on Simmons despite having to keep their heads up for safety's sake.

It finally paid off as Turner made no mistake on his next try. His low shot through a maze of players in front of the net managed to find its way into the corner of the goal.

Steve Keech put the Cats ahead to stay less than a minute later as Bob Thompson shot the puck from behind the Toronto net right to Keech who had Simmons at his mercy.

By the end of the first 20 minutes of play, the Cats had compiled a commanding 4-1 lead.

Team captain Rob Foster had two first period goals for the home side with Thompson and Eric Fewell getting the others to go with the counters by Eric Lund.

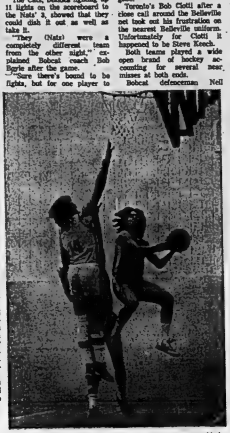
Dan Allin replaced Simmons in the Toronto goal with the end of the first period.

The move did little to help the Nationals as Cats held a 4-1 edge in scoring in the second frame. Scott Lamb, Allan Jeffrey, Paul King and Keech were the marksmen for Belleville in the search. Ciotti replied for the Nats.

The Cats team scored once in the third period. Jeffrey added his second of the night to make it 11-3 and Ron Latka rounded out the game's scoring with Nats' third counter.

And there was another five-minute fighting penalty assessed.

The visitors' captain, Ken MacDonald caught Cats' Foster with a hard slash while attempting to overtake the speedy Belleville winger who had broken into the clear. The blow did little damage but MacDonald, fingered for two minutes, apparently wasn't satisfied.



The Toronto player jumped an unsuspecting Andy Ricketts who promptly slammed his opponent low in the fight which followed.

Cats moved into fourth place with the win, two points back of third place Kingston Voyageurs.

Cats outshot Nats 43-34.

Monday, the Cats are in Toronto for a game with North York.

Durham Lords' forward Daryl Bodasenchuk has to do some fancy sersondary to avoid defender Dave Colmer in last night's Ontario College Athletic Association game at Loyalist. Bodasenchuk was good for 11 points in his team's 70-61 over-time win.

Loyalist Splits

It took the Durham Lords a full overtime period to defeat the Loyalist Lancers Basketball team in Ontario play Friday at Loyalist.

At the end of regulation time the score was tied 59-59.

By the time the smoke cleared the Lancers found themselves on the short end of a 70-64 score.

Loyalist wasted no time in the first half, coming up for an early lead but before the end of the 20 minutes, Durham held a 34-32 lead.

The lead changed hands several times during the course of the final half with neither team able to build up a substantial lead.

Peter Scott led the Loyalist attack with 19 points with Bill Kyle, Dave Colmer and Jim Scottin counting 12 points each.

John Sadanandi was the big gun for the winners picking up a total of 14 points.

Loyalist will now have a short rest with the next competition being January 4 when they will host their fourth annual Invitational Tournament.

Brock Cameron's hockey Lancers kept it from being a losing night on all fronts for Loyalist.

Jack Swan fired the winning goal as Lancers shaded St. Lawrence College of Cornwall 4-3 at Dick Ellis Rink.

Gord Johnston had a goal and two assists for the winners. Dave Heywood and Paul Wartman also checked in with singles.

Jean-Marc Drapeau, George Slofield and Gerry Campeau replied for Cornwall.

Loyalist took four minor penalties to eight for the visitors who also picked up a pair of game misconducts late in the game. The winners held a 36-27 edge in shots on goal.

Nine WFL All-Star Selections

George Reed Keeps Rolling On

TORONTO (CP) — Some football players make an all-star team on performance; others make it on reputation.

Georgia Reed does it on both.

The Saskatchewan Roughriders fullback, who many feel could have been just as great in the National Football League as he is in Canada, has been named to the Western Football Conference all-star team for the ninth time in 10 years.

The selection by the Football Reporters of Canada were announced Friday night.

The reasons for Reed's perennial all-star status are obvious.

While 13 years of hammering away at opposing defences in the Canadian Football League would slow most runners, the 36-year-old rambler from Washington State just gets better.

The six-foot 205-pounder led all rushers in the country again this year—for the sixth time—with 1,467 yards, padding his career total yardage to an all pro record of 14,622 and marking the 10th season in which he has exceeded the 1,000-yard plateau—extending another all-pro record.

Both marks were held previously by fullback Jimmy Brown of the NFL's Cleveland Browns who retired in 1965 to pursue a movie career.

Reed's five touchdowns this season gave him a career total of 136, tying another of Brown's all-pro marks.

Selected to the team were:

OFFENCE

Edmonton Eskimos — Jim Reed, Saskatchewan Roughriders; Leo Harris, British Columbia Lions; Roy Bell, Edmonton.

Centre — Ted Gerela, Calgary Stampeders; Rudy Linterman, Calgary (tied); Tom Scott, Winnipeg Blue Bombers (tied).

Tight End—Tyrone Walls, Edmonton.

Tackles—Charlie Turner, Edmonton; Larry Watkins, Edmonton.

Guards—Curtis Wester, B. C.; Ralph Galloway, Saskatchewan.

Centre— Bob Swift, Winnipeg.

DEFENCE

Ends—George Wells, Saskatchewan; Jim Reighton, Winnipeg.

Tackles — John Helton, Calgary; Garrett Hunsperger, B. C.

Middle Linebacker—Ray Nettles, B. C.

Cowry Linebackers — Pete Wysockie, Saskatchewan; Roger Caron, Calgary.

Defensive Backs—Lorne Richardson, Saskatchewan; Paul Harris, Edmonton; Ted Provost, Saskatchewan; Howard Starks, Calgary.

Reed, Harris and Walls were each named on all but one ballot.

Reed's rushing yardage moved him 2,439 yards ahead of Brown, his closest rival. In addition, he caught 38 passes for another 229 yards, giving him a total offence of 1,696 yards in 1974.

His 2,939 official carries represent another all-pro high as his 123 touchdowns by rushing.

Harris, who ran for 1,229 yards, caught 46 passes for another 523 for a total of 1,771, while Bell received 19 aerials for 190 yards to go with his 1,341-yard rushing total.

Harris also returned 12 kickoffs 280 yards while Bell added another 197 yards on seven kickoff returns.

Wilkinson, rejected by both Toronto Argonauts and later B.C., was an almost unanimous choice at quarterback as he tied his own CFL mark by hitting on 173 of 282 pass attempts for a 45-per-cent average.

The only unanimous choice on defence was Nettles, the outstanding lineman in the country in 1973. This was his third consecutive all-star selection.

Helton earned his two-ninth of being unanimous at tackle for six consecutive seasons.

$2 Million Rookie May Retire from Game

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portland trail Blazer rookie Bill Walton, reported to be unhappy with pro basketball, will meet with the club's executive ice-president Sunday to discuss his future and possibly his retirement from the sport.

Walton, hampered by injuries in his first two months in the National Basketball Association, will meet with Harry Glickman when the latter returns from meetings in New York.

Walton who signed a five-year contract, an estimated $1 million, has missed the Blazers' last five games because of a painful bone spur on his left ankle. He played sparingly in three other games because of a dislocated finger and the flu.

Sam Gilbert, a millionaire contractor who is Walton's personal adviser, said the injury-prone Walton is worried, "thinks that life and living are more important than money."

"Money is the last thing that would be under consideration" in making Walton's decision, Gilbert indicated that Walton's problem is his lack of privacy in the NBA.

SCOTT — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Etta Marie, passed away Dec. 8, 1971.

Sweet is the last but God has ruled,
One of the best that world contained.

Value him while you have,
You'll never know how heartache, till you see his vacant chair.

Opening lead—Q♦

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Both teams in a match reached the good four-spade contract. Each South ducked the first diamond, won the second lead and played one high trump from dummy. Then there was a parting of the ways.

At table one, South played three rounds of clubs, ruffing the third one. West overruffed and led a heart to his partner's ace. East led his last club and West overruffed for the setting trick.

At table two, South played dummy's slightest heart. East took his ace. West signalled with the nine and East led a diamond heart to force dummy. This made it impossible for South to set up dummy's fifth club and get back to cash it for his 10th winner and the board was tied.

The players agreed that the defence at both tables had been superb and that the contract could not have been made.

To agree that the defence was superb, but there was a way to make the contract once the diamond was opened.

South must win that trick. Then he goes right after clubs, but instead of ruffing the third club he discards his losing diamond.

This line makes it impossible for the defence to get two overruffs in clubs. Yet it doesn't prevent declarer from establishing dummy's fifth club and getting there to use it for his last heart discard.

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

Ghostly apparitions have been seen by many notable witnesses — including a British king.

The lore of the sea bristles with stories of phantom ships. The legendary Flying Dutchman is said to be a ghostly vessel doomed to sail the seas until Judgment Day to atone for the sins of its skipper and crew. And many citizens of New Brunswick, will tell you that often, when the moon is full, they've seen a phantom rig just offshore, in flames. The flames burn until the vessel is consumed, only to sail again another night.

One spectacular apparition of a ship was seen and reported by a British monarch.

In 1901, the future King George V was cruising on the HMS Constant. Around 4 a.m. on July 11, the ship was en route from Melbourne to Sydney, Australia.

The sea was as black and smooth as obsidian. The sky was spotted with stars. The young king-to-be was standing on deck enjoying the cool night air.

Suddenly an eerie reddish glow appeared off the port bow. At first it was only a vague, luminous mass; like a glow from some vast fire beneath the horizon.

As the luminous mass came closer, - something indistinct could be made out in the midst brighter and brighter as the distance between it and H.M.S. Constant narrowed.

Then the something in the midst of the glow assumed a definite form and shape. There were masts, sails — it was a sailing ship.

What followed was recounted in a written report by the future king.

"In the midst of the reddish light the masts, spars and sails of a brig two hundred yards distant stood out in strange relief as she came up.

"The lookout reported her as close to the port bow while also the officer of the watch on the bridge clearly saw her.

However, upon investigation there was no vestige or sign of any material ship. The night was clear, the sea calm.

"Thirteen persons altogether saw her, we other ships of the squadron who were sailing on our starboard bow asked whether we had seen the strange red light."

So ends the king-to-be's account.

What was it he and the other sailors saw that night?

Some strange optical illusion, perhaps? The reflection of some distant ship in flames mirrored in the glassy sea?

Or was it something else ... something nameless ... something that boggles the mind?

What ever it was, it was there

Your Sunday and Monday Horoscopes

By BERENICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, December 8

Aries (March 21-April 19) Weigh your words carefully lest you blurt out something that will provoke a member of your family and cause a problem.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) If things don't come easily to you today it's not likely you will be persistent enough to see them through.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You tend to be overly generous today, but it's mostly for show. Just be sure later to back up promises with action.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22) Think you plan to do around the house today will not conform to your schedule. This will make you a trifle crankier than usual.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) There is an acquaintance whose boats you see through, yet tolerate. Avoid him today. You won't be forgiving.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not a good day to discuss money matters, especially with persons with whom you have partnership arrangements.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will be amongst today by the remarks of one who takes credit for something you had a hand in bringing about.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You tend to go to extremes today where generosity is concerned. You will either be too miserly or overly extravagant.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could be talked into something today...against your better judgment. In an old friend because you don't want to disappoint her.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You won't fully develop the potential of situations that come your way today because of your indecisiveness and doubts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) Don't take shortcuts relating to things you work on today. Follow familiar procedure though they may be more time consuming.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) Treat anything in your possession that belongs to others with the same consideration and respect you would if it were your own.

Monday, December 9

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions aren't as stable as they should be at this time with me with whom you have strong emotional ties. Do nothing extreme.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It wouldn't be wise to agree to something you have reservations about particularly if you feel you're being pressured.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is not a good day to experiment with new tools, products, or methods where work is concerned, unless an expert shows you how.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A social situation that you'll be involved in has some unique undercurrents. They will make it an experience you'll long remember.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You don't get the attention and respect you feel you're entitled to from your family today, especially if you're temperamental.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An opportunity that will give you a chance to talk to another on a matter of mutual importance will be coming up suddenly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) For the next few days, conditions will be choice for you in the material arena. Explore anyone that could add to your resources.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You seldom go unnoticed among your peers, but today others will observe something even more dynamic about your personality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21) The full work of yesterday's guile by accident that you'll blame it of value but you won't get know exactly how to use it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) You will do something today that will surprise others. It's a departure from your usual style. It will work out quite well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Some good breaks will be coming your way. Be receptive to them when they come to you. If you're not alert, they'll catch you napping.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A promising idea will start formulating in your mind later in the day, though you won't be able to do much about it till tomorrow.

NEW YORK (CP) — A Canadian who has been "United Nations voice of the air" will shortly be heard no more.

Don Pringle, erstwhile chief of the English-language radio service, deputy chief of all radio services and UN radio-TV commentator, will put down the mike at the end of the year.

Born in Fredericton in 1914 and a graduate in arts from University of New Brunswick in 1935, he spent two years as an announcer at CFNB in his home town.

His connection with CBC began when he went to Ottawa late in 1937. He was afterward with network stations in Toronto and Halifax.

Pringle went back to CBC in Ottawa as chief announcer and program director. In that post he was announcer for the late prime minister Mackenzie King, during the latter years of the Second World War and was also doing special events from Parliament Hill.

Major assignments of the period included production of a special series on post-war readjustment, reporting of news conferences and liaison with the diplomatic corps and various government departments.

In these years Pringle was building a reputation as an accurate reporter—one who could not only quote a speaker's exact words but also catch the mood and general atmosphere in which the words had been uttered, often in no more than a casual comment.

In 1946 he was chosen by the UN Security Council as Canadian commentator on the international radio service.

Eventually he was appointed to the permanent staff of UN and became presentation supervisor of the newly inaugurated UN Radio. Later he held the post of supervisor, North American broadcasts; and chief of English-language Service, UN Radio.

Over the years Pringle had continued the piano training that had begun in St. Paul's United Church choir back in Fredericton. This led to his membership in a group arranging a United Nations Day concert involving the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Soviet pianist Emil Gilels then making his first appearance in the United States. Two days before the concert the sudden illness of Leonard Bernstein, Thomas Beecham left them without a conductor. Somebody had the idea of calling Leonard Bernstein, then touring the southern United States, and asking him to conduct. He consented by long distance phone, then asked about the music.

Pringle recalls the conversation:

"The Tchaikovsky No. 1 Piano Concerto," Bernstein was told.

"No problem there," he said. "What else?"

"The Beethoven Missa Solemnis."

"Haven't seen it in years but I'll look at it."

Bernstein spent the night in a bar in a southern town so he could make an early plane. There he scanned the Missa Solemnis music to a continuous background of honky-tonk piano.

"But when he arrived in New York he knew it by heart," Pringle recalls.

Pringle was radio and TV commentator on the program. Knowing its stiff-hanger background, he had some misgivings.

"But the concert turned out fine."

As a member of the Collegiate Chorale for a number of years, he sang with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic in their concerts at Philharmonic Hall.

Pringle has had a facility of being in the right place at the right time.

Tapped on vacation in Europe in 1956, he was sent as UN liaison officer to Beirut following the rising of the Palestinian refugees. When the U.S. Marines made a landing on the Lebanese coast near Beirut, Pringle and a French cameraman managed a beach-head coverage contrary to orders.

In Beirut, Pringle had a passing acquaintance with Kim Philby. The one-time official of the foreign office was questioned by British security and later granted leave on security and political asylum.

"When I knew Kim Philby in 1956 he seemed the archtypes of the educated Englishman," Pringle recalls.

What does a retired commentator do?

"I don't know. I might go into television," Pringle said. At any rate he will be keeping his Manhattan apartment and he has various artwork "irritations."

Quebec's Labor Troubles Move Into Realm of Public Service

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government, busy during 1974 settling the labor problems of others, may have to spend much of 1975 on problems of its own.

Starting in 1971—are contract negotiations for the province's 230,000 public-service employees and the probability of a revival of the confrontations that produced Canada's largest strike ever by a single group.

The public-service employees have yet to make public what their 1975 contract demands will be. They are employed by the government in administration and legislature offices and in the wide variety of service and other activities in which the government now engages.

The variety of the positions held and the fact that many belonged to different unions led to the formation of the common front of unions in the 1972 negotiations. The Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), the Confederation of National Trade Unions and Quebec Teachers Corp. all joined forces against the government. The three unions have already held preliminary discussions to study revival of the common front.

In 1972 the allied public service workers staged an 11-day strike, openly advocating removal of Quebec's Liberal government, and nearly paralyzing all social, political and economic life here.

The aftermath saw Quebec's three main labor leaders jailed for a year for contempt of court and a deep split in labor ranks over the political aims of the front.

The province's turbulent labor scene was marked in 1974 by a court judgment which may permanently change the balance of power in labor disputes here.

On Sept. 16, Chief Justice Jules Deschenes of Superior Court refused to take action in contempt against 138 striking bus and subway maintenance workers and their union for disobeying a back-to-work court order.

Partly basing his judgment on a legal technicality, the chief justice also held the contempt charges were "inopportune" and misdirected attempts to impose a legal end to a social problem.

"Until the political authorities find appropriate remedies for these social conflicts, I am of the opinion that Superior Court must not lend its authority to the carrying of a mass of citizens by fines and prison," Chief Justice Deschenes ruled.

The strike's illegality was admitted, but clearly the court decided to be the best rather than the punishing arm of the law. The onus was placed on politicians and society to find new rules for today's needs.

The six-week transit strike, which brought all mass transportation to a halt in its last week, ended three days after the ruling when the city agreed to adjust workers' salaries to the cost of living.

The city's 3,400 firemen staged an illegal walkout Oct. 21, leaving citizens virtually unprotected during a weekend that left 175 persons homeless because of fires.

The intervention of Premier Robert Bourassa and the city's grant of additional bonuses ended the strike Nov. 3.

Besides the firemen's dispute, other violence-studded strike which began last Jan. 7 at suburban plants of United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. also drew government intervention.

Deadlocked negotiations resulted in a summons to the company and to Local 510 of the United Auto Workers to explain their positions before a Quebec national assembly labor committee.

The statement was actively valued by the company's apparent reliance on guidance from its American parent, United Aircraft Corp., itself caught in a labor dispute.

Nova Scotia Lone Backer Of Tax Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Mines ministers from across the country buttonholed at federal tax policies Friday but after three hours decided to push the matter to one side.

The sticky question of resource taxation took up the entire morning session of the meeting of federal and provincial mines ministers, with nine of the provinces opposing Ottawa and only Nova Scotia expressing support.

But after failing to reach a consensus on the coming meeting, the ministers moved on to discuss other mineral matters, leaving resource taxation for further examination at a federal-provincial finance ministers meeting here Monday and Tuesday.

"We didn't get any indication that the federal government is willing to soften its tax position," said Elwood Cowley, mines minister for Saskatchewan.

Leo Bernier of Ontario said the nine provinces opposed to Ottawa's tax stand are concerned that future supplies might be affected by current restrictions in exploration.

The federal government is to table, 10 budget will end the right of oil and mining companies to deduct royalty payments to provinces in income tax calculations.

Finance Minister John Turner says the measure is necessary because higher provincial royalties imposed earlier in the year have cut into Ottawa out of the tax field.

The companies say the combined effect of the two governments is to reduce the net profits of their parties, reducing funds for exploration. Some companies already have announced exploration cuts.

William Dickie of Alberta issued another warning at the meeting that the taxation policy is endangering future energy supplies.

But Mines Minister Leonard Pace of Nova Scotia said that while slashing fast on the royalties issue, Ottawa had changed other tax measures to lessen the load on the companies.

"If the provinces are that worried about the health of the industry they should lower their royalties," he said.

Mussolini Approach Employed?

REGINA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau stepped before a friendly audience of fashionable Liberals Friday night to deliver a scathing rebuttal to Premier Allan Blakney's criticism of federal resource taxation policies.

He said the New Democrat premier is trying to divert attention from provincial issues by attacking the federal government—"an old trick of uncertain leaders"—and remarked that former fascist dictator Benito Mussolini followed similar policies when he invaded Ethiopia.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he does not want to get involved in provincial politics but could not let Premier Blakney's assertions go unchallenged.

"I want to set the facts right and put the record straight because if there is a provincial election, I want him to be forced to fight that election on provincial grounds, not on federal grounds."

Governments Save Oil Sands Project

CALGARY (CP) — The federal and Alberta governments have offered to rescue an oil sands project in northeastern Alberta following the withdrawal Friday of Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. (ARCO) from the Syncrude consortium.

But Fred Foyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said oil sands development, "key to Canada's energy self-sufficiency" has been jeopardized by the "short-term, politically-expedient" policies of the two levels of government.

While ARCO announced its withdrawal from Syncrude Canada Ltd., which has been building a 125,000-barrel-a-day plant in the Athabasca oil sands since September, 1970, Home Oil Co. Ltd. said it may not be able to launch its proposed oil sands plant.

ARCO, which owned a 30-per-cent interest in Syncrude, cited rising costs and uncertainty over oil prices as the major reasons for its decision.

Energy Minister Donald MacDonald said in Ottawa that he made a proposal for the federal government to invest in Syncrude to Alberta Mines Minister Bill Dickie, who was attending the federal-provincial mines ministers' meeting.

Mr. Macdonald did not say whether Ottawa intends to pick up the full 30-per-cent interest withdrawn by ARCO. "We talked in general terms and Mr. Dickie said he will discuss the matter with his colleagues."

Premier Peter Lougheed, whose government holds an option through Alberta Energy Co. to buy 30-per-cent interest in Syncrude, said immediate increase in the domestic price of oil, currently at $6.38 a barrel compared to $11.70 for oil exported to the United States, would encourage companies in oil sands development.

Gordon Miniely, Alberta treasurer, said the province may consider taking over ARCO's share of the Syncrude project.

Hydro Hope For Coal Dimmer

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Hydro's hopes of getting more coal from western Canada has been thrown in doubt by federal resource tax policies, Environment Minister Bill Yurko of Alberta said Friday.

Federal policies "have thrown a cloud over the development of power resources in the provinces," Mr. Yurko said following a meeting of federal and provincial mines ministers.

He said the Alberta delegation made it clear at the meeting that unless federal tax policy is changed, "there is no assurance additional coal supplies will be developed for Ontario."

Ontario Hydro now imports about 17 million tons of coal annually from the United States, but provincial officials have said they want to get more supplies from western provinces, lessening their dependence on imports.

Mr. Yurko said a sample shipment of 20,000 tons is being prepared for Ontario Hydro.

Commons Plans Study Into Child Abuse

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons has directed its health and welfare committee to study child abuse and make a thorough report of its findings to the House.

Unanimous approval was given Friday to a private members' motion by Robert Howie (PC—York Sunbury) calling for such an investigation.

"The grim reality of child abuse and the shocking revelations of research in this area must spur us into action," he said. "In the past, Canadian lawmakers have largely ignored this problem."

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said that child protection laws are primarily under provincial jurisdiction.

"Unfortunately, little co-ordinated effort in these areas is visible at the present time," he said.

The federal government should perhaps "take a lead in focusing on the problems of child abuse and then eventually place ourselves out."

Mr. Allmand said a three-man committee in his department has been studying child abuse for several months and a policy paper should be ready soon for presentation to the health and welfare committee.

He suggested that the Commons committee, in the course of its investigation, consider the possibility of launching "a massive public education campaign on child abuse."

Hero's Funeral for Thant Quells Burma Uprising

LONDON (AP) — A threat of a popular uprising in Burma apparently has been quelled by a government promise to grant a hero's funeral for former United Nations secretary-general U Thant, diplomatic sources here say.

The reports said the government of Gen. Ne Win also had decided not to take reprisals against any of an estimated 5,000 students who seized the casket bearing Thant's body during a funeral procession Tuesday.

It was not known when the promised hero's funeral would be held.

Thant, 65, was secretary-general from 1961 to 1971. He died in New York Nov. 25. His remains arrived in Rangoon Sunday and were to have been entombed Thursday night at the city's Kyandaw cemetery.

The London diplomatic reports said the body was taken, with the consent of Thant's family, to Rangoon University, where it lay in state Friday under a vigil by students and Buddhist monks. The students and monks were reported to be demanding a site for Thant "befitting a man of his stature."

The presence in the crowd that took Thant's body of the monks a powerful force in the South Asian Buddhist country, helped avoid a major confrontation between students and the government, the reports said.

Canada Abstains

UN Approves Nationalization

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — An economic charter that would recognize a country's right to nationalize foreign property was approved overwhelmingly Friday by the economic committee of the United Nations General Assembly.

The 115-6 vote made it virtually certain the charter would win final adoption in the assembly.

Canada abstained after Canadian delegate Norman Berlis said Canada supported the charter's basic objectives but disagreed with a number of its provisions.

The United States was one of the six countries opposing the resolution. Earlier Friday, the U.S., already smarting from a series of rebuffs at the current General Assembly session, had denounced UN resolutions as one-sided and unrealistic.

U.S. Ambassador John Scali indicated to the General Assembly the decisions he had labored inside the assembly were to suspend South Africa from its participation in the work of the assembly.

The resolution on nationalizing property was also opposed by five European Common Market countries. Eight other countries, including the four other Common Market members, joined Canada in abstaining.

Nearly 100 developing countries sponsored the charter which is a pet project of President Luis Echeverria of Mexico.

The charter says each state has the right to nationalize foreign property with the payment of appropriate compensation, with any controversy over the amount being settled under the law of the nationalizing state.

Some Western countries object to the idea of setting disputes over pay for nationalized property in accordance with national rather than international law.

Berlis, who serves at Canada's mission to the UN Economic and Social Council, said Canada firmly supported the charter's objectives, namely the formulation of principles and guidelines to enable each international community to establish an equitable distribution of the world's wealth.

But he said the charter would, in effect, give states the right to nationalize foreign property without adequate compensation. Such a principle, he said, means confiscation of property.

Kingston Police to Refuse Order

KINGSTON (CP) — Finlay Smith, president of the Kingston Police Association, said Friday association members will refuse to comply with a sick-leave policy initiated by the city's new police chief.

The policy, which calls for members of the force to visit the homes of officers reporting sick, is among a number of grievances filed by the association against Chief Roland Smith.

Chief Smith declined comment on force morale, saying he had received no official complaint about his new policy.

Constable Smith, said three men have resigned within the last month.

Wilfrid Kealey, deputy police chief, said the number of sick days booked off in November dropped to 39 compared with more than 79 in October.

Chief Smith, who said he himself was visited at home when he booked off sick while a member of the London police department, defended the new policy.

Blacks Unite

Rhodesian Bid For Pact Fails

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Rhodesia's four black nationalist movements have ended years of bitter feuding with an agreement to unite and combine the armed struggle against the Salisbury government.

The announcement of the new united front Sunday followed the failure of three African presidents and the Rhodesian nationalists to reach agreement on a settlement with the Rhodesian government.

Premier Ian Smith's terms were rejected after four days of secret talks and, in their place, the African heads of state and nationalist leaders came up with an agreement to link the rival movements under one leadership for the first time, dedicated to the total liberation of Rhodesia from white minority rule.

The four movements—the Zimbabwe (Rhodesian) African National Union, the Zimbabwe African People's Union, and the Front for the Liberation of Zimbabwe (Frolizi)—agreed to unite under the African National Council, the only legal African organization in Rhodesia.

The "declaration of unity" indicated that the leaders of Rhodesia's black majority were not prepared to compromise over their demand for majority rule and was a blunt answer to both Africa and the Smith government's latest efforts to reach an accommodation.

The agreement was a considerable achievement for President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and his two colleagues, President Nyerere of Tanzania and Sir Seretse Khama of Botswana, despite failure to reach agreement with Smith after several months of secret diplomacy.

The declaration said the leaders of the former rival groups "recognize the inevitability of continued armed struggle and all other forms of struggle until the total liberation of Zimbabwe."

Sources close to the liberation movement said Smith's proposals, rejected by the African leaders on Friday night, proposed only a small increase in black representation in parliament and demanded a ceasefire which would have left the army free to operate. The Rhodesian government also refused to accept majority black representation at a proposed constitutional conference.

Early Vacation

Northern Electric Co. To Close for 3 Weeks

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. officials said today they are extending the plant's normal one-week Christmas holiday shutdown to three weeks.

Milli Duffy, personnel department spokesman, said in an interview approximately 1,000 of the plant's 1,200 workers will be off the job from Dec. 16 to Jan. 2.

Mr. Duffy said workers will receive their 1975 vacation pay during the three-week period.

He said the company is making the move because of a continuing softening in the U.S. market.

Northern Electric laid off 150 employees for an indefinite period Nov. 22. All had been with the company for less than a year.

Greek Vote Is Two to One Against Return to Monarchy

ATHENS (AP) — The Greeks by a vote of more than two to one have rejected the monarchy for the third time in this century, and the government announced today that nationwide elections probably will elect a provisional president this week.

The final official count from Sunday's plebiscite was 3,216,964, or 68.2 per cent, in favor of a republic and 1,440,904 votes, or 30.2 per cent, for the return of the monarchy. Twenty-five per cent of the eligible voters did not vote.

There was no immediate comment on the outcome of the plebiscite from ex-king Constantine, who fled from Greece in 1967 after an abortive attempt to overthrow the military junta that had seized power eight months before. He said shortly before the vote that he wanted to return to "the home of my forefathers whatever the result," but Premier Constantine Caramanlis said Sunday night: "I don't think it would be wise for him to attempt to return in the near future."

Other government sources said the former king would have to relinquish all his royal titles and claims before his return could be considered.

Constantine's reign was short and turbulent. He became king in March 1964 on the death of his father, King Paul. The next year he forced the resignation of elected Premier George Papandreou in a dispute over the appointment of the defence minister, and appointed a succession of premiers of his own choosing. The resulting political chaos generated street riots in Athens which opened the way for the military coup in April 1967.

The government is now expected to turn its attention to the vast royal wealth in Greece, estimated at about $320 million. The junta last year ordered its appropriation and decreed that $4 million compensation would be paid. Most of it consists of palaces, estates, historic jewels and antiques.

Four Children Perish in Fire

SILVER WATER, Ont. (CP) — Four children died in a heavy fire Friday night on the Shabegwaong Indian reserve seven miles north of here. The victims were identified as Anita Cada, four months old, Wilson Jam James Antoine, 3, and Anita Antoine, 1.

Provincial police said Mr. and Mrs. William James Antoine, parents of three of the children, and Samuel Cada, widower and father of Anita, were out when the fire started about 9 p.m.

An overheated wood stove caused the fire. A babysitter escaped the flames which trapped the children and destroyed the home.

Silver Water is 65 miles west of Little Current on Manitoulin Island.

Convulsion In Climate Is Feared

TORONTO (CP) — There is something strange happening to the world's climate and scientists are starting to view it with a sense of urgency, says W. L. Godson of the Atmospheric Environment Service (AES).

Dr. Kenneth Hare, a University of Toronto climatologist, says the concern was triggered by a "conviction in world climate" in 1972.

That was the year weather-related disasters hit many food production regions of the world. Many scientists have expressed fear 1974 will be a repeat of 1972.

In Canada, 1972 was the first year on record when all weather stations in the country reported below-normal average temperatures.

The winter of 1973 also produced record-breaking snowfalls in Whitehorse, Banff and Fredericton.

"It is my strong impression that, at least in the land areas, there has been an increasing trend toward extreme events," Dr. Hare said. "The question is are these things all part of the long-term normal climate, or is this something new—has it shifted into a new phase?" he said.

Between 1880 and 1940, the earth's average surface temperature increased by about .5 degree Celsius. Since then, it has cooled about 2 degrees.

"It could be that the whole thing is a bunch of malarkey, Dr. Hare said "but I think it is real."

Finance Ministers Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial finance ministers will pick up today where nine ministers left off Friday on sharing resource taxes. One finance minister already expects the issue will be passed on unresolved to premiers and the prime minister.

The federal-provincial split on oil revenue is the main hitch in a test case on resource taxes. Several provincial governments are assessing the potential impact of the federal policies on other energy developments.

Two premiers—Dave Barrett of British Columbia and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba—were in attend the two-day meeting of finance ministers.

At the nines ministers meeting, nine lined up against the federal position and only Nova Scotia supported Ottawa.

The nines ministers spent more than three hours on resource taxation Friday and participants later said discussions mainly involved restating their positions.

U.S. Is Hoping for Ceiling On Forces in West Europe

BRUSSELS (AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger said today he hopes the recent U.S.-Soviet decision at the Vladivostok summit to limit Soviet and American nuclear weapons foreshadows a ceiling on forces stationed in Western Europe.

Schlesinger, here for a week of top-level meetings of 15 allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, said it was "a cause of rejoicing" that the Soviets had dropped their insistence on limiting talks on nuclear weapons based in Europe to the United States alone.

If these "forward based systems" are discussed at all, Schlesinger told reporters here, it will be in negotiations in Vienna on mutual force reductions. Representatives of East and West European governments take part in those talks.

Schlesinger said the Soviets have been insisting for some years that the subject of nuclear weapons in Europe be discussed in the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation-SALT talks.

"We may hope that the decision to work out a common ceiling on strategic delivery systems will be a harbinger of a decision to accept a common ceiling with regards to forces in central Europe," he said.

Referring to Britain's new defence plans announced recently, Schlesinger said they were "not necessarily a cause for rejoicing" as they called for a reduction in British global commitments. He used the same expression to describe the planned cut of British naval forces in the Atlantic.

However, he said it was reassuring that Britain declared its intention of maintaining its main force in Europe—the British army of the Rhine based in West Germany.

Schlesinger said he hoped that West European countries will hold their defence spending at the current level at least.

He also hoped that tensions with the Soviet bloc will continue to ease, but he warned that without, balanced forces the security of Western Europe cannot be guaranteed.

Ontario Will Ask for Federal Inquiry into SIU

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is preparing a formal request to the federal government to set up a royal commission to investigate violence in the Seafarers' International Union (SIU), Solicitor-General George Kerr said Sunday.

"The violence, intimidation and hiring-hall procedures of the SIU are so out of hand that we believe only a federal inquiry can clean up the situation," Mr. Kerr said in an interview.

Federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said in an interview televised Sunday that an immediate public inquiry into allegations that the SIU is influencing federal policy through campaign contributions would not be a very dangerous and bad precedent."

However, he said on the CTV program Question Period that he has not ruled out a public inquiry. He noted that the federal government had ordered a full police investigation into charges made by Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature.

Mr. Kerr said he is meeting today with Ontario Attorney-General Robert Welch to draft a formal submission to federal Justice Minister Otto Lang.

The SIU is operated under an "On the Waterfront" Marlon Brando syndrome, and it must be stopped," Mr. Kerr said referring to a movie portraying violence on the New York City waterfront.

However, Mr. Kerr said today that Ontario will not ask for the inquiry to cover allegations that some federal cabinet members are "in the pocket" of the union.

"We haven't any evidence of bribery or corruption of any federal officials," he said.

Pilot Honored

Jim Mariner of the Belleville Flying Club was honored Saturday night with the presentation of a gold watch by Mayor Robin Jeffrey in recognition of his work in being a charter air service to Belleville. The presentation was made at the Christmas party and wings parade of the flying club, held in co-operation with Loyal-Air Ltd.

Icy Roads Blamed

PICTON — Icy road conditions contributed to two accidents in Prince Edward County during the weekend. Saturday, Terry James Ryan, 19, of RR 2, Picton lost control of the '74 pick-up truck he was driving on the Ridge Road, south of Picton, colliding with a fence post and tree. The truck received $1,500 damage. There were no injuries.

Sunday, 40-year-old Ursula Sweeney, RR 1, Ameliasburg lost control of her vehicle on a township road, one mile west of Highway 14, striking a tree. Her vehicle received $1,500 damage. The driver was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with neck and back injuries.

Store Hours Extended

The majority of Belleville's retail outlets will begin Christmas hours Tuesday.

With the exception of a few Independent downtown merchants, all downtown outlets, Belleville's East End Plaza and the Quinte Mall will be open until 9 p.m. The entire downtown section will begin Christmas hours Thursday.

The Quinte Mall is the only shopping area that will remain open this coming Saturday evening. The mall and the east end plaza will both be open the Saturday prior to Christmas.

Marmora Shootout Brings Five Arrests

MARMORA — Provincial police have laid additional charges in connection with the shooting incident in Marmora early Saturday morning.

Police charged Peter Dennis Gale, 21, of Hamilton with discharging a firearm with intent to wound, after, they said, a shotgun was discharged twice on Forsythe St. near the Royal Hotel. Police said four armed men pursued a man westward on Highway 7, forcing him off the road. A shotgun discharged a third time as the car was stopped.

Gale was taken to Belleville General Hospital with undisclosed injuries, admitted and released Saturday afternoon.

Today, police said Gale and four others have charged with dangerous use of a firearm. They are Leo Joseph O'Shea, 26, of RR 1 Springbrook, his brother, Reginald O'Shea, 27 of the same address, Ronald Lloyd Walker, 28 part-owner of the Royal Hotel and James Lawrence Walker, 24, of RR 4, Marmora.

Corporal John Mitchell of the Madoc detachment said shots were fired from both vehicles and — during the incident.

Walton Walker and Reginald O'Shea also have been charged with assault causing bodily harm.

All those charged in the incident will appear provincial court, in Madoc Dec. 17.

Top Trucker Says New Image Needed

"We realize we may never get the public to love us, but we are trying to get them to like us," says the newly-elected president of the Ontario Trucking Association, (ORA), Max Haggarty, president of Lafferty-Smith Express Lines Ltd. here in Belleville.

Mr. Haggarty says, as president, he hopes to clear up misconceptions the general public has of the trucking business.

"We realize there is a lot of house cleaning that has to be done in our business," says Mr. Haggarty who, at 38, becomes the youngest man to head up the association.

Mr. Haggarty was elected president during the recent provincial association's convention in Toronto. He has been secretary of the OTA executive for the last two years.

As president, Mr. Haggarty, who replaces Jack Armstrong, Mel Donnelly, is responsible for overseeing the running of the association which consists of 1,351 companies and about 80,000 truck drivers.

The OTA has launched an extensive public information program to try to explain its activities and the role it plays in removing the frictions between the trucker and the public, particularly the motorist.

"A lot of drivers on the highway see trucks going down the road as ugly heaps of equipment," says the new president.

Mr. Haggarty is also concerned about Sunday driving of trucks. "This seems to be the hottest issue I am opposed to wide-open driving of trucks on Sunday."

Another area of concern is being covered by tarpaulins. He says he thinks they should be covered to protect motorists from spray that may come from the trucks.

A third area is the proposed lower speed limits for trucks from 60 to 55 miles per hour.

"I think the government should enforce the legislation it has at present, such as the 60 miles per hour limit for trucks on the highway, instead of bringing in new legislation. After all what's the sense of changing a law if you aren't enforcing the old one," he said.

Mr. Haggarty born and educated in Wooler, left school at 16 and started in the trucking business working for his father in law.

The business at that time consisted of one piece of equipment. Now there are 200 pieces of equipment in the Haggarty company which takes in three companies, Lafferty-Smith, Haggarty and Canada Transport.

Most municipal candidates, aware of their public image, took down their signs immediately after last week's election, but this one on the marquee of the old Belle theatre is still holding out after a week. Though not required to by law, candidates are advised to tear down their advertising as soon as possible.

Minor Injuries In Three Mishaps

TWEED — Three accidents in the area Sunday resulted in only minor injuries for some of the people involved.

Madoc provincial police were called at 9.30 a.m. in a single-car accident a half mile east of Highway 62, where a Mississauga man had lost control of his car and come to rest against a hydro pole. The driver, Robert Edward Ackerman, 22, received a cut forearm and his father, Clifford Ackerman of Belleville, a scrape on the head. Damage to the car was $450.

Garryll Anderson, 21, of Faraday Township was charged with failing to yield the right of way following a collision at the intersection of Highway 62 and the Ridge Rd. at 11.30 a.m. Mr. Anderson's vehicle was in collision with a vehicle driven by Peter Koolstra, 21, of RR 2, Stirling. Damage to the Koolstra vehicle was $1,000 and to the Anderson vehicle $400.

William Stanley Brooks, 39, of RR 1, Marmora, damaged his car to the extent of $1000, when he went out of control 1.4 miles west of Springbrook on County Rd. 8. The accident occurred at 4.35 p.m

Parade Packs Picton Street

PICTON — More than 40 entries, including six marching bands and five marching groups highlighted this year's Santa Claus parade in Picton Saturday. Sponsored by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, the parade was the largest ever, but parade chairman, Frank Wright, expressed disappointment over the lack of commercial entries.

"We feel this is the only area where we could use more strength in years to come," commented one spokesman for the Chamber.

Commencing at the Picton fairgrounds and completing its route at the Liquor Control Board, Lake St., the parade was led by dignitaries Keith MacDonald, warden of Prince Edward County; Larry Richardson, deputy-reeve of Picton; and James Taylor, MPP for Prince Edward-Lennox.

Six different trophies were awarded this year as follows: Best marching group — Murray Centennial Majorettes of Trenton, Best Band — Kawartha Kavaliers Drum Corps of Lindsay, Best School — Room 2J of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Best Commercial — Ray's Auto Electric, Best Organization — Wellington Lions Club, Best Community Effort — Prince Edward Heights Complex Workshop.

In addition, honorary mention was given Kenie School of Ameliasburg for their Sesame Street float.

Judges of the parade were Joseph Cembal, William Silver and Donald Station.

Santa Claus travelled on a Canadian Forces Base, Trenton final, later appearing at the Picton Home Hardware store to meet the throng of children who were present to take in the parade. Candy for th children was donated by Lake Ontario Cement Ltd.

Most Candidates Prompt in Cleanup

Although candidates are not required by provincial law to take down their signs after a municipal election, they are advised to be order to enhance their public image.

That's the word from Candidates and Electors booklet published by Municipal World prior to each municipal election.

Most candidates in Belleville have taken that advice to heart, but for the past week at least one form of election advertising sign has greeted downtown shoppers from the marquee of the old Belle theatre.

"Billboard signs are down, and I haven't seen any others, but I suppose there might be some still up," said city clerk Earl Dafoe.

He said there have been no complaints yet, but if some signs are still apparent, he might receive some calls.

The Municipal World publication notes certain bylaws and statutory prohibitions may not be applicable to election signs "but against the spirit and difference" on the part of candidates.

Understanding of existing prohibitions and regulations and respect for all matters of environmental concern in the erection of signs, posting of notices and distribution of literature should be considered an imperative," it says,

"Combined with genuine attempts to remove such material of a non-permanent nature following an election this attitude must inevitably enhance a candidate's public image," it points out.

Clerk Dafoe said he is sure if election signs will fall under the proposed sign by-law, which is still being considered but remarked, "I think it's had public relations if people decide to run again."

I would like to thank all those who sent cards and well wishes during my recent illness and take this opportunity to wish everyone of you

Mixed Fortunes

Politics is losing — as well as winning — as some veteran municipal representatives were reminded in the elections just concluded in many parts of Ontario.

There was Pembroke's George Abdallah who lost by one vote to Henry Brown in the Mayoralty race, and there was the mix-up in the Mayoralty count in Windsor, with first one ahead, then another.

In London Mayor Jane Bigsiow was returned, but in Brockville, the only woman on council, Mrs. Frances MacOdrum, was defeated after 13 years in office.

Again in Brockville, the vote saw the election of four new councillors, including educationist and one-time Belleyilian Wilbur Countryman. No stranger to municipal politics, Mr. Countryman ran as a maverick — and in particular, as a critic of the area's noted education director Lloyd Dennis (co-author of the Hall-Dennis education report of a few years ago) switched from third place in the voting in 1972 to head the polls this time around.

Veteran trustee O. E. Keene dropped from first place two years ago to third, behind Maclean and Mrs. Pamela Bliss.

Maclean, regarded as a voice in the wilderness for bringing to the fore shortcomings he believed existed in the county educational system, struck a chord with the electorate on this occasion. Acceptances speeches also indicated that colleagues who had not supported Maclean in the past now acknowledge the need for a re-evaluation of the system.

Levelling Off

There is more legislation in the works governing snowmobiles. That's the word from Queen's Park.

A bill, just introduced, would set the minimum age for driving the machines on public highways at 13, make helmets compulsory, and require quick registration and licensing and testing of drivers.

While all this is happening, it is just possible that snowmobile use is levelling off. What with the pressure on fuel supplies and the high cost of everything else these days, there could be less noise on the trails, not to mention roadways, this winter. Certainly there does not seem to have been any great rush, after the snowfall of recent days.

The heady freedom of the early days of snowmobiling is being overtaken by events of some economic gravity, not to say a new sense of responsibility on both the individual and official level, where the pursuit of this form of winter recreation is concerned.

Humanitarian Work

What an example of selflessness and personal achievement has been set by Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger.

The former Archbishop of Montreal who left that high office several years ago to go to Africa and establish schools for lepers in Cameroon. In all he undertook more than 20 humanitarian projects there, as well as in Canada and Dahomey.

Now Cardinal Leger, a resident of a convent in Lachine for the past seven months, has been named pastor of a parish in a northend suburb...Here he will continue his work of creating the general awareness of the needs of the Third World, assisted by a priest who was his personal secretary before he left for Africa.

Cardinal Leger intends to maintain his links with Africa, although the network of schools he established in Cameroon now function autonomously.

A brother of Canada's Governor-General, who is racing back into his 80's after suffering a stroke some months ago, Cardinal Leger is one of the great humanitarians of our day.

Work Of Missionaries Recalled

Some Memories Of A Canadian Bishop In The Old China

By JOHN D. HARKSON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

In the general enthusiasm about all things related to Old People's Republic — even if we have forgotten or never knew that a special kind of Canadian played a prominent and enlightened role in the "old China", now spoken of only in terms of total opprobium.

Those were the medical missionaries, most of them who are alive now old men and women, whose long and devoted lives in pre-Communist China have been forgotten, also because of the gloried publicity given to Canadian doctor who was not of that class, but served the Communist cause in its dire need.

He was and remains the famous Dr. Norman Bethune, the leading foreign hero of the People's Republic of China, against whom the life and record of other Canadians in China is supposed to dim.

A fine and devoted study which reminds us that famous Canadians served in China long before Dr. Bethune and the arrival of the People's Republic of China, is the new biography of the late Anglican Bishop of Honan, William C. White who died in 1960. It is written by another distinguished Canadian with a long personal experience in the old China.

The book is Bishop in Honan, Mission and Mission in the Life of William C. White. The author is Leslie C. Walmsley who went to China in 1923 under the auspices of the old Methodist Church in Canada which merged into the United Church in 1925 and stayed for 21 years.

Ultimately he became principal of the West China Union University in Chengtu in Szechuan. It was to produce other missionaries, as well as train the sons and daughters of men already serving in China.

Chronologically Bishop White pre-dated the author, though they could have met earlier, since White was consecrated Bishop of Honan in central China in 1908. He relinquished that post to found the new Honan Chinese studies department in the University of Toronto and the establishment of the collection of Chinese art treasures in the Royal Ontario Museum.

As author Walmsley admits, Bishop White was no innovator or progressive in the way other Canadian missionaries in China were to become, but one who was faithful to what is now the old-fashioned and unfairly criticized Christian conviction which is the pervading theme of his day.

Bishop White's memorial, other than the dwindling number of aging Christians in Honan, is the church and prayed with him, has to be the White Gallery in the Royal Ontario Museum and the tradition of Chinese studies which has made the ROM famous throughout the world.

Bishop White had made it famous enough that the Communist Chinese wanted it for their vast exhibition styled, "Archaeological Finds of the People's Republic of China," while they made close the galleries and the Chinese treasures gathered by White, were to be excluded.

This was so successfully done by the ROM, "holding the Museum's intellectual community to ransom" as one Toronto critic put it, that the White Mission Collection was released at the request of the Chinese, the day the Honan Province in which the collection closed in mid-November.

What the book narrates is the story of a devout English youth who came to Canada with the traditionally strong moral purposes of many Victorian young people.

The young priest William White decided he would be in Africa. But fate made it China. No ordinary proselytizer, White learned enough dialectal Chinese from his first three years in Honan Province to produce one of his first scholarly studies of China.

This was a Chinese-English dictionary of the Kiang-Hwai dialect published in 1901, eight years before he was elevated to the Bishop of Honan.

Much of his work would be in that same Central Chinese province of Honan in Kaifeng, the site of the Anglican Cathedral of Honan; and the tiny hospital in Kwaisin which was largely financed by the Women's Auxiliary of the Church which itself often needed financial support.

The Walmsley study of Bishop White is straightforward and loving if not stirring prose reserves the story of a devoted Christian, who was at one and the same time a great scholar and a saint.

Like many of his contemporaries, White was a man who brought out up with the great Victorian conveniences, dangers and purposes, and who left behind knowledge of successful guerrilla warfare?

Further there is little if anything left of all of Christ in the country which is now a mausoleum of Christians still at work in Honan Province. And White's work was enough to make sure a Chinese bishop was elevated in the Chinese dioceses long before the coming of the Communists.

This columnist remembers him, the late and beloved Honan Landall Stuart who preached in our church the one time he visited the tiny hospital at Kwaisin) and the later Honan Bishop Stephen Wang who in the latter years became and shares the hope that a Chinese bishop succeeds Honan.

If not, Bishop White's many scholarly books and essays, including a still classic study of Chinese Art and of the Tombs of Old Loyang," (sounds like Camelot) I have seen, will remain as his monuments.

The books published in the University of Toronto Press.

High Interest Surge Is Benefit To Savers

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The return of interest rates to higher levels may be bad news for borrowers, but gives savers a second chance to cash in on record-high rates.

During much of November, there was something of a bull market in commercial paper and bonds, pushing interest rates down by three-quarters of a percentage point on Canadian bank rate and the chartered banks' prime lending rate both were cut by half a point.

The November boom in debt instruments, however, never seemed enough Government to exert a downward influence on mortgage rates.

And by the beginning of December, the euphoria was gone. Interest rates established again.

One reason: The heavy public purchases of this year's $.75 per cent Canada Savings Bonds. At the end of November, public holdings of CSBs were $6.625-million higher than a year earlier.

Trust-company liquidity has been reduced, as savers switched out of deposit accounts and into higher-yielding CSBs.

As a result, trust companies are all offering higher interest rates on their Guaranteed Investment Certificates.

One riskless way of taking advantage of these high rates, even though you may not have much idle cash, is to borrow against your life-insurance policy—providing that the insurance company can do so.

The first step is to read your life policies closely. Most "whole life" policies issued up until recent months has built in interest at 5 per cent of cash surrender value at interest of six per cent. Some policies can even be higher.

To illustrate, let's say you borrow $1,000 on a policy from the life insurance company at six per cent interest, or $.06 a year.

The proceeds of the loan could be invested in a trust-loan company's GIC paying 11 per cent, for example, for one year.

Your net return: Five per centage points, or $.050 a year for five years.

Remember, too, that the first $1,000 of personal investment income you earn is exempt from income tax. The interest you pay on the insurance company can be deducted from your taxable income.

Although your insurance agent probably stressed the borrowing advantages when selling you the policy years ago, don't expect much encouragement from the insurer when you go to exercise that privilege. The official industry position is that such loans should be used for emergencies.

You will probably be required to pay interest on the amount your beneficiary would receive if you died would naturally be reduced by the amount of the unrepaid loan.

For that reason alone, it is only prudent to invest the proceed of the loan in an ultra-safe form such as a trust-and-loan company's GIC, which is insured by the federal government's Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Are Universities Overstaffed?

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The annual battle with the universities is underway.

Below the great expansion of our Ontario universities began more than a decade ago there has been a running conflict between them and the province over money.

The provinces originally contributed the bulk of the building costs (through the University Aid Corporation).

And recently it has been providing more and more of the operating costs.

The amount of the latter figure has now reached $300-million and is a big drain on the finances of the province.

(In 1973-74 support to universities and related institutions amounted to $302 million).

The government generally has to restrain growth as much as possible and the universities, of course, don't like it.

Growth is measured by telling the universities how much of an increase in spending it will permit each year.

And the issue comes in a head each fall when the allowable ceiling for the coming year is set.

A short while ago this figure was announced by the government says it is an allowable increase of 12-per-cent while the universities claim the effective figure is 7.5-per-cent).

And the protests have been coming from the university governors ever since. Also by the president of the university of Toronto who says the universities will have to run up deficits.

One of the prime issues is just how a university can finance itself from the fees it sets. And in recent talks in France, he said, he was told the ratio varied between one to 100 and one to 150.

Food for thought?

The Trials Of Rep. Wilbur Mills

By BRUCE LEVETT

WASHINGON (CP) — At age 65, when office men are going out with a gold watch and a handshake, one of the most influential men in the House of Representatives is being severely side in humiliation on a tide of reform.

Representative Wilbur Mills (Dem. Ark.) is generally conceded to have handed the reformers—by his involvement with strip dancer Arabella Battistella—the knife they needed to pare away at his personal power and that of his powerful ways and means committee.

Ways and means is the starting point in Congress for all revenue legislation—tax bills, tariffs, social security and medicare.

As Mills put himself into hospital this week, suffering from exhaustion, he could see the first moves against him taking shape.

Mills, through his chairmanship of ways and means, had acquired vast power that many said was sometimes used to obstruct rather than facilitate passage of important legislation.

The Democratic caucus—while Mills visited the Tidal Basin Bombshell in Boston and New York—moved to enlarge the committee to 37 members from 25. This re-has room for new liberal-reformist faces—and dilutes the influence of Mills and his conservative colleagues.

The caucus also took away the ways and means committee power to appoint members to other standing committees.

It was this authority to decide who should serve on what committees that give Mills his greatest influence with other congressmen. Those who were going on, there were signs that Mills stood to lose his chairmanship altogether.

Rumors swirling on Capitol Hill says that if he does not resign, his name just will not be put forward to head the committee in the next session of Congress.

The disruption comes at a bad time for the Democrats. After years of internecine bick-

Diefenbaker Memoirs May Sting Party Braves of 1962-65

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is working at a program to computerize a system for answering written questions in the Commons—an expensive and time-consuming task requiring thousands of man-hours in each session.

The computer system would store replies for repeating as necessary and keep track of such current questions as the size of the meal allowance for "deer" guardians on the Labrador coast of Newfoundlan and the reasons why the meat was cooked, and the vegetables undercooked, on Air Canada flight 964 from Toronto to London, Ont., Nov. 3, 1974.

These inquisition questions have been unanswered for nearly a month. But 35 per cent of the 1,000 questions asked in this session have been answered.

Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, in the Caribbean with a television crew to tape his memoirs for broadcast in the 1983-1965 segment. Sources on hand say he will take no personal opponents, and particularly some within his own party from that era, had "better brace themselves."

The retiring deputy minister of supply, Herb Balls, was one of those senior public servants credited with "translating" the government's policies into practical directives to the letter. When the government changed, he employs to save time by answering the telephone with their names, he claimed.

"Balls," he would say, picking up the phone.

But not all politicians are so succinct. For instance, this one from Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan: "And I want to tell the standing cleer . . . that this is not a ban or an embargo, it is a limitation because I would be because Europe does not allow anyone to bring in any product unless they are using the banned product in the other country where of origin where the product may come from."

That, incidentally, is on tape.

Norman Cafik (L—Ontario) was much more succinct when asked about agriculture. "First, with respect to the crisis in the beef industry in Canada, it is quite evident that we have one."

Since former Social Credit Leader Real Thompson—he was later a Conservative—let Speaker Lucien Lamoureux—a few many of whose magnificent mixed metaphors thrown Thompson's way—have their the Commons heard that "The Americans are out best friends whether we like them or not" or "If this thing catches fire, it will be a conflagration of history."

Or as Trevor Morgan, Conservative member for St. Catharines in the last Parliament, said: "If the Liberals don't move alive today he would burn over his grave."

The closest thing said lately was when Progressive Conservative Finance Minister Stanfield criticized the government's approach to food subsidies.

"That's just simply taking taboos as we've found out in the case of eggs."

As Mr. Whelan has said, it's "waste is blanche."

S. Africa Attracts Tourists

South African Tourist Association.

South Africa expects to host 100,000 visitors in 1975, Dr. Owen, the director of the South African Tourist Corporation, told delegates to the 11th annual African National Tourism Conference here in Johannesburg.

This would compare with 69,176 in 1973, a figure that represented an increase of more than 14 per cent over 1972.

Last year's visitors stayed an average of 18 days and spent a total of about $7 million (South African " rand - (about $560 million).

Two years ago, over-the-border tourists accounted for 80 per cent of South Africa's visitors, Mr. Owen said. Today visitors from overseas countries form almost half the total.

Declaring over-the-border tourism has increased by 85 per cent during the past three years, the number of visitors from overseas has justfied by Conference here in Johannesburg.

The average annual growth during the last five years, Mr. Owen noted, was just under 23 per cent compared with a worldwide average increase in tourism of 9% per cent a year.

Visitors from Canada to South Africa in 1973 totalled 8,030, a total of about 11% more than the 1970 figure of 4,300. Two years ago, fewer than a thousand Canadians visited South Africa.

Good Turnout for Santa's Arrival

TRENTON — Santa Claus ho, ho, ho'd and waved his way into the hearts of thousands of youngsters accompanied by their parents here Saturday.

The occasion was the annual pre-Christmas parade sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce to stimulate shopping interest for Trenton merchants.

Parade chairman Bob Bell described the procession as "the most successful in the Chamber's 18 successive years of sponsorship". Also, he added, it turned out to be the longest due to 72 last-minute entries from Picton.

The 76 separate entries included five bands, numerous floats with themes ranging from the Nativity to the Wizard of Oz, dozens of horses with riders and many more colorful items. The parade took 50 minutes to pass the point where the judges were located on the east side of the river.

Among the officials riding in lead cars were Mayor Ted Patrick, Chamber of Commerce president Barry Hall and Trenton police chief David Saunders. The route they followed started at the Community Gardens, moved to Campbell St. then to Dundas St. across No. 2 highway bridge through the downtown section to disperse on arrival at St. Peter's school on Queen St.

The sponsors praised parade marshal John Kaine and members of the Tryst Valley Five Wailers for providing him with communications to keep the parade's timetable on schedule throughout. Special mention went to Ernie Gautier the administrator of Tryst Valley Lodge. He arranged for accommodations in a car dealer's showroom on the route, so that 39 of the lodge's patients could view the parade in comfort.

Awarded prizes for outstanding entries were : Trenton department of public works, best over-all float (Wizard of Oz); Murray Centennial school, best majorette group; Tryst Valley Lodge, best commercial and industrial entry; Quinte Diabetic Association, best service club entry; Keeler public school (Amelianburg), best school entry; Cameron United Church, best youth group; Miss Susan Tripp, best costumed horse; Miss Monica MacAuley, best parade horse; Geoffery Strong, honorable mention; Bonny Reid, best costumed pony and Cathy Johnson, best parade pony.

Customers Still Prefer Real Christmas Trees

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

Picton — As evergreen forest has branched out overnight at the Hagerman farm on Bloomfield Rd.

About 600 Christmas trees have been hauled from the Lindsay area to Picton for sale during the holiday season.

Merle Hagerman says he has sold Christmas trees annually for about 15 years and reports no drop in sales despite the increasing popularity of the artificial evergreen.

He and his son, Lyle, have discovered customers are split "fifty-fifty" in their choice of trees. Half choose South Pine the remainder spruce. There is also some demand for Balsam.

The Balsam trees are trucked from Palmer Rapids while spruce and pine are obtained from Pontypool near Lindsay.

The trees are cut by the Hagermans from a site specially planted with evergreens intended for Christmas trees.

The cutting period is scheduled close to Christmas except for pines which must be felled before the winter freeze. If cut later, they evergreens will turn yellow.

Mr. Hagerman notes, with proper care, a Christmas pine tree can live indoors for some time. It is important to water it daily as the tree resumes growth when taken indoors and placed in water.

It is not as simple as it once was to obtain good Christmas trees says Mr. Hagerman.

he cost of maintaining and setting these traditional symbols of Christmas is reducing the number grown.

Mr. Hagerman adds in the area where he purchases his trees thousands are gown for sale.

Although the increase in use of artificial trees has not damaged his business there are indication of a backlash.

At the Lindsay tree lot where hundreds of trees usually are shipped out by rail each year there has been no call in 1974 for customary order.

Mr. Hagerman predicts eventually the artificial tree will replace the evergreen.

"But not in my time," he adds.

Until the plastic pine gains supremacy Mr. Hagerman says he will continue to sell his fragrant pines and spruce.

The Real Thing

Plastic pines may have gained in popularity among some shoppers who prefer an artificial Christmas tree but sales still are booming for Merle Hagerman who sells the real thing. He has stocked about 700 trees at his farm near Picton for sale during the holiday season.

Prisoners Present Concert For Families and Friends

The wild, free music of a rock group called Cosmic Roach . . . the exotic patterns of a light show pulsating to the drummer's rhythm, the whistles, clapping and calls of "more" from an audience of men, women and children of every age.

The place . . . Warkworth Institution, near the village of Warkworth, 20 miles north-west of Belleville.

The scene doesn't seem like what you'd imagine takes place in jail, does it?

Well, ordinarily it doesn't. But this occasion was Saturday night's Christmas Concert, performed by prisoners for their families and friends.

Many of the families had been able to travel long distances to the concert through the assistance of Springboard, a fund-raising organization sponsored partly by federal grants and partly by regular prisoners contributions. The money collected by ticket sales and from a donation basket at the concert went directly to Springboard, as well as covering the cost of materials and equipment for the event.

The auditorium was decorated with festive streamers, silvery Christmas trees suspended from the ceiling, and tie-dyed sheets hung like banners. On either side of the stage, large paintings of snowy scenes provided the right wintry atmosphere.

The two-hour concert was a mixed bag of gags, skits and all kinds of music.

In contrast to the hard, driving beat of Cosmic Roach's drums and electric guitars, groups with names like The Left Stage and George and Dessi played harmonicas and acoustic guitars. Some music was composed by the prisoners themselves, with lyrics both ironic and sad, dwelling on memories of (a...) life back home, of the good times to be had "outside."

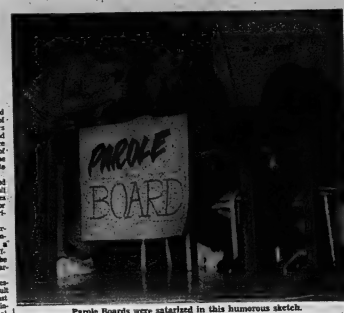
The skits raised gales of laughter from the appreciative audience. Poking fun at prison life, they covered ground originality not humorous.

One, for example, concerned a parole board, made up of sleepy and stupid members with names like Red Neck and Sonny John. By tossing dice they decided on the fate of convicts, who assured the board they were prepared to lead a "better life".

"Look," said one shy and conniving con. "I've got all these certificates from courses at Warkworth. Here's one for plumbing, another for electricity, and tap dancing . . ."

A beauty contest . . . featuring moustached and "well-endowed" contestants . . . and a quartet of striped-suited officer convicts, were among the other events of a skilfully arranged program.

The varied pace and professional quality were the result of weeks of work by the cast and two directors. The administrators of the institution allowed special rehearsal time, and gave assistance and support, but the entire project was the work of the inmate population.



It involved more than 90 men this year, responsible for lights, sound systems, costumes, make-up, scripts and on-stage performance. The reason for the enthusiastic involvement, according to the directors, is that it broke the awful monotony of ordinary prison life.

After the week, the concert was given for an audience of mentally handicapped children from the Trenton area, and for the institution staff and their families. By the final performance Saturday, which was open to the public as well as inmates' relatives, there was a sophisticated and professional quality to much of the show.

"Well, of course we're good," said one musician wryly. "We have lots of time to practice."

Star of Cosmic Roach

'Puppetheatre' Thrills Children

Giggles, chuckles and shrieks of laughter greeted the the Lampoon Puppetheatre Friday afternoon in the Corby Library Art Gallery.

Children ranging in age from four to eight sat on the floor, entranced by the antics of two round-headed hand puppets bobbing above high velvet curtains.

Behind these curtains stood Johan and Alleen Vandergun, puppeteers from Toronto who tour the province with a menagerie of puppets and marionettes, presenting a show called "Clowning Around."

Because there is no dialogue during any of the comic segments, "Clowning Around" is good entertainment for audiences of any age and any language. Recorded street-organ music and floating balloons create a gay mad-cap atmosphere in which anything seems possible.

Paper mice and kings, styrofoam, ball-headed clowns, and creatures invented from inside-out socks are among the Vandergun' creations.

After their performance Friday, the puppeteers showed the older children in the audience techniques for making their own puppets. The younger children were taken to the children's library room, so that their belief in the "magic" of the show wasn't dispelled.

Mr. and Mrs. Vandergun believe a little in the magic of puppets themselves. Although they've presented their "Clowning Around" show more than 250 times, their approach is still fresh.

"We do get a little excited before a performance, even though we're not 'on display' ourselves," says Alison Vandergun.

"Once they're on your hand, the puppets become part of you."

Johan Vandergun, who came to Canada from Holland when he was eight years old, began playing with puppets when he was four. An interior designer by profession, he is now a full-time puppeteer, and with his wife travels to school, libraries and theatres to give shows and puppet workshops.

Sponsored by an "Artists in School" grant, the Vandergun will give workshops throughout Toronto this winter, spreading their knowledge and love of puppets to school teachers and students.

Lampoon Puppet

"The puppet show is such a social thing," Mrs. Vandergun explains.

It can be used to teach as well as entertain, according to the puppeteer, and with "problem children" has provided a way for them to work through their difficulties, by making the puppets act out real-life situations.

Most of "Clowning Around" is scripted by the Vandergun in slapstick farce style. However, in other of their shows they often rework old legends into new life.

Lampoon Puppetheatre has represented Canada in international puppet festivals and most recently held an exhibit of their art at the world-craft festival at the Ontario Science Centre.

The young audience delighted in every move of the clowns.

Floors From Pips

VICTORIA (CP) — The B.C. Development Corp. has leased the Okanagan-based firm Quantum Resources Ltd. for $25,000 to establish an industry for processing apricot stones. A spokesman said the pips would be used as an ingredient in vinyl floor coverings. The fruit kernels until now have been cocidered an agricultural waste product.

Quinte Cuisine

Joan McCulloch, an active community worker, says her Krupnik recipe is good for cold nights and sore throats. A "hot grog" with honey, the recipe is reputedly said to go to the feet and not to the head. Joan and Jim McCulloch, who live at College Street with their two children, are members of a wine makers guild and are active in several other groups like the Belleville Garden Club.

Krupnik

...ons cup dark honey (dark ...wheat)
...ne cup water
...eight cinnamon sticks (one ...nnon)
...1¼ inch piece of vanilla bean, crushed
...¼ whole nutmeg, freshly grated
...six cloves, crushed
...1 cup Vodka
...2 tablespoons fresh grated rind of lemon or orange rind
...two cups vodka

Combine honey and water, add all the ingredients, except the vodka and simmer for five ...or ten minutes. Set aside and let stand in a warm place for 30 minutes. Strain through a cheese cloth, and again bring to a boil. Remove from heat and add the vodka. Place in a heated pitcher, and serve very hot in liqueur glasses or as you would Irish Coffee. I prefer the former method of serving. If not served immediately, the Krupnik may be stored in a bottle and reheated before serving. When re-heating be careful to shake the bottle before pouring it into the pan and also do not allow the Krupnik to boil.

Loss of Hearing Isolates Deaf

"I am just as deaf as I am blind. The problems of deafness are deeper and more complex, if not more important, than those of blindness.

"Deafness is a much, worse misfortune for it means the loss of the most vital stimulus — the sound of the voice that brings language, sets thoughts astir, and keeps us in the intellectual company of man."

—Helen Keller.

Very often people express the thought that it would be worse to be blind than to be deaf. Actually, the opposite is the case. Deafness isolates people.

I recently learned that there are three times as many deaf people in Canada as there are blind. If we have any or hard of hearing people within our acquaintance, make a special effort to help them overcome isolation, remember to speak louder when they are around, and to get their attention and keep it in whatever way suits the situations.

Don't let's lose communication with the good people and the good things which are finding their handicap difficult.

We have a Canadian Hearing Society which does as much as it can to bring our deaf citizens into effective communication with other people, as well as to help them overcome the problem of their handicap frustrating.

Dear Doris: I can sympathize with "No More Hope"; She or her daughter is a girl 15 who was hit by a hit-and-run driver. She was put on a machine in intensive care and the specialists agreed he could not live. When they stopped the machine a piece of my heart stopped too.

This was my happiest child of six. He also loved music and often said our home would be like a morgue without him — which it often is now!

We asked for people who might need his kidneys and we donated both of them and donated his eyes. I thought that since I could not help him some other people might live with his kidneys — which they have done. I miss him like crazy, but you know when the Good Lord wants people to keep things happy up there, He plucks a few and perhaps this lady's daughter was one of them.

Lori— One Precious Soul.

Dear Lori: That's just about the very best way to look at it. Thank you for your sympathy and for writing in. I hope No More Hope will read your message.

Dear Doris: I would like to send you two prayers. I am sure others would like to know of them and my them each day as our family does. One is a prayer to my Guardian Angel and another is a Prayer for Protection of The Family.

May the Good Lord bless you in your work.

A Successful Liver.

Dear Liver: The prayers are lovely, I do get requests, from time to time, for suitable prayers and graces. I will be glad to share those when readers write in for them (enclosing 6¢ cents and a stamped envelope is over cumbersome and handling.

Men Suffer Identity Crisis In Reaction to Women's Lib

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women's liberation is having dramatic effects on the male, says Dr. Marvin Lazerson, social historian in the faculty of education at University of British Columbia.

Men, he said, are going through a series and real identity crisis. And so, consequently, are women.

"I've suddenly discovered that a lot of people are having breakdowns in close relationships, marital and otherwise."

Women feel slighted and men feel women's demands on them are too great.

"The most common demand ces...

...that's hitting almost everyone is the demand that men share the housework and child-raising," said Dr. Lazerson.

"Now, after perhaps 10 years of doing the dishes by herself she's saying 'Help' or 'It's your turn.' Or, more extreme, she's asking him to take time off his work to care for the children."

He said the problem of child-raising raises a working parent's places both the man and the woman in a "terrible bind."

Whether she works or not the woman has been brought up to play the chief role with the child while the man's self-image is wrapped up in job success.

"What's his boss going to say if he takes four days off for the flu?

Sexual demands, even more than work, be continued, put the male under stress.

"If she tells you she wants more from you, you feel inadequate. If she tells you she thinks the double standard stinks, you feel threatened."

Lesbianism is the ultimate threat to the male, said Dr. Lazerson.

Ann Landers

Don't Try to Explain, She Won't Believe You

Dear Ann Landers: Last Saturday four couples were having a party at my home. I went into another friend who was cockeyed drunk. Archie told us he had a terrible fight with his wife and she had left him there. He wanted to let anyone take him home because, he said:

"She'll be waiting up to give me more hell and she'll keep me up all night yelling."

Big hearted me, I gave Archie the key to my apartment. He promised to go to sleep on the couch and be out by 7:30 a.m. (I always carry a second key on a string around my neck in case I lose my purse. I planned to use that key and creep in without disturbing him).

When I arrived home I found Archie asleep in my bed. He had taken his shoes off but had his suit on, also his shirt and necktie. I let him sleep and took the couch myself.

The next morning I got up at 10:30. Archie was still asleep in my bed. I awakened him, gave him some black coffee and sent him on his way. He had a terrific hangover but was very appreciative.

Just as he was leaving (you can imagine how he looked after having slept in his suit) the woman across the hall popped her door to get her Sunday paper. She looked at me and said:

"Well! I never figured you for that kind!"—and bang went her door.

This woman has a big mouth. Should I try to explain the circumstances?—Just the Facts.

Dear M.: "He who excuses himself accuses himself." She probably wouldn't believe you anyway.

From now on, let one of the fellows give his key to drunken friends who have fights with their wives.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 30 and was petitioned by my wife to get a divorce because I'm a homosexual. We are now separated. I love it here and I want to stay.

The problem: My wife spewed some charge against me without my knowledge. The creditors are hounding me. I work in a large office for a modest salary and I don't know what to do.

I'm afraid these people who want their money will ruin my reputation with the Immigration service. They can also hurt me at my place of employment. Please advise.—Gray Matter.

Dear G.M.: Tell your boss of your problem at once. If there is an attorney in your office he will be able to counsel you. If not, contact Legal Aid as well as the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Dear Ann Landers: Please accept one more letter about the 15-year-old kid who objected to taking gym showers with other boys. I agreed with you when you said there must be something wrong with the boy. A subsequent letter said the advice did not apply to girls. Why not?

I have raised my daughters to be ashamed of their bodies, but, isn't something also wrong with a 15-year-old girl who balks at taking a shower in front of other girls?

Please hurry your answer. I am.—Upset Mother.

Dear U.M.: In our culture girls are reared to be more modest about their bodies. For example, in many clubs males swim in the nude. Not so with women's clubs!

Another factor is that the body changes in young girls are much more noticeable, than in young boys. This could make a difference to the girl who is over (or under) developed.

Knickers—New Trend For Fashionable Men

TORONTO (CP) — British fashion designer Hardy Amies predicts the fashion-conscious male's wardrobe soon will include knickers, available in flannel and tweed, with a matching jacket styled like a sports coat but shed four inches longer.

Mr. Amies was the designer who killed North America's Ivy League look 10 years ago by putting padded shoulders, pinched waists and backing the male under stress.

Mr. Amies warned buyers and retailers at a preview of his ready-to-wear line in Toronto that the knicker-suit would require a color-coordinated shirt, matching socks and sweater and a pair of special brogues with modified platform soles and heels about 1¼ inches high.

Other design changes include vests or waistcoats which will be three inches shorter and flared pants, will be a modified version of Oxford bags with wide, flapping flannels of the 1920s and 1930s, complete with fuck-pleats on the waist and cuffs at the bottom.

TORONTO (CP) — The general manager of the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO) says he is optimistic that a strike by the association can be averted because of a recent provincial government offer.

G. G. Norman said the union will modify its original demand for a 61-per-cent wage increase when it meets with provincial government negotiators today.

He described the government offer of increases ranging from 7 to 21 per cent in one year as fight U.S. aggression without an army."

SIU Head Denies Referring to Munro

TORONTO (CP) — Roman Gralewicz, presiding of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) in Canada, Sunday denied telling a union meeting that Edward Lober Minister John Munro supported the SIU.

Mr. Gralewicz was interviewed from Montreal on the CTV network's W-5 program.

Earlier in the program, Edward Deveraux, a disident SIU member, said Mr. Gralewicz told a union meeting in Toronto last January that the SIU is its tough bargaining stance, had the support of the Liberal party and Mr. Munro.

Mr. Deveraux also said a senior SIU executive told him last summer that Mr. Munro is "in our pocket."

Mr. Gralewicz said the charges was "an outright lie."

He said the SIU "never expected anything from anyone" when it donated money to political campaigns.

Mr. Gralewicz said the union supported Mr. Munro and Finance Minister John Turner because they were "on the same wavelengths as the sailors of Canada."

Allmand Says Probe Would Set Precedent

OTTAWA (CP) — An immediate public inquiry into allegations that the Seafarers' International Union was influencing federal government policy through campaign contributions would set "a very dangerous and bad precedent," Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says.

"I find it a very dangerous precedent if a person can get up . . . and make wild charges with insinuations and innuendo, the press builds them up, there are a lot of questions in the House of Commons and each time that's done, we have to have a public inquiry," Mr. Allmand said.

He made his comments in an interview taped Friday for broadcast Sunday on the CTV program Question Period.

Mr. Allmand said he hadn't ruled out a public inquiry.

He reiterated, however, that the government responded quickly to charges by Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature, by ordering a full police investigation.

Junior-Senior Sweep a First

Twin COSSA Crowns Go to Nicholson

LAKEFIELD (Special) — Nicholson Catholic College of Belleville came up with a first here Saturday, capturing both junior and senior Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association A titles in girls' basketball.

It was a repeat win for the Nicholson seniors who took the honors in 1973 but the juniors' success made it the first time in the school's history that both crowns have been taken the same year.

And the juniors had to do it the hard way, coming from behind to trip Chatham Catholic High School 34-18 in the final. The Chatham school led 14-9 at the half but with Cathy Collins hitting for some key baskets in the second half, Nicholson poured it on to outscore their opponents 8-2 in each of the third and fourth quarters.

Final score was 37-34 in favor of Nicholson romp over Bancroft in the semi-final.

Cathy Collins and Jennifer Bennett each threw in eight points for Gary Duggan's junior Nichs in the final. Francis Fraser had four points, Jane Letherby three and Kim Dustin, one.

In the semi-final, it was Collins with nine, Fraser, eight; Letersky, seven; Barrett, four; Marg Ireland, four; Mary Wells, three and Janet March, two.

Other members of the championship team are Karen Brooks, Cindy Rawson and Liz Short.

On the regular season, the Nichs led the Eastern Division or the Bay of Quinte League with a 9-1 record.

Oshawa Catholic High School was also the loser in the senior final. Carol Casey's Nichs led all the way in this one, retaining their title with a 44-34 victory.

Joanne Garvin was the top shooter for Nichs with 16 points Roseanne Coughlin connected for 10 and Jeanne Hurley had nine. Clicking for five points was Teresa Ramkay while Cathy Morrison and Maureen Garvin each had two.

Fenelon Falls fell 44-20 in the semi-final. Roseanne Coughlin had a great game, hitting for 20 points. Jeanne Hurley and Joanne Garvin had nine each while Kate O'Connor and Cathy Morrison supplied four points.

BCI Juniors Champs

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — The Belleville Collegiate Junior girls' basketball team made a clean sweep here on the weekend picking up their third Central Ontario Secondary School Association title in six years.

"They played their best game ever," was winning coach Sue Dewar's assessment following the win over Lindsay High School. BCI held on for a 35-25 win in the final.

"I think the girls worked too hard all year to blow this one," continued the coach.

As the score would indicate, it was not a wide open match. At the end of the first quarter Lindsay held only a 5-0 lead.

"We couldn't buy a basket in the first half," noted Mrs. Davis.

"We outplayed them, but the ball just wouldn't go in."

By the end of the first half BCI had fought back managing a slim 13-13 lead going into the second half.

The BCI coach was impressed with Lindsay's zone defence which at times appeared virtually impenetrable forcing long shots from the BCI squad.

Anne Dodson and Kerry Ryckman came up with impressive performances for the Belleville playing "just good basketball" according to the coach.

The eventual winners were able to hang on in the last minutes for the win and COSSA trophy.

BCI earlier in the day shot a 44-19 win from Cobourg-West in a game that Sue claimed as a "scream". The win earned BCI the right to move into the finals against Lindsay.

The only other area team at the competition were the Bayside Senior girls.

Bayside lost out in their first game against Adam Scott by a close score of 36-34. This advanced Scott to the senior A's against The Thomas A Stewart. Scott continued its winning ways in the final, taking the championship game 34-29 over Stewart.

Quinte and BCI Win

Lisgar Shaded Twice

Ottawa's Lisgar Secondary School came to Belleville with a phenomenal 32- game win streak, but left Saturday's meeting on a two-game losing streak.

Lisgar lost 57-56 to BCI and 47-46 to Quinte in two exhibition basketball games played on the weekend. Saturday's action came in a round robin tournament at Quinte Secondary.

BCI and the Saints matched their skills against Lisgar and Dresden (a squad from Western Ontario). Dresden also lost both of their games to the Belleville schools. BCI won their contest against the Western Ontario school 73-49 and Quinte won 61-30.

Lisgar's winning streak covered the better part of two seasons and included the Ontario Secondary School Athletic Association's AAA championship. Both BCI and Quinte participate in AA competition — a step down from the Ottawa school's class.

BCI came back from a 19 point first quarter deficit to earn the victory over the Ottawans opponents. With three minutes left in the game the local school was seven points up. BCI from the ball and forced Lisgar into three fouls as the Ottawa squad panicked for ball control.

All three, free shots were missed and Lisgar closed the gap to lost one point. That was all the visitors could manage.

Veteran Larry Wilson led the BCI attack with 20 points and 13 rebounds. Brian Bell scored 16 and Gary Donavan dumped in 10.

Bob Sebera was tops for Lisgar with 18.

In the next game, Quinte played Dresden. The Western squad was no match for the Belleville crew as they lost by over 30 points.

A balanced Quinte attack was led by Steve Hale with 11 points, Rick Culkin and Pete Vos, 10 each and Ron Crook and Bibring Wilson with eight each.

Jim Kerr got nine points to lead Dresden.

Following a three hour break, Dresden came back to try to even their record with a game against BCI. Once again the visitors were outclassed, this time by nearly 30 points.

Larry Wilson was tops again with 17, followed by Brian Bell with 12 and Gary Donavan with 11. Larry Savage was next with eight.

Kerr was top gunner for Dresden with 20 points.

The final game of the competition was just as exciting as the rest.

The Saints' Rick Bradford gave Quinte their margin of victory on a foul shot with 12 seconds remaining in the game. It was the second time in a week that Bradford has come through with the winning points for the Saints in pressure situations.

Steve Hale and Steve McCracken were also outstanding in the one-point win. Hale hooped 18 points and hauled down many important rebounds. McCracken scored 14 points as well as holding Lisgar's star guard, Pat Sloan, to just 10.

Other exhibition series had been planned for this weekend at Centennial Secondary, but it cancelled because of the approaching holiday season.

It is rescheduled for sometime in February.

Belleville Teams Get Win and Tie

TRENTON — Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA teams from Belleville took three of a possible four points in a pair of exhibition matches with Trenton AA teams on the weekend.

Playing at the Community Gardens here, Trenton Major Bantams tied with 40 seconds to play to earn a 7-7 draw Sunday with Belleville Kinsmen. Saturday, Belleville Rollins edged past Trenton Flyers 5-4 in Prewes Major action.

Sunday's Bantam contest was a chippy go all the way through. Players on both sides were guilty of carrying on a battle of elbows, high sticks and all the other infractions hockey can do without.

And to the matters were, the officiating left a lot to be desired.

Trenton had goaltender Mike Flower on the bench in favor of an extra attacker in the last minute of play after the move paid off when Andy Klemencic beat Gary Clapp with the tying goal. Kinsmen's Hugh Cochrane watched from the penalty box.

Klemnec had a 3-0 lead with play in the second period but the home team battled back to make a game of it.

Danny Cook was a three-goal shooter for the Belleville squad. Danny Duffy fired a pair with singles for Hugh Graham and Gary Frederick.

Klemencic was Trenton's top producer, adding a pair of assists to go with a brace of goals. Dennis Hamilton and John Webb were right in step with two goals and an assist each. Chris Walsh had the other goal. Centre Brian Hanson was held off the scoresheet but helped himself to three assists.

Belleville took eight of the 17 minor penalties and also drew a five minute high sticking sentence and a misconduct.

Saturday Rollins Majors and Trenton Peewee Flyers gave most of their scoring for the third period.

Rollins scored the only goal of the first period and Flyers levelled with the second frame's lone counter.

In the third, Rollins held a 4-3 edge in the scoring, putting three consecutive goals in array. It was after Trenton had opened up a 3-2 lead in the early going of the final frame.

Five players shared the winners' goals. Greg Horwood, Jamie Robertson, Tom Spencer, Tony Parks and Jon Corbyn were the marksmen.

Marko Turcotte was a two-goal myo for Trenton. Circles went to Mark Tice and Doug Bald.

Chargers Top Albert

Centennial Secondary School swept a pair of Bay of Quinte High School Basketball League games from Albert College, Friday.

Chargers took the senior match 53-23 and followed up with a 68-29 win in the junior game.

Dunaje Dejong was Chargers' leader in the senior contest. His rebounding was a feature of the Centennial team's effort. Dejong also found time to throw in 13 points. Doug Yates was top scorer with 15 points. Brian Towers connected for 10.

Chu led Albert, behind 22-8 at the half, with seven points. Chan and Gray each clicked for six points.

Making a fast break pay dividends, the junior Chargers' kept Albert in check with a ball-court press. Centennial owned a 33-18 lead at half time.

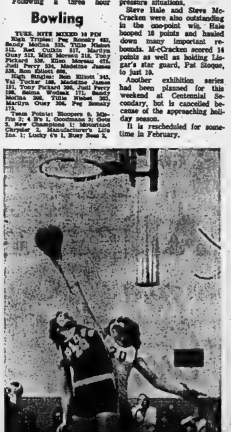
Art Pulz was the game's top scorer, leading Chargers' attack with 14 points. Jim Graham bit for 13 while John Hywell, Bob Thompson, Dennis Kamada and Doug Cadwell each added eight points to the cause.

Tynes was a bright spot for Albert, Ile and Bevittel each supplied eight points while Cooke was good for nine.

A and J Rolling

A and J Restaurant (formerly the Combines) of the Belleville Broomball League continued their unbeaten streak on the weekend with a 10-6 win over Ark Tool.

Kevin Allen and Yvon Lemerc were the big guns for the winners as both players picked up three goals for their efforts.



Ron Canonee had a pair for A and J while Dave Marsh and Mike Paquette each firing singles.

Norther Electric ran into some more trouble on Sunday losing to Golden Mile Restaurant by a 3-2 score.

Northern Electric is now winless in 9 last four outings.

Gary Donavan had to make some good saves during the course of the game to earn the shutout for his team.

Quinte Secondary School's Steve Hale comes up with the "big reach" to stop Ottawa Lisgar's high scoring forward Bob Sebera in Saturday's tournament at Quinte. Hale led his senior Saints to a 47-46 upset over last years all Ontario champs.

Dixie Lee Wins 7-4

Brian Clarey fired two goals to pace Dixie Lee past Stirling Lions' Senior A Belleville Minor Hockey Association Novice house league action.

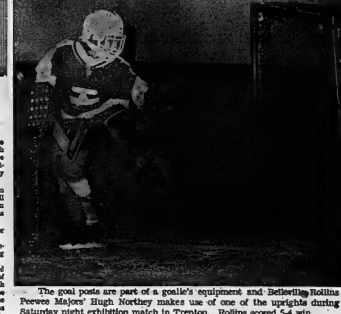
Jim Wright was Manpower's big producer in a win over Local 1000, putting three goals.

Sparked by Jimmy Crouchman's two goals, Beaver Lumber tripped Belleville Credit Union 5-4. John Weller had three goals and Jeff Plane supplied a pair in Whitley Rentals' 6-1 defeat of Uniroyal.

Sage One-man Gang

Grant Sage did most of the work in Tuesday's Northern Electric Hockey League game between the Bearcats and the Falcons.

Sage picked up four goals and assisted on the other two as the Bearcats rolled over the Falcons by a 6-3 margin.



Rod Salter scored the other two for Bearcats.

The game saw a total of 21 minor penalties and one major handed out to the teams.

Eric Tugnotta spoiled the Cats' chances for a shutout as he and Bob and Barry Brownlee combined for the goal.

In the only other game played, Bob Bailley with a pair of goals led the Yankees to a 4-3 win over the Rebels. Wayne Brown and Les Johnston added singles to round out the scoring.

Rich Rosebomb and Tom MacDonald were the marksmen for the Rebels.

The goal posts are part of a goalie's equipment and Belleville Rollins Peewee Majors' Hugh Northey makes use of one of the uprights during Saturday night exhibition match in Trenton. Rollins scored 5-4 win.

Meet North York

4 Straight Cats' Aim

When the Belleville Bobcats travel to Victoria Park Arena tonight it will be the strongest and contingent pot together all season.

Belleville will have both Ita first two starting lines intact.

Grant Goegan, Jim Richardson and Rob Foster comprise one line. During Friday's 11-3 whitewash of the Toronto Nats both Goegan and Richardson were missing. They are the Cats highest scorers.

While those three make up the veteran list, all three members of the club will also be travelling to North York: Scott Samis, Al Sidney and Eric Powell are all available for the 8.30 p.m. game.

Steve Roach, centre for the third, this regular wingers haven't as yet been selected) will also be making the trip

While the Cats will have their most complete lineup since the opening game of the season they may have their work cut out for them against the North Yorkmen.

North York is shaping to extend an unbeaten streak, but so is North York. Belleville wants to make it three in a row while North York is looking to make it four in a row without a loss.

Should the Cats win tonight it will make their season total 10-10-1 (won-lost-tied) and put them in second spot. They haven't had their heads that far above water since the first few games of the year.

Also should the Cats win it will give them five wins in their last six starts. That ties is their best since the first at the year in straight what would be their highest number of wins in any consecutive number of starts.

Belleville will face the North Yorkmen in Toronto on Friday at 9 p.m. at the Mimmold Arena.

3rd Period Comeback Good for 7-7 Draw

Belleville's entry in the Quinte and District Bench Hockey League had to overcome a 5-2 deficit going into the final period, including a last minute goal to earn a 7-7 tie, with Kingston.

Stephen Graham and Peter Hall each scored two goals for Belleville with Ron McIlvrey, Rod Hall and Steve Campbell each adding one.

Ken Lynch had a pair for Kingston with Bob Nolan, Bob Eaton, Stew Sears Danny Kennedy and Ron Mack adding singles.

In the other game played, Frankford travelled to Napanee to play Centennial.

The trip proved to be a successful venture for Frankford as they returned home with a 7-4 margin.

Gary Bromley – Shutout Comes Easy

French Connection On Way to Records

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buffalo's French Connection line appears to be on its way to setting a few National Hockey League scoring records and could lead the Sabres to a team record at the same time.

The three French Connection members—Gil Perreault, Rene Robert and Rick Martin—each scored his 30th goal of the season as Buffalo's 6-4 victory Sunday over Minnesota North Stars.

That gives the trio 40 goals in 29 games this season, but a look at the line's more recent production gives a better indication of the hot pace they're setting.

In the last 17 games, the Sabres line has scored 44 goals—17 by Robert, 15 by Martin and 12 by Perreault. Continuing that pace through this season's 80-game schedule could easily put them beyond the season record of 140 goals set by the Phil Esposito-Ken Hodge-Wayne Cashman line of Boston Bruins in 1970-71.

Meanwhile, the Sunday victory was Buffalo's 19th in a row on home ice and extended the Sabres' unbeaten string to 11 games, a club record.

In other games Sunday, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-1, Detroit Red Wings upset Vancouver Canucks 4-3, Boston beat Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2, St. Louis Blues defeated Washington Capitals 3-1, Philadelphia Flyers beat New York Islanders 3-2 and Montreal Canadiens 8-3 with New York Rangers.

Saturday – the Rangers beat Chicago 7-4, the Islanders defeated Kansas City Scouts 4-1, Los Angeles Kings defeated Atlanta Flames 6-2, Montreal beat Pittsburgh 9-5, St. Louis whipped Washington 8-2 and Detroit tied Toronto 3-3.

Rookie goalie Gary Bromley recorded his 14th triumph and second shutout of the season for Buffalo. He only faced 14 shots Sunday.

At Chicago, Errol Thompson scored two third-period goals for the second night in a row to rally the Leafs.

The Hawks took a 1-0 lead in the second period on a goal by Cliff Koroll, but Norm Ullman tied it early in the third period and Thompson followed with the go-ahead marker and his clincher before Blaine Stoughton hit another on an empty net in the final minute.

At Boston, the Bruins gained the victory in the third period when defenceman Bobby Orr got his 18th goal of the season to break a 3-3 deadlock.

Larry Robinson's 40-foot slap shot early in the final period at New York gave Montreal the tie with the Rangers.

Washington, playing before a home crowd of 16,315, equaled St. Louis' 23 shots on goal but lin the Smythe Division.

Clippers Open Four-point Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Uncertainty about the future didn't hold back Baltimore Clippers over the weekend.

In the midst of rumors that the World Hockey Association might invade their territory, the Clippers used a pair of weekend wins to take command of the American Hockey League's Southern Division.

The Clippers blasted Springfield Kings 4-0 Saturday night, then downed Syracuse Eagles 5-3 Sunday night to open a four-point lead over second place Richmond Robins in the Southern Division.

Marc Dufour, Howie Menard, Kent Douglas, Dave Rousseau and Morris Stefaniw scored a goal each for the Clippers against Syracuse. Baltimore goalie Lynn Zimmerman, who recorded his second shutout in a row Saturday, had 29 saves in Sunday's game.

Dick Sarrasin, Joe Noris and Allen Rycroft were the dynamic scorers.

Clippers reports last week that Chicago Cologars of the WHA would be sold to a Maryland group and moved to Baltimore. Cougar officials denied the reports, but they persisted.

In Sunday's other games Providence Reds edged Nova Scotia Voyageurs 4-3, New Haven Nighthawks beat Springfield 6-1 and Rochester Americans edged Richmond 3-1.

Virginia Red Wings nudged Richmond 5-4 and Rochester downed Hershey Bears 4-2 in Saturday's other games.

Blazers Are on the Move

Crozier Puts Heart into It

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Considering the way Vancouver Blazers have been moving lately, you might expect coach Joe Crozier to assume a more relaxed attitude. Such is not the case.

"My heart is not as good as it used to be," Crozier said Sunday after Vancouver defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints for the Blazers' fifth win in their last six World Hockey Association games.

"When I'm behind the bench, I'm making saves for the goalie, shooting faceoffs and backchecking."

Even if Crozier can't relax, the record is improving for the Blazers who had only three wins in 13 games until their recent six-game upsurge that has catapulted Vancouver into a tie with Quebec Nordiques for second place behind Indianapolis in the Western Division.

In other WHA games Sunday, Quebec Nordiques edged Houston Aeros 3-1, Edmonton Oilers blanked Michigan Stags 7-0, Toronto beat Phoenix Roadrunners 5-2, Winnipeg Jets defeated Chicago Cougars 5-3 and Indianapolis Racers beat San Diego Mariners 3-1.

Saturday, the Blazers beat Michigan 4-2, Chicago whipped Toronto 8-5, New England shaded Indianapolis 6-5 and Cleveland Crusaders beat San Diego 3-1.

The Blazers had to come from behind a 3-0 deficit with three second-period goals by Bryan Campbell, Danny Lawson and Jimmy Jones for the win over Minnesota.

Despite outshooting the Saints 15-5 in the third period, the Blazers got only one more goal by Rob Walton.

Norris Seaulin scored once and helped set up another goal for Winnipeg in the second period as the Jets padded a 2-1 first-period lead and went on to beat Chicago.

The Jets outshot the Cougars 14-5 in the third period when goalie Joe Daley had to be sharp in the third period when Chicago surged back with an 18-6 advantage in shots.

Alain Quesbo, Jean Nordiquet trailed Houston 1-0 until third-period goals by Michel Plasse and Andre Hinse gave them the

Traffic Jam in CJHL

But even though they have a three-point edge on Rockland Nationals, there still are only seven points between the first and fifth-placed teams in the six-team circuit.

Only Brockville Warriors, losers 8-3 Saturday to Gloucester Rangers, are outside this tight knot.

The win started a big weekend for Gloucester, which defeated Rockland 5-3 Sunday while the Kings were battering Nepean Raiders 9-5.

The Raiders also lost Saturday, 5-3 to Smiths Falls Bears.

The weekend action left Rockland and Smiths Falls with 25 and 24 points respectively and Nepean and Gloucester tied with 21. Pembroke leads with 28 and Brockville trails with 15.
